Opioid Deaths Closing in on Prior Years

By Guy Leonard Staff Writer

The latest figures from both the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office and the Leonardtown barrack of the Maryland State Police show there have been 26 opioid related deaths so far this year as of the beginning of November.

The most recent number is just one fatality away from 2018's final tally and closing in on the all-time high of 33 in 2017.

There were just 13 opioid related deaths in 2016 in St. Mary's County.

Of all of the opioid-related deaths in 2018 and 2017, the vast majority, about three-quarters, were due to fentanyl overdoses.

Fentanyl, a synthetic opiate used to treat pain for seriously ill patients, is 50 to 100 times more powerful than heroin.

Worse, public health officials have said, is that illicitly manufactured fentanyl is often cut with other drugs or contains impurities that can make it even more deadly.

Public health officials were encouraged by the small drop in opioid deaths from 2017 to 2018 and had hoped the trend would continue for this year.

Dr. Meena Brewster, head of the county's health department, said the number her office has is slightly less than that from law enforcement, 24 deaths, but the number is still high.

"These numbers can change," Brewster said, noting that the exact cause of death can turn out to be something other than originally thought upon further review.

"The trend is still high," Brewster

Several years ago, when fentanyl began to rise as a powerful street drug, there were warnings that other common drugs were laced with it, making dangerous drugs even more potentially lethal.

Those warnings are now coming to fruition, Brewster said, particularly finding cocaine laced with fentanyl.

"Now it's the dominant trend," Brewster said. "Some people don't realize their cocaine is laced with fentanyl and it's killing them."

The county's chief health officer said her agency is now focusing on reaching out to those using cocaine to warn them of the dangers of continuing their addiction.

She feared that more drugs commonly found on the street would be laced with fentanyl.

The county health officer wants to proliferate Naloxone in the community to continue the fight against deadly opioid overdoses.

"All of these street drugs are getting laced with fentanyl," Brewster said. "You can pretty much assume fentanyl is in the cocaine supply.

"That's scary."

Part of the outreach to combat the latest trend involving fentanyl and cocaine is providing training for Naloxone as well as kits of the anti-overdose medication to an many people as possible.

"We need to get Naloxone to everyone," Brewster said. "Everyone who uses drugs or those who are connected to someone using drugs."

Commissioners Compromise on Library Security Funding

Commissioner Michael Hewitt

By Guy Leonard Staff Writer

After a closed-door executive session Tuesday, the Commissioners of St. Mary's County voted to move $4,000 from their reserve funds into the budget for the county library system for safety and security purposes.

The move comes months after the commissioners moved about $2,400 from the library budget to pay for sheriff's deputies who provided security at a Drag Queen Story Hour at the Lexington Park Library June 23.

Commissioner John O'Connor

The event was controversial with both supporters and detractors demonstrating; the removal of the $2,400 was seen by groups supporting the event as an attempt to chill free speech.

A recent letter from a senior attorney working for the State Attorney General's Office gave the opinion that the removal of money from the library budget was constitutionally dubious and ran afoul of First Amendment protections.

Commissioner Mike Hewitt, who opposed the July decision by commissioners to move the money, did not support Tuesday's motion either.

"This doesn't stop us from being sued by American Atheists [Legal Center]," Hewitt said, adding the commissioners were "doing an about face" from their previous actions.

"I can't support giving them [the library] more money than what we essentially fined them."

Commissioner John O'Connor, who supported removing the $2,400 removed from the library budget said he "did not care" about opinions from the attorney general on the issue but was focused on ensuring the library had a safety and security plan they could actually implement.

"The library was not taking safety and security seriously," O'Connor said. "They now have a plan in place."

The budget amendment for the $4,000 means the library now has money to implement security at an event if needed, O'Connor said.

"This is a middle ground," O'Connor said. "If it weren't for this I wasn't going to do anything.

"I wasn't just going to give the $2,400 back."

Commissioner Todd Morgan said the county should not open itself to a lawsuit that it was likely to lose.

"We have been threatened to be sued... in many cases [in other jurisdictions] they have been successful," Morgan said. "It would not be a prudent use of your tax dollars."

County Can Do Little To Oppose Solar Projects

By Guy Leonard

Legislation passed earlier this year in the Maryland General Assembly reguires the state have 50 percent of its energy come from renewable resources by 2030, which places more emphasis on solar power fields to help meet those

The Commissioners of St. Mary's County received a briefing from state Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Tuesday on how applications to build solar panel fields are handled and approved, and while the state must take into account any concerns the county may have about the project, the county cannot veto it.

"They [the state's Public Service Commission] do have preemption authority," said Shawn Seaman, with the Power Plant Research Program section of DNR

Seaman explained that since the state is deregulated with regards to power plants, DNR no longer sites the plants but does work in the licensing of power plants that are of utility scale, which are defined as producing more than two megawatts or greater than 69 kilovolts in a transmission line.

The state's Public Service Commission (PSC) is the regulatory body which ultimately must approve such a project; the state takes environmental, fiscal, transportation and cultural and historical impacts into account before making its decision

Commissioner Todd Morgan had raised the concern about what the county could do to intervene if they disapproved of a project due to local impacts such as reduction in rural open space.

"It seems the requirements for these large solar fields are going to be pushed to the rural areas where you have more open space," Morgan said.

Seaman said that, even though the state can preempt the county on a power plant project, it must still give due consideration to the county's comprehensive land use plan and zoning code as well as try to resolve any issues a county government presented regarding the project.

Seaman said the PSC also considered issues the military might have with such a endeavor; Commissioner President James "Randy" Guy said the Navy was wary of projects that might interfere with its operations.

A developer has already applied to build a solar power generation farm in St. Mary's, to be located on a plot of land south of the intersection of Hermanville Road and Route 235.

Known as the Whitetail Solar Project, it would be built on 81 acres with accompanying facilities, according to county information.

The Maryland Public Service Commission will hold a public comment hearing on a request by the developer, Lightsource Renewable Energy Development, LLC to build the 20 megawatt solar generating facility here. The hearing will be held Monday, December 2 at 6:00 p.m. at the Hampton Inn at Lexington Park, 22211 Three Notch Road in Lexington Park.

Veterans Clinic To Serve Southern Maryland Veterans

By Guy Leonard Staff Writer

U.S. Senators Ben Cardin and Chris Van Hollen, along with U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs officials and state Secretary of Veterans Affairs George Owings cut the ribbon on a new satellite community-based outpatient clinic (CBOC) for veterans Nov. 15 in Lexington Park.

The new CBOC will occupy the third floor of the MedStar building on East Run Drive just off of Great Mills Road and is expected to open Dec. 2 to see patients.

The CBOC will serve veterans in St. Mary's and Calvert counties

"Location is critically important," said Cardin of bringing health care services much closer to veterans.

He admitted that it took far too many years to bring such care to Southern Maryland, which has among the highest population of veterans, who had to use either an inadequate CBOC at the Charlotte Hall Veterans Home or go to Baltimore or Washington, D.C. for care.

"It was an embarrassment," Cardin said.

Van Hollen said the satellite CBOC was a statement of the government's commitment to veterans' health.

"It has to be a commitment to care for those who've borne the battle and served their country," Van Hollen said. "We have a promise to our veterans that we will provide them with a top quality of care."

The satellite CBOC will compliment a much larger facility now being constructed in Charlotte Hall on Route 5; that project is expected to be completed by either the spring or summer of next year and serve the vast majority of veterans in Southern Maryland.

Michael Heimall, VA Medical Director, U.S. Senators Ben Cardin and Chris Van Hollen and Maryland Secretary of Veterans Affairs George Owings cut the ribbon on the new veterans clinic in Lexington Park Nov. 15.

The satellite CBOC will provide veterans primary care, mental health, comprehensive women's health care, social work services, telehealth and a supporting pharmacy.

"It's a long way from here to Washington, D.C.," said Owings. "We couldn't be more happy to see what's going on for our veterans down here."

Del. Brian Crosby (D-Dist.29B), a former U.S. Army Ranger and combat veteran of the War on Terror, said: "I know how important this facility is."

Rep. Hoyer Hosts Annual Family Fall Festival

Congressman Defends Impeachment Process

By Dick Myers

As he prepares to run for his 21st term in the U.S. House of Representatives, Steny Hoyer is busy like his colleagues deciding whether there is enough evidence against President Donald Trump to send Articles of Impeachment to the U.S. Senate.

Hoyer, who represents Maryland's 5th Congressional District and lives in St. Mary's County, hosted his 8th Annual Southern Maryland Family Fall Festival on Nov. 16 at Serenity Farm in Benedict overlooking the Patuxent River.

With the Democrats back in control of the House, Hoyer is back in a leadership position as House Majority Leader. He told those assembled in the meeting barn on a cold Autumn day, "This is a serious time. I didn't go to Congress to consider impeaching a president of the United States but went to Congress and raised our hand and said we would defend the Constitution and laws of the United States. And that was a very important undertaking. And one of the responsibilities is to ensure that the laws are faithfully carried out and to ensure that there is not an abuse of power."

Hoyer said when the Republicans shout foul at what is going on, they apparently don't understand the impeachment process outlined in that Constitution. He said what the House is going though now is determining "probable cause," similar to what a grand jury does

"When the evidence is in, we're going to make up our minds," he said. He added, "It will be based upon the facts. Not about politics, not about polls, not about any of that."

But make no mistake about it, Hoyer is 180 degrees politically from the president. "This president has brought our democracy to a lower state. This president is not speaking about representing the values that we feel are important.'

Hoyer denied the allegation that the impeachment process was taking away from other important business. He said he responded to a lady who yelled at him about that by telling her the House this session has passed 400 bills, "96 percent meaningful legislation and almost all of it sits on (Senate Majority Leader) Mitch McConnell's desk.'

The issues on his agenda include fixing the Voting Rights Act and addressing global warming, he said.

Hoyer observed, "I think this election is about the soul and character of America, who we are as a people, what we believe in, the image that we want to create of what America is for in the rest of the world. Are we for America first? Of course, we're for America first, but we also understand that you cannot be from America if you don't understand you'd have to be for those who are allies around the world. Why? Because we are not an island. This is a small world. We are connected to one another and we need to make sure that they know that we respect them and their views as we want them to respect us and ours."

At the event Hoyer was introduced by Maryland Delegate Michael Jackson, who represents parts of Calvert and Prince George's counties. He said he brought greetings from Sen. Mike Miller, who just stepped down as senate president.

Of Hoyer, Jackson said, "He's a partner. He is our federal partner. It is vital for us to ensure that he gets reelected."

By Guy Leonard Staff Writer

For the past five years, the Clements Cuties, men who dress in outrageous women's attire, have raised funds to donate to the families of local children fighting cancer; this year's drive was the biggest yet.

Ricky Ryce, spokesman for the Clements Cuties, who end their drive with an exhibition softball game against the local Over 30 Women's All Stars at Cryer's Back Road Inn in Compton, said the team spent months going to sponsors and raised just over $68,000 to support to local families.

Peyton Greer, 14 and Max Long, 5 both received checks for $28,175 Nov. 16.

"Most of our donations come from businesses, family and friends," Ryce said. "Each of the Cuties has to raise at least $500 in sponsorships for the cause." From February until August, when the Cuties play their softball game, 28 Cuties worked to raise the money, Ryce said.

At the softball game, they raised more than $24,000 to reach the $68,000 figure; Rice said the group has raised $190,000 in total over the last five years.

A lucky accountant from Charlotte Hall never figured a $10 quick-pick Powerball ticket would bring her a shocking surprise. Playing "Lottery is my excitement," said the happy woman, who won a $50,000 prize in the Nov. 9 drawing.

The 74-year-old stops by New Market Service Center, located at 29233 Three Notch Road in Mechanicsville, every week to purchase Lottery tickets to pass the time. Following her routine, the lucky player bought her tickets one week and the following week learned she won $50,000.

"I was in utter shock," the winner said after she checked the Lottery website and saw her numbers matched many of the winning numbers. Her husband of 51 years, who also loves playing scratch-offs and Keno, was asleep at the time and she didn't want to wake him. Instead, she got a family member to confirm her big win. When her husband woke up and learned of her $50,000 prize, "he almost had a heart attack," the winner said. The lucky lady does not plan to share news of her win with anyone other than her husband and a few chosen family members.

The happy couple loves playing Lottery and casino games. When asked of their plans for their winnings, they said they might go on vacation at a spot with casinos.

The St. Mary's County native has worked as an accountant for more than 40 years. Before that, she was a social worker at her father's construction company. She thoroughly enjoys her career and doesn't plan to stop anytime soon.

Leadership Class Visits Pax River

Leadership Southern Maryland (LSM) Class of 2020 participated Nov.7 in the third of nine educational sessions for the 2019-2020 LSM Executive Program - Defense. Class members spent the day onboard Naval Air Station Patuxent River learning from the workforce and exploring the processes and partnerships that make up the research, development, test and evaluation cycle. The group started the morning with a brief by CAPT Christopher Cox LSM'19, the base commanding officer. They also received an overview of the Naval Air Systems Command by CAPT Craig E Lee, vice commander of Naval Air Warfare Center Aircraft Division (NAWCAD). NAVAIR provides full life-cycle support of naval aviation aircraft, weapons, and systems operated by Sailors and Marines. Then John Hungerford LSM '18 presented on the Naval Surface Warfare Center Indian Head Explosive Ordnance Disposal Technology Division (NSWC IHEODTD). NSWC IHEODTD, located in Charles County, is the Department of Defense (DoD) Energetics Center and serves as the DoD Explosive Ordnance Disposal Technology Program lead.

Next on the agenda was a presentation and tour at the United States Naval Test Pilot School (USNTPS). CDR Glenn Rioux, USNTPS commanding officer, explained the selection process and curriculum at "the schoolhouse" and led the class on a tour of the facility and the hangars. The class also toured the Atlantic Test Range with Robert Vargo LSM'10, the range director, giving them the opportunity to see testing in action.

Lunch included presentations from community supporters who champion both the base and members of the military. Roger Cordell LSM'18 from the Navy League, MaryKay Myers LSM'10 of The Patuxent Partnership, RADM Tim Heely, USN (Ret.) with Southern Maryland Navy Alliance, and Larry Butts, NAWCAD deputy director of the Office of Small Business Programs were on-hand to share their organizations' missions and efforts to promote community connections with the local military presence.

After lunch, several class members took a hands-on approach at the Manned Flight Simulator where they "flew" an F/A-18 Hornet and a rotary wing aircraft. A visit to the Auditory Performance Lab showed the class what goes on during the development phase of products like customized ear plugs and improved cranial gear for use on the flight deck. Finally, the group got a birds' eye view of the air station from the top of the tower where air traffic control monitors and directs aircraft with a focus on safety and efficiency.

The class wrapped up the day with a networking event hosted by the LSM Alumni Association at Pax River Ale House in Lexington Park, Maryland. Class participants were able to gather and reflect on the day's

Sheriff, State Police Warn of Holiday Theft Schemes

By Guy Leonard Staff Writer

The holiday season, beginning with Thanksgiving and moving into Christmas, is a time for joy and bringing families together.

It's also a time when thieves will target the mass of shoppers who will flood local businesses to buy gifts for their loved ones.

Both the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office and the Leonardtown barrack of the Maryland State Police will be out in force on Black Friday, the day after Thanksgiving that marks the start of the shopping season, at local commercial centers to deter thefts and other crimes but local law enforcement leaders say there is no substitute for personal awareness and common sense to avoid being a victim.

"Thefts increase because the opportunities increase," said Sheriff Timothy K. Cameron. "Most shoppers, they go from store to store and put their purchases back in their car.

"They leave a target rich environment."

The sheriff's office has placed a digital sign at the Hickory Hills Shopping Center along Route 235 warning residents to keep their cars locked and remove any valuables from their vehicles to not provide an easy mark for a thief.

Local law enforcement are urging residents to avoid becoming victims of theft this holiday season.

Cameron said this consideration goes for vehicles parked at homes as well as at shopping center parking lots

"I think they have a feeling of security at home," Cameron said. "But cars parked in driveways are no safer than being parked in the streets.

"There's an alarming number of people who don't lock their doors."

Since the explosion of on-line shopping, there has also been a rise in concern over package thieves simply purloining items left at front doors, Cameron said.

It was one more way holiday shoppers could be victimized.

"There's so much on-line shopping people need to keep track of their packages," Cameron said. "Talk to your neighbors so that you can look out for each other's packages."

Surveillance systems homeowners can buy at an affordable price are helpful in tracking down thieves,

Cameron said, and sometimes surveillance systems on neighbors' homes can help solve crimes committed at a nearby location.

"They work great," Cameron told The County Times. "They provide great video, which makes great evidence."

Lt. Krystle Rossignol, commander of the Maryland State Police barracks in Leonardtown, said the risk of theft doesn't stop once gifts have been given on Christmas Day.

Residents should be careful not to leave boxes and other detritus left over after gift exchanges out in front of their homes; it only serves to inform would-be burglars what new, valuable items might be inside.

"If you can remove them, then remove them," Rossignol said. "Break them down or now everybody knows you have a new computer or TV."

Shoppers who must leave valuables or newly purchased gifts in their vehicles should take precautions to hide them, Rossignol said.

Blankets or other coverings could be used, she said. Rossignol said the majority of vehicle burglaries her troopers investigate had unlocked doors.

It's a problem that only continues into the holiday season; why residents leave car doors unlocked is a mystery.

"It's a pretty high number from what I read every day," Rossignol said. "We cannot understand it."

Sometimes, despite best efforts, items are stolen, she said, and the best way to retrieve them is to have some kind of identification on them.

"Keep a record of serial numbers on items like electronics," Rossignol said. "Whatever gift it is, keeping a record helps us to track it down."

Thefts from homes, resulting from burglaries, can be just as much of a risk as thefts from vehicles.

It was important for homeowners to remain vigilant, she said.

"People can be complacent and not think about it," Rossignol said.

Cameron warned shoppers, especially women who carry purses, to be watchful of where they place them while they're shopping.

They should avoid keeping them in shopping carts when they might turn their back on them; it's an opportune time for a thief to steal it while they are distracted.

"Women should keep a hold on their purses," Cameron said. "They should also be careful about leaving their wallet in a open purse or in an unattended car."

Unattended purses are a prime target for thieves, Cameron said.

Shoppers should not go to businesses alone, the sher-

Shoppers should not go to businesses alone, the sheriff said, when they want to buy gifts as there are safety in numbers to guard against strong arm robberies.

Shoppers can be particularly vulnerable when going to and from businesses with gifts or packages.

"Be aware of your surroundings, especially coming back with packages," Cameron said. "If you are not comfortable going back to your vehicle alone you can ask for an escort from the business.

"If not, we [sheriff's deputies] certainly would come and do it."

The sheriff's office will have a public roll call at 2 p.m. on Black Friday at the Wal-Mart parking lot on Miramar Drive in California to begin its maximum deployment of deputies to deter thefts during the shopping season, Cameron said.

Maryland state troopers are also partnering with sheriff's deputies during this time, Rossignol said, for an increased presence on the roads and at shopping centers

"We will have more high visibility patrols in shopping centers to dissuade thefts," the barrack commander said.

Cameron said deputies will be on patrol and in stores, some in uniform, others in plain clothes on watch for potential thefts.

Aside from outright thefts and burglaries to homes and vehicles, shoppers should also be wary of the numerous scams that spike during the holiday shopping season, Cameron said.

These scams can range from a random person asking for money for gas so they can pick up a certain person to a scammer posing as a representative for a charity.

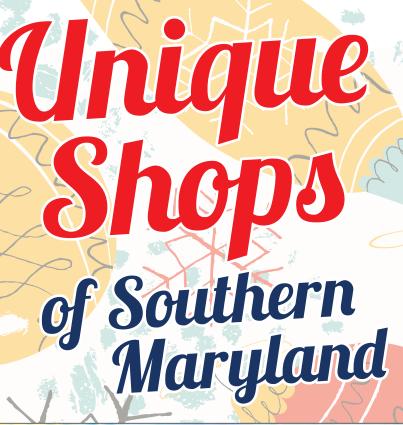

Cameron warned that all legitimate charities in Maryland are registered with the Maryland Department of State; any one not registered should be avoided.

"There are people out there just waiting to separate you from your money," Cameron said.

Shoppers who see or hear of something suspicious should not hesitate to contact law enforcement, Cameron said.

"If you see something, say something," said Cameron. "Give us a call."

St. Mary's College Honors High School Students

Founded at the College of William and Mary in 1776, Phi Beta Kappa is the nation's first - and most prestigious - academic honor society. St. Mary's College was approved for a chapter in 1997, after a rigorous review process that took more than three years to complete. Election to membership in Phi Beta Kappa is based on three criteria: academic achievement in the liberal arts and sciences: breadth of intellectual interests; and good moral character. There are 290 Phi Beta Kappa chapters across the United States today, with a membership exceeding 600,000.

CSM Students Tour Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant; Explore Career Paths

CSM students Chibueze Amos-Uhegbu, Joshua Riddle, Cory Swaim, Cory Svoboda, Cody Dean, Carson Bistline, Matthew Kenlon, Timothy White and CSM Assistant Professor of Electrical Engineering Brian Warnecke recently toured Exelon's Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant in Lusby.

The College of Southern Maryland (CSM) Leonardtown Campus Engineering Student Club toured Exelon's Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant (CCNPP) to learn about plant operations and career opportunities. The students received a presentation Nov. 8, about nuclear energy in general and on the operations at CCNPP, specifically.

"Plant engineers were able to thoroughly explain the scale that makes Calvert Cliffs the largest source of clean energy in Maryland," said Club President Tim White. "The students took a tour of the control room, turbine deck and intake structures. They concluded the tour with an on-site luncheon with plant engineers for professional engagement and development allowing the students to listen to the varying academic and industrial paths that the Calvert Cliffs employees had taken throughout their varying engineering backgrounds."

land - produce 1,756 megawatts of zeroemissions energy: or enough carbon-free electricity to power more than one million homes, according to Exelon. The Lusby plant joins 95 other nuclear power plants to provide nearly 20 percent of all U.S. electricity. The nuclear energy industry creates lasting, high-paying jobs for people from a wide range of fields and educational backgrounds, according to the Nuclear Energy Institute (NEI). Each nuclear power plant in the United States employs between 500 and 1,000 workers during normal operations and they earn salaries 20 percent higher on average than those of other electricity generation sources.

CSM students pose in front of the Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant containment building where power lines connect carbon-free energy to the high-voltage NEI also reports that the nuclear energy industry recruits from universities. community colleges, the military and the trades. From nuclear to systems engineering, from mechanical to civil engineering - engineers make up a large part of the nuclear energy workforce. But there are also opportunities for accountants, analysts, information technology experts, occupational safety and other trained specialists in the field. Carpenters and construction trades workers, electricians, welders and equipment operators are also critical to the industry.

CSM students participating in the tour were both electrical and mechanical engineering majors.

Last year, CSM received a $105,804 grant from the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) to provide scholarships to 15 students pursuing the college's Energy Systems Technology (EST) associate degree program. CSM was one of six community colleges in the nation and one of two academic institutions in the state of Maryland to receive NRC funding.

Since the EST's program's inception, Exelon has hired 21 students from the EST program. Those 21 CSM alumni have gone on to build careers with Exelon in the fields of electrical, instrument & control and mechanical maintenance, as well as in support of nuclear operations. CCNPP leadership also hosts a 10-week summer program for CSM student interns to rotate through numerous departments at the two-unit plant as part of the EST curriculum.

PATUXENT RIVER NAVAL AIR STATION

Innovation Challenge 5 Teams Innovate Low-Cost Solutions for Fleet

Innovation Challenge (IC) teams once again proved that given six months and a $25,000 budget they could invent a working prototype that may potentially solve a problem from the fleet.

"It's not only about the technical details, it is also about the logistics," said Ángel Ruiz-Reyes, an engineer with Airborne Anti-Submarine Warfare Systems. "You may know the science behind [your proposal] and the engineering in how to make it real; however, documenting, scheduling, and networking are the key ingredients for success in the challenge. Leadership knows that you are intelligent, what they want to see now is if you are efficient." Ruiz-Reyes was a member of Team So-MAD (Sonar Magnetic Anomaly Detector), one of the two teams selected for IC5.

Now entering its sixth year, the Naval Air Warfare Center Aircraft Division (NAWCAD) Innovation Challenge asks junior scientists and engineers to form four to six person teams, identify a problem that the fleet faces, and then take their solution from proposal to working prototype in just six months. Teams operate as a conventional program would: for example, it is up to them to contact a lab, schedule time for their experiments, and pay for it.

Team So-MAD built a low-cost, low-power magnetic anomaly detector using a 3D-printed array of their own design and commercial off-theshelf parts. Team members Ruiz-Reyes, Eric Correa-Matos, Alejandro Hernandez, Omar Vega-Manzano, and Rafael Velazquez-Vicente were able to successfully detect the position, velocity, and direction of an unknown target underwater. The team hopes their device, after more research and testing, can one day help in detecting small, hidden, underwater threats for the Navy.

After learning that Sailors use paper and pencil to not only design storage in a ship's magazine, which is where ammunition is stored, but also to locate and retrieve ordnance, Team AURO-RA (Augmented Reality Ordnance Retrieval Aid), sought to develop software for use with a tablet and an augmented reality headset; however, after a visit to an aircraft carrier the team altered their IC project.

"The Sailors aboard, let us know that their time within the magazine can be extremely limited, so that there might not be time to use our proposed product," explained team member David Grullon, an engineer with the Aircraft Launch and Recovery (ALRE) Developmental Projects Branch at Lakehurst, New Jersey. "Our team worked with them to come up with some ideas that may be useful. Thus, the magazine planning aid tool was born."

Team members Michael Gehrsitz, Farihah Begum, Stephen Carter, Adam Garcia, Sean Groch, and David Grullon used input from Sailors aboard U.S.S. Abraham Lincoln (CVN-72) to develop and refine the 3D planning and retrieval aid program for digital devices.

"I'm so proud of all of our team members," said Antonella Thompson, Innovation Challenge program manager, who mentored both teams, ensuring they had the facilities, materials, and staff support they needed throughout the Challenge. "These young men and women have grown professionally and personally, and they've really come together in a focused way to hopefully benefit our men and women who serve."

To date, more than 70 developmental employees have participated in the five Innovation Challenges and have earned numerous accolades including a Secretary of the Navy award; eight Omar Vega-Manzano, a member of Team So-MAD (Sonar Magnetic Anomaly Detector), explains the team's prototype -- an eight-sensor circular array that was designed and printed in the NAWCAD Innovation Hub (iHub).

NAVAIR and NAWCAD Commander's Awards; and two national and state awards. In addition to the dozens of articles for technical publication and presentations at conferences, participants have submitted eleven patent disclosure statements, with one U.S. patent awarded thus far and several more still undergoing the process. Eleven of the teams have furthered their IC work through follow-on projects funded through the Naval Innovative and Science Engineering (NISE) program.

UPDATE for Clements Cuties Foundation. I can't begin to tell you how wonderful this past Saturday night was at Cryer's Back Road Inn for the Clement's Cuties 2019 check presentation. The updated donations total ended up $68,176.95 with $28,175.48 going to each of our two young recipients Max Long and Peyton Greer who are bravely fighting cancer. Four memorial scholarships were also funded: Three high school students received The Nolan Scully Memorial Scholarship for Public Service, and one student received The Danny Ryce Scholarship for Music. In fact, donations are still coming in this week.

For five of the last seven years The Clements Cuties organization has been raising money to help one to two recipients fighting childhood cancers. In those last 5 years over $190,000 has been raised through various events and through Facebook and our website. Thank you to all who have donated or worked hard to raise monies for The Clements Cuties and their good work.

Who are the Clements Cuties? "The Cuties originated in the 1970's as a group of male softball players who would dress as ladies and play softball games for charity. They were reprised 7 years ago by a second generation of young men who are descendants and friends of the original group." Now, the Cuties are led by an amazing, hardworking group of volunteers, headed by Ricky and Elise Ryce, along with Greg and Jeppa Thornburg, Harry and Deb Poole, Michelle and Eddie Bowles, Gary and Cindy Norris, and all the Cuties, Over 30 Women's All Stars, and their families.

It is with a grateful heart I feel what it truly means to celebrate Thanksgiving. As has been said often, you don't have to celebrate Thanksgiving only on the 4th Thursday of November. You can create your own Thanksgiving each and every day by finding reasons to be grateful for kindnesses you give and receive, or by giving of yourself to people or places in need. Sounds so simple, yet sometimes so hard to fit in our lives. But when you do give of yourself you feel like everything is, or can be, right with the world.

Thanksgiving became a national holiday in 1863 under the presidency of Abraham Lincoln during a war that nearly tore our country apart forever. I wonder how President Lincoln, who had the terrible ordeal of a Civil War, and his own personal worries and tragedies could find the time or the energy to be thankful for anything. But in his Thanksgiving holiday proclamation speech he said, "The year that is drawing towards its close, has been filled with the blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies. To these bounties, which are so constantly enjoyed that we are prone to forget the source from which they come, others have been added, which are of so extraordinary a nature, that they cannot fail to penetrate and soften even the heart which is habitually insensible to the ever watchful providence of Almighty God...No human counsel hath devised nor hath any mortal hand worked out these great things. They are the gracious gifts of the Most High God, who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy. It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently and gratefully acknowledged as with one heart and one voice by the whole American People. I do therefore invite my fellow citizens in every part of the United States, and also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next, as a day of Thanksgiving and Praise to our beneficent Father who dwelleth in the Heavens.

If one who has experienced all of these trials could find ways to be grateful in the midst of war, sickness, and death, then I hope I can find within myself a grateful heart to do better things with my hands and mind.

Deer, Turkey Hunt Results Reported

Favorable Weather Improves Early Deer Harvest

The Maryland Department of Natural Resources has announced that hunters harvested 21,073 deer during the early portion of the archery and muzzleloader seasons.

The harvest was a 12% increase from last year's official harvest of 18,839 deer for the same period. More favorable hunting conditions this year contributed to the increased harvest.

The two-month harvest included 11,869 deer taken during the archery season and 9,028 harvested during the October muzzleloader season. An additional 176 deer were reported during managed hunts. Hunters harvested 692 antlered and 681 antlerless sika deer as part of the total.

Hunters harvested 647 deer on Sundays that were open to archery hunting during the period, accounting for 6% of the total archery harvest.

The deer harvest numbers increased in all three Southern Maryland counties: 17.3 percent to 496 in Calvert; 46.9 percent to 886 in Charles and 47.4 percent to 799 on St. Mary's.

Turkey hunters reported taking 91 wild turkeys during the fall season that was open Oct. 26 through Nov. 3 in Maryland's three westernmost counties. The harvest was slightly lower than the 97 turkeys reported last year. Harvest numbers for each county were: Allegany, 22; Garrett, 53; and Washington, 16.

The Tackle Box Fishing Report

Glenn Short landed this 30 pound catfish off the Chaptico Wharf Sunday. The cats are back!

By Ken and Linda Lamb Contributing Writers

The nor'easter last week kept a lot of fishermen off the bay with small craft warnings. We also had high tides bringing our water back to summertime levels.

The stripers responded by returning to the shorelines where fishermen caught them on top water poppers, live bait, and swimming plugs. Goose Creek, Hog Point, and the Navey Recreation Pier in Solomons had some good catches.

Bait fishermen on the Point Lookout Pier using cut alewife caught some keeper rockfish in the rough surf.

Trollers and jiggers continue to catch stripers in the Potomac and the Patuxent with breaking fish drawing diving gulls.

There are plenty of rockfish in the triangle area out the mouth of the Potomac. Breaking fish are in the Point No Point area to marker 72, the Target Ship and on the Mud Leads.

The weather forecast for the end of the week calls for sunshine and temperatures approaching 60 degrees. The winds will calm and the fishing will be great.

Emily spent long hours walking the Florida beaches, and added to her collection of seashore treasures. While in Florida, Emily and Capt. Emily returned to Maryland each spring deeply tanned and rested, but happy to be back in Maryland

Emily will be most remembered for her unconditional love and support of her family, her many acts of kindness, her words of advice, her faith, and her bible, which had become quite worn from years of reading favorite scriptures and passages.
