Outgoing Commissioners Bid Farewell

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The three outgoing county commissioners were honored at their final meeting on Dec. 13. Steve Weems decided not to seek a fourth term and Chris Gadway and Kelly McConkey were defeated in the Republican primary in June.

Commissioner President Buddy Hance noted that Gadway had been appointed by Gov. Larry Hogan to fill the term of Tim Hutchins, who resigned for health reasons. Hance said, "He has done an outstanding job in his short time here. It takes you a while to get your feet under you. I can attest to that for sure. And so, he learned very quickly the job and took his responsible very seriously."

The proclamation in Gadway's honor noted he was "a vocal advocate for the county's fire/EMS, working with his fellow commissioners to enhance service to the citizens of Calvert County," and also, he "worked diligently to improve the relationship between the Board of County Commissioners and the Calvert County Board of Education with the goal of lending support to parents and students by advocating for open communication." It was stated he "has also been a dedicated supporter of animal rights, the Linda L. Kelly Animal Shelter, and volunteering his time to many local organizations."

Commissioner Weems said of McConkey, "We've had a journey together for over 12 years with the school board," adding, "On a personal level, it's been an honor and a privilege to serve with you on this board and on behalf of the citizens."

The proclamation in McConkey's honor said he "has been an advocate for the business community and strong supporter of animal rights and the Linda L. Kelly Animal shelter." adding, he "has also been a dedicated volunteer in many organizations and giving back to his community."

Commissioner Mike Hart said someone told him that 'Steve Weems personifies everything that is good.' Hart observed, "When you hear stuff about all the politicians, that doesn't apply to him. I've met a few people in my life and I can count them on one hand that I call my moral barometer that when you feel lost and you don't know what to do and you feel pulled on and you know you were going to get an answer that's honest, genuine, and is thinking about people first. And that's this gentleman right here."

Later McConkey said, "I'd just like to thank the citizens of Calvert County for giving me the opportunity to serve on this board. It's been a wonderful experience. I could have never done it without the staff, the directors, Mark (Willis), Linda (Vassallo), especially John Norris. I could have never done it without you guys. It's been an honor to work with each and every one of you. Even though we didn't agree all the time, we always kept it very professional. And I look forward to the new board moving the county in the right direction and keeping our taxes low like we did. So, I'm going to miss working with everybody. I'm going to take a break. It doesn't mean I'm gone for good. I could be back in the game before you know it. You just never know with me."

Gadway said, "I'd like to congratulate the board and wish them the absolute best. Coming in about a year and a half ago, I had the opportunity to start serving the community in a different way. And whenever anybody out there gets these opportunities to serve, please jump on board. Whether it be for Boy Scouts or Girl Scouts, or in a church or civic organization, if you see an opportunity to serve, please, please do that. If you're asked to serve, please serve your community or your county. This county is blessed by an amazing group of professionals, not only in the leadership, but throughout every level of service and tier of government that we have. I want to take this moment to thank each and every county employee in here and out there in the field, because without each and every single one of those people, this county would not be the great place that it is. It's been an honor and pleasure serving over the past year and a half. I'd like to thank my wife and my family for the opportunity."

Weems said, "I too want to thank the citizens of Calvert County for the past 12 years. The journey is a full one. And I, I want to thank the current members that I've served with and past ones as well. I wish the new board every success. I also want to thank the staff, from those who arrived last week to County Administrator Mark Willis. They do a phenomenal job. Our staff, the ladies, thank you for your kindness."

Weems added, "I also want to ask forgiveness for anything I didn't do for those who I served as well as county employees. I thank you for the honor, and I also want to thank my wife, especially, and my family."

"Merry Christmas to all and have a great New Year. That's all."

School Board Revises Public Comment Policy

School Board Vice President Inez Claggett

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

For many months Calvert County Board of Education member Pat Nutter has made a motion to eliminate the board's policy limiting public comment at their meetings to no more than 10 speakers. Each motion failed 4-1.

The policy has come under persistent criticism from the county commissioners and other citizens. And it became an issue in the election in which school board candidates opposing the policy prevailed.

So, when at Nutter's last meeting on Dec. 8, Board Vice President Inez Claggett suggested that it was time for the board to set aside the policy and when a motion was made at the suggestion of board member Dawn Balinski that a one-hour time limit be substituted instead, Nutter went along with it. "Sometimes something's better than nothing," he concluded.

Since the per speaker time limit remains at three minutes, or five minutes for someone speaking for a group, if each speaker uses their allotted time, that will accommodate between 12 and 20 speakers in an hour.

Claggett said in broaching the subject, "So colleagues, we each share the understanding that public comment is essential for our meetings, and we want to continue to ensure that we are offering our community the opportunity to come before us to speak. Although we do realize there are many means by which our community can reach us, to talk to each of us, whether that be individually or collectively, we have the options to email, as well as to reach out to us individually, to have conversations. But I wanted us to talk amongst ourselves to possibly find a way for us to move beyond our 10-person limit, to allow additional public commenters to be able to come before us at meetings."

Board member Antoine White said, "I appreciate all the emails and people who reach out to me, and everyone knows I'm in the community. I go to these games, I go to places, people invite me to things, and that's where I think a lot of things take place, by having a conversation. As far as with the public comment, I understand we want to know what's going on, but if you really want something done, you're going to reach out through an email or a phone call or something so you can actually get communication back and forth from that. Not saying that we don't want to hear it, but in order to get an understanding, it needs to be communication back and forth. But with that being said, some aren't comfortable with emails, some are uncomfortable with calling. So, we have to try to be flexible to meet everyone's needs."

Board President Pamela Cousins, who has been the most resistant to changing the policy, said, "I am perfectly fine with lifting the 10 limit. My only concern is that this is a business meeting, that we do have business to conduct."

Nutter seemed perplexed that the idea surfaced after so many months of resistance. "There are 90 some thousand people in this county. Don't put a number on me saying, you're number 96,000, so you can't talk. I think that's ridiculous. I think that if you're number 11, if you're number 12, and I honestly believe that if you take this number away, that you're not going to be inundated with tons and tons of speakers."

But he observed, "I guess it's just trying to appease my motion." Going along with the time limit, he added, "In my head, I guess I really disagree with it, but it's a step in the right place."

The motion passed unanimously and the new policy will begin at the first board meeting in January.

Outgoing School Board Members Attend Last Meeting

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

Two members of the Calvert County Board of Education attended their last meeting on Dec. 8. Board President Pamela Cousins, who has served two terms, and member Pat Nutter, who was appointed to replace the late Bill Phalen, both chose to not seek election for another term. Lisa Grenis and Jana Post were elected to the at-large positions and will begin to serve in January.

Nutter, who served two terms as county commissioner, said being on the school board is a difficult job. "Everything looks different when you're outside looking in. But when you get inside, it's a whole new ballgame. It takes you a long time to learn this job. I've been really fortunate to have been through Calvert County schools. My brothers, my children, my grandchildren have been through Calvert County schools and my nieces and nephews. So, I have a lot of pride in Calvert County schools. And their educators and their service workers, which I see many here today. And I think the Calvert County schools are not only a frontline educational system, but they're a safe educational system."

Nutter has been persistent during his tenure in trying to get his colleagues to change their policy of limiting public comment to 10 speakers. Before the meeting was over, he finally saw at least some change in that policy (see separate story).

Cousins agreed with Nutter on the difficulty of the task. "No one knows what it's like to be a school board member until they win an election. This work is hard. It's frustrating. It's been scary at times."

She added that when first elected, "I had to intentionally learn how to be a board member. I studied Maryland school law, attended MABE (Maryland Association of Boards of Education) continuing education classes and visited schools to meet students and staff. I participated in community-based activities and events and networked with school board colleagues around the state and across the nation. Fast forward eight years later, two superintendents, seven student members of the board, eight school board colleagues and one super bad board assistant, Karen Maxey, and there's still much more I don't know."

She added, "Because I earned a seat at this table, it allowed me to collaborate with my colleagues to put policies and a strategic plan in place that compel the district to see each child for who they are and teach them through an equity lens. In this seat, I obtained the commitment to dismantle systemic racism and create an inclusive, equity-oriented environment for each student and employee. In this seat, students had a voice. In this seat, I championed to save jobs during the Global Pandemic. In this seat, I was committed to protecting small businesses, specifically our bus contractors. In this seat I lobbied for support staff, teachers and administrators to be treated as professionals. In this seat, I helped raise the bar for public education in the state of Maryland through my work at MABE. And Dr. Townsel, you're here because I earned a seat at this table."

Calvert Education Association President Dona Ostenson said of Nutter: "Thank you, Pat, for stepping in over the past two years. I am 100 percent sure being on the Board of Education was more than you ever imagined. I just want you to know that we appreciate the many years of service to the citizens of Calvert County, and we wish you well in any future endeavors you take."

To Cousins, she said, "Thank you for being a champion of education. I know at times it has seemed like a thankless job, but I want you to know that our students and staff have benefited from your leadership over the past eight years, and we don't think that you're going to be going too far away. So, we look forward to continuing our relationships with you outside of the Board of Education."

Tracy McGuire, who ran an unsuccessful bid to return to the school board, said of Cousins, "Thank you for your leadership. Thank you for your patience when people who should have known better were slow to grasp all the things you tried to show us. Thank you for the courage to name things by their name. Thank you for creating space for people and groups Calvert County tries to exclude and diminish."

She said, "I trust your good work cannot be undone. Not that people won't try. There are people who will continue their fight to block people and groups from fully participating in Calvert County. However, groups and individuals having claimed their space will not easily concede it."

Report: Mill Creek is Slowly Degrading

County Receives Annual CBL Study

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

“Overall, the water quality of the Mill Creek system is slowly degrading over time in terms of bottom water dissolved oxygen and chlorophyll-a concentrations,” Calvert County Environmental Planner Amalia Pleake-Tamm told the county commissioners Dec. 13 during a briefing on the 2021 and 2022 Water Quality Monitoring Program for Tidal Creeks in the county conducted by the University of Maryland Center for Environmental Science (UMCES), Chesapeake Biological Laboratory (CBL).

She went on to say, “Solomons Harbor continues to experience periods of hypoxia (low dissolved oxygen levels) that can impair habitat suitability and stress organisms. Water clarity is vital for submerged aquatic vegetation (SAV), which provides food and habitat for marine life; oxygenates the water; and traps sediment and nutrient runoff. Water clarity in Mill Creek declined in 2022. There was generally inadequate levels of light reaching the floor for SAV growth.”

In addition to Mill Creek, the annual study conducted for the county looked at 11 other tidal creeks. They were Fishing, Plum Point, Parkers, Hall, Hunting, Battle, Island, St. Leonard, Hellen’s, Hungerford, and Flag Harbor.

Pleake-Tamm said, “The 11 tributary creeks have less historical data. Thus far, there do not appear to be any long-term trends in the creeks, except for degrading trends in some creeks for dissolved oxygen (St. Leonard, Battle, Parkers creeks). Algal blooms were common throughout the county in both 2021 and 2022.”

The lab’s Dr. Lora Harris presented the findings to the commissioners. She explained, “We study the symptoms of eutrophication. If we think about eutrophication and the pollution of the Chesapeake Bay as kind of a disease that the Chesapeake Bay system is experiencing as a result of nutrient pollution from nitrogen and phosphorus. The symptoms of that eutrophication are low dissolved oxygen, lack of light transmission through the water column, which impairs the ability of SAVs or sea grasses to grow high chlorophyll concentrations, which are phytoplankton blooms. So, we measure those three characteristics of the water column along with temperature and salinity.”

Harris said the data that was collected over the past two years is measured against previous years of the study. She showed the commissioners time lapsed maps showing the trends in upper Mill Creek. As to oxygen levels, she said, “We use statistics, and we can say this is significantly declining and so that’s why we are concerned about this system.”

Mill Creek’s shape presents inherent problems, she said. “It’s a large, narrow tributary,” Harris noted, adding, “The water doesn’t move around as much because of kind of the morphology, the shape of the basin.”

As to the other creeks measured, Harris observed, “In general, for algae, we were either around average for the time series or last year in Hungerford even a little bit low. And for oxygen, the station that was kind of lower, to keep an eye on, it’s like this almost every year is St. Leonard Creek,” adding, “St. Leonard is almost its own little baby estuary. And so that’s part of it is it’s deeper and it’s larger.”

On the Bay side, at Fishing, Plum Point, Parker’s and Flag Harbor, she said, “I was really excited to see Plum Point... getting a little better.”

Flag Harbor remains “a tough spot,” with its marina. She noted, “There’s a lot of impervious surfaces, and it’s small and kind of stuck in there with a lot of still water.”

During the presentation, Commissioner Mike Hart bemoaned the lack of progress on Mill Creek, where he spent a lot of time on during his youth. He said people were supportive of Bay clean-up efforts.

But Commissioner President Buddy Hart noted people want progress, yet they complain about paying for the implementation. “The rain tax was part of the plan. The tier mapping was part of the plan. The plan to clean the Bay is billions of dollars.”

Hart noted fixing the Conowingo Dam was part of the solution. But Hance said, “Pennsylvania is way behind us, but even the Maryland portion of the plan is billions of dollars. And you don’t like what they want to do in the plan.”

Hart said he would be in favor of it “if it makes sense and it saves the Bay.”

Hance retorted, “I know I’ve heard you complain about the rain tax.”

After the presentation the commissioners agreed to direct staff to:

1) Continue monitoring Mill Creek and the tributaries to measure the effect of local climate variances, Best Management Practices (BMPs), and identify areas needing water quality improvements.

2) Continue supporting sewer upgrades, BMPs, riparian and vegetative buffers, and the use of pump-out facilities by boaters; and

3) Continue interpreting the tributaries water quality in the context of adjacent Patuxent River conditions.

The survey cost the county $34,319 in 2022.

Additional Middle School Safety Advocates Sought

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

Currently three school safety advocates are shared among the school system's six middle schools. At the Dec. 8 meeting of the Calvert County Board of Education, safety advocates urged that three more be hired so each middle school has one in their building at all times.

Dean Jones, a safety advocate at the Career and Technology Academy, spoke in support of his middle school colleagues. He represents the advocates on CAESE, the Calvert Association of Educational Support Employees. He said, "It is pretty much common knowledge that our students came back post pandemic a little bit damaged, lacking in skills in their behavior and their social skills and even academic skills. And the safety advocate serves as a mentor in the building and as a person that helps solve those problems within the building. And they're having a more difficult time bouncing back and forth. And the kids are now emailing their safety advocate when they're in one school, saying where are you? I have a problem, or some emergency has come up that's actually dangerous to the school and I need someone to address it, and they're not there."

He added, "We know that middle school years are the most difficult years of a student's development. And now add post pandemic onto that for a pre-teen or a teenager to be able to go through middle school without that trusted adult, which is that safety advocate. That safety advocate is very different than a security guard that they have at other schools. A safety advocate is a mentor that builds relationships, that solves problems, that also oversees the safety of the school. And when that safety advocate is not there, the school is not as safe as it should be."

Gordon Pracht, who shares safety advocate duties between Plum Point and Calvert middle schools, said, "We are all aware of the safety issues nationally, statewide, neighboring counties, and here in our own Calvert County affecting our students and our staff of the Calver County School system. We have received many alerts from Charles County, PG County, Anne Arundel County, and other counties around us and also kind of tweaked the way we do things in our schools, trying to keep up with the trends."

He said sharing safety advocates "affects our staff at many levels. Our administrative staff are stretched so thin."

Pracht added, "While this is a safety issue alone, we must realize that the reduction of support to our teachers in the classroom translates additionally into the investigations of things that students and staff members bring up in the school, who already have their plates kind of full with what they're doing, but that they have this put on top of that when the safety advocate's not available."

He observed, "Most importantly, let's look at how that addresses and translates to our students. I've developed a rapport with many of my students at both of my schools. This rapport is delayed and hampered at times by this every-other-day schedule. I'm off to the email from students at one school while I'm at another with a sometimes minor, sometimes major issue that's going on. I must coordinate by either email or phone with staff members at that school where the student is that day to try to get things accomplished in different forms of communication without being there for the student as I'd like to be. This sometimes leads to more severe situation for the student when they don't choose to email me if I'm not there on Wednesday. I come in Thursday, and they tell me, I wanted to tell you yesterday this was going on, but you weren't here."

New Superintendent Dr. Andrae Townsel will be submitting his first budget to the school board in January.

Letters to the Editor

Calvert County Board of Ed Missed Golden Opportunity

The following letter was read at the Calvert County Board of Ed meeting December 8, 2022.

I attended the meeting on Monday, November 14th Board of Ed's "Let's talk with Superintendent Townsel". The meeting's purpose was to learn more about the playbook program that of which is being funded through the Operating Budget.

I had specific questions regarding the breakdown of the students selected. These questions regarded gender, race demographics, and the sport or sports the students participated in. Unfortunately my questions went unanswered. I was then instructed to speak to Dr. Johnson who provided the information last week.

The BOE voted for the program with the exception of Mr. Pat Nutter who was absent. The playbook program consists of 50 students selected by the principals from each of the four high schools. The following is a gender breakdown by each school:

- The student's selection at NHS is comprised of eight girls and 40 boys (two girls dropped out of the program). Girls represent 16.67% while boys represent 83.33%.
- At HHS, eight girls and 41 boys were selected. Girls represent 16.33% and boys represent 83.67%,

- At CHS 11 girls were selected and 39 boys. Girls represent 22% and boys represent 78%.
- Patuxent High School there were six girls and 44 boys selected. Girls represent 12% and boys represent 88%.

The program consists of 200 students representing the four high schools. One would expect 100 girls and 100 boys, meaning 25 girls and 25 boys from each high school. The girls seem to be grossly under represented based on the aforementioned statistics.

There are a total of 33 girls and 164 boys selected by the principals across the schools for this program. Girls represent ONLY 16.75% and the boys represent 83.24% of the student participants. This is a huge under representation of girls in this program.

Ladies, you are the majority. You voted for this program. And it is not equitable! You keep talking about equity but you missed a golden opportunity. You have the obligation when voting on a program such as this—to make sure girls are equally represented.

Thank you,
Beth M. Bubser.

Chesapeake Orchestra Open for the Winter

Jeffrey Silberschlag

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The Chesapeake Orchestra, long known for its summer time River Concert Series of great popularity, is trying something different, said its conductor and musical director Jeffrey Silberschlag. With the 25th year of the River Concert series coming up next summer, Silberschlag will be conducting a concert Dec. 18 with a Christmas and winter seasonal flair.

“We’re trying to see if an indoor concert series will work,” Silberschlag told The County Times. “I call this our HVAC [heating, ventilation and air conditioning] series because we’ve been performing in summer weather so much.”

The performance, which will take place at St. Mary’s College of Maryland’s new Dodge Performing Arts Center, will feature a mix of holiday themed songs, including selections from famed composer and song writer Steven Sondheim.

Sondheim passed away last year and the concert is in part a memorial salute to his work.

Headlining the event will be Melissa Errico, a Tony-nominated Broadway singer and actress; Randy Waldman, who has played piano for famous performers such as Barbara Streisand will also perform, Silberschlag said.

“This guy is a major L.A. [Los Angeles] superstar,” Silberschlag said. “We’ve developed connections to bring in people from the greater music business.”

Silberschlag’s son Nathaniel, the principal horn of the Cleveland Orchestra, will also play during the concert.

The auditorium of the Dodge center seats 700 and ticket sales go to fund the Chesapeake Orchestra, Silberschlag said.

The Chesapeake Orchestra, through the River Concert Series, has long sought to bring that sort of arts and culture to St. Mary’s.

“That was the original vision of a lot of the community leaders during the BRAC [base realignment and closure] re-alignment of the ‘90s,” Silberschlag said. “St. Mary’s County is this unique place where you have just as much chance to speak to an admiral as you do a waterman.”

“Over the years, it’s become more cosmopolitan and the Chesapeake Orchestra is a part of that.”

With Errico taking center stage this weekend, Silberschlag said, the atmosphere should feel “like going into a New York [City] club” rather than the typical orchestral experience.

It’s part of a larger concept of bringing more musical culture — and a chance for the community to grow closer through sharing it — to the county all year round.

“We hope the people will embrace it,” Silberschlag said.

★ Never nail, tack, or stress wiring when hanging lights; keep plugs off the ground away from puddles and snow.

Don't use frayed or damaged electric cords, and never use electric lights on a metallic tree.

Turn off all holiday lights when you go to bed or leave the house.

Use only non-combustible or flame-resistant materials to trim a tree.

In homes with small children and pets, take special care to avoid sharp or breakable decorations.

Here are a few simple tips to remember to keep safety in mind.

LIVE TREE: Make sure it always has an adequate amount of water, and keep it away from any heat source.

ARTIFICIAL TREE: Choose one that is tested and labeled as fire resistant. Artificial trees with built-in electrical systems should have the Underwriters Laboratory (UL) label.

Make sure the Christmas tree does not block foot traffic or doorways.

LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE SOLUTIONS

ST. MARY'S SHERIFF'S CRIME BLOTTER

Chaptico Collision Under Investigation

On Friday, Dec. 9, 2022, at 12:29 pm, St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office Patrol Deputies were dispatched to a motor vehicle collision involving a SUV and a tow truck with serious, life-threatening bodily injury at the area of Budds Creek Road and Mechanicsville Road in Chaptico. The St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office Collision Reconstruction Unit responded to the scene to continue the investigation.

Preliminary investigation determined that a 2016 Toyota Highlander, operated by Agnes Marie Douglass, age 66 of La Plata, was traveling south on Mechanicsville Road when she failed to stop at a stop sign and struck a tow truck, operated by Shawn Patrick Koetter, age 49 of Fredericksburg, VA, which was traveling east on Budds Creek Road.

Agnes Douglass and front passenger of the Toyota, John Christopher Dewy Douglass, age 35 of La Plata, were transported to an area medical center by ambulance. The rear passenger of the Toyota, Shirley Marie Douglass, age 44 of La Plata, and Koetter, the operator of the tow truck, were flown to a regional medical center by helicopter.

At this time, speed may have been a factor in the collision.

Anyone who may have witnessed the collision or any events leading up to it and has not already provided a statement is asked to call Cpl. Rachael Roszell at 301-475-4200, ext. 78108 or email.

Wanderings

of an Aimless Mind

by Shelby Oppermann

CANDY CANES AND CHRISTMAS PIES

Well, the candy cane striped ribbon is on the street sign pole and the fairy garden is magically blinking through the wee hours of the evening and morning with colorful twinkle lights. That's enough right? No, probably not. I always tell myself, "Not too many Christmas decorations outside, because remember, you have to put it all away". That never happens. As we were wrapping our street pole, Robert (sarcastically) asked if I wanted to do the stop sign pole in our neighbor's yard across the street, well actually the poles are not technically considered in any of our yards, and I said, "No, but I will give our neighbor my leftover ribbon". This morning I just messaged our neighbor and told him all this, and he replied back that it sounded like a great idea... though I think he meant, a great idea if I put it up. I told him not to call the police on me. I'm also wondering if I could add the old candy canes I use year after year on the Christmas tree to the street pole. No one ever eats the candy canes, so I just started saving them in a freezer bag. Ants are hiding under ground now right?

Robert is taller than me of course, so he was up on the ladder while I unwound the ribbon, and he kept saying to me, "Are you holding the ladder, it's shaking!" Now you know I wouldn't shirk my duty in that, I love my husband. I yelled up to him, "It's not me and the ladder, it's the street pole shaking from you leaning against it." I always thought the poles were set in concrete. My husband showed me they are not in concrete by shaking the pole around when he got down. The poles were indeed just pounded in the ground without concrete. He did a great job up there, and I hope he feels the same way when I ask him to add the solar lights around the pole today. The solar lighting project may or may not get done – I'll know by the look I get back when I ask.

My husband set up a beautiful Christmas scene in the little circle within our driveway with the old blow mold decorations from his family and from what we have collected over the years. I still need to find places for a second Santa and a snowman we pulled out. I have left our surprise pumpkins that grew inside the circle, or we have now found out that they are called Crown of Thorns gourds. I feel the gourds should stay there because of their name.

We have finally moved half of the 12 hay bales we used for Halloween. I told Robert I thought we should leave the ones out front so I could wrap them like Christmas presents. He quickly nixed that idea, saying how heavy, wet, and stinky they were. My husband was right, because when he spread some around an area in the yard where it just seems to stay muddy forever, the smell from the wet hay was overwhelming. The squirrels are having a field day with the leftover pumpkins and gourds. I have never seen squirrels eat them up so fast, does this mean we are going to have the bad winter that some weather sites are saying?

Last night Robert was asking if I had all my Longaberger pie plates back so I could make Christmas pies. I was thinking what?! I made 6 apple pies (one with apples and golden raisins soaked in Bourbon and lightly cooked for him), over 150 cranberry orange shortbread cookies, two trays of pumpkin mousse cups, and 2 pumpkin pies during Thanksgiving week and figured I was good and done with baking for this year, maybe for the next few years. My four cortisone shots made it through until the Sunday after Thanksgiving thank goodness. So, anyway, now I am looking up what kind of Christmas pies to make – if you have some recipes please email or message them to me. I have made mincemeat pie many years ago (without the old English tradition of actual meat and suet though), but there must be some other good pie recipes. I thought an eggnog and apricot brandy custard pie sounded good. My father and I loved our apricot brandy either in eggnog or just apricot brandy with ginger ale. I guess I better add them both to the Christmas shopping list. Oh, and the most important item on the list is always to breathe and use all senses and feelings to enjoy every moment of this time leading to Christmas Day, frazzled feelings and all. I hope this is a wonderful Christmas for all of you and I'll write to you again right after Christmas. Merry Christmas!

To each new day's wonderful adventure, Shelby

The Way We Were...

History and Stories of St Mary's County from long-ago to just yesterday

THE LIFE OF RILEY

In these columns, we have often directed you, gentle reader, to people who moved to St. Mary's County and whose life here, led to their leaving an indelible mark on the County, the State, or beyond. Our last column on Father John LaFarge, SJ was just such a story.

Conversely, there are sons and daughters of the County whose destiny lay elsewhere. One such person was Bennet C. Riley.

Born in St. Mary's County in November 1787, to a poor Irish-Catholic couple, his father – also named Bennet – apprenticed him at a young age to a cobbler in town eventually finding his way to work as a foreman in a shoe factory.

At age twenty-four and following his father's death in 1811, the younger Bennet signed up as a privateer – meaning a person or ship allowed by a government to attack and steal from ships at sea. In 1813 during the height of the War of 1812, he enlisted in the U.S. Army rising quickly through the ranks to Lieutenant in 1817 and Captain by 1821.

Regarded as one of the ablest and bravest young officers, Riley moved up through the ranks eventually attaining Colonel during the Mexican-American War in which he distinguished himself in several major battles. His conduct and gallantry at the time earned him promotion to the rank of brevet Brigadier General. (A "brevet" was a warrant giving an officer a higher rank as a reward for gallantry or meritorious conduct; the promotion may not confer the authority, precedence, or pay of real rank.)

Following the war with Mexico and a brief stint at Fort Hamilton in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1848 Riley was given command of the Military Department of Upper California serving as the Provincial Governor.

While the U.S. Congress dithered over the question of statehood, the California Gold Rush entered a very violent phase in 1849. An influx of prospectors and large-scale desertions of his own men hampered General Riley's ability to maintain order and protect the native population.

Commanding Army forces stretched from San Francisco to San Diego, he was unable gain control of the lawless mining camps or to stop the slaughter. Seeing no remedy from the Federal Government, General Riley surrendered all his civil power in December 1849.

In 1850, Riley returned to his home in Black Rock near Buffalo, N.Y. With his wife, Arabella, he had eight children; three of his sons fought in the Civil war, one surviving, a Confederate.

General Bennet C. Riley died of cancer on June 6, 1853. He was buried at Forest Lawn Cemetery Buffalo. He is one of just three generals for whom a military post is named; Fort Riley, Kansas is named after Bennet Riley.

General Ulysses S. Grant described Bennet Riley as "the finest specimen of physical manhood I had ever looked upon. . . '62" in his stocking feet, straight as the undrawn bowstring, broad shouldered with every limb in perfect proportion, with an eagle and a step as light as a forest tiger."

A loyal and brave son of St. Mary's County.

The Tackle Box Fishing Report

By Ken Lamb
Contributing Writer

The fall rockfish bite is on in the Potomac River from the 301 bridge to Point Lookout. Trollers are catching the 20-to-27-inch rockfish steadily in the upper regions where feeding birds show the location of schools of bait and predators. The farther south, the more activity. The real frenzy is from Smith Creek to Point Lookout.

The early morning has been best with the fish erupting on the falling tides at dawn. The fish are active all day, but the real blitz is early.

Trollers are using umbrella rigs and tandems. Smaller lures fit the mid-sized fish.

Jiggers using shads, bucktails, and metal are all scoring. Jiggers should avoid running to the flocks of birds close on the water. Just get in the general area and put the lines over. The fish will be under your boat soon enough and all the rods will hook up. If you run to the birds the boat will scatter the fish and they show up in a minute or two where you just came from. Chasing them is a bit like chasing your tail. If you are stationary your turn will come and the trollers will not have to keep dodging you. I am an advocate for peace between trollers and jiggers. There are more than enough fish for everyone.

Customers have said thing like: "I saw the biggest bait ball I have ever seen." "We had our limit before we could get all our lines in the water." "We left out of St. Clements and got our eight fish (four anglers), before we got to Ragged Point and were back at the dock in about one hour and fifteen minutes."

The season lasts until 31 December and no one needs to let this opportunity get away from them.

FINANCIAL FOCUS

Add Layers of Protection to Financial Strategy

To achieve your financial security, and that of your family, you will need to create a comprehensive strategy. But for this strategy to succeed, you'll need to guard it from various challenges – and that means you'll need to build in different layers of protection.

What are these challenges – and what types of protection can be used to defend against them? Consider the following:

- Challenge #1: Protecting your ability to reach your goals – To achieve your long-term goals, such as a comfortable retirement, you'll need to build adequate financial resources. And that means you'll need to create an investment portfolio that's suitable for your objectives, risk tolerance and time horizon. And you'll need to keep your long-term goals in mind when adjusting your portfolio during times of volatility.
- Challenge #2: Protecting your family's future if you're not around – Hopefully, you will live a long life and always be around to support your family. But the future is not ours to see – and if something were to happen to you, how would your family cope? Their chances could be much better if you have adequate life insurance. Proper coverage could help pay off your mortgage, pay for your children's higher education and allow your family to continue its lifestyle.
- Challenge #3: Protecting your income should you become temporarily disabled – If you were to become ill or temporarily disabled and could not work for a while, the disruption in your income could jeopardize your family's living situation, or, at the least, lead to an inability to pay bills in a timely fashion. To protect against this threat, you may want to consider adding disability insurance. Your employer may offer a short-term disability policy as an employee benefit, but it may be insufficient, either in duration or in amount of coverage, so you might want to look at a private policy.
- Challenge #4: Protecting your long-term investments from short-term needs – Life is full of unexpected expenses – a major car repair, a new furnace, a large bill from the dentist, and so on. If you did not have the money available to deal with these costs, you might be forced to dip into your long-term investments, such as your IRA or 401(k). Taking money from these accounts earlier than you intended could incur taxes and penalties, and, even more importantly, could reduce the amount of money you have available for retirement. To help protect these investments from short-term needs for cash, try to build an emergency fund containing three to six months' worth of living expenses, with the money kept in cash or a liquid account.
- Challenge #5: Protecting your financial independence – You would probably do all you could to avoid ever becoming a burden to your grown children – which is why it's so important to maintain your financial independence throughout your life. One potential threat to this independence is the need for some type of long-term care, such as an extended nursing home stay, which can be extremely expensive. A financial professional can suggest protection strategies to help you prepared for these types of costs.

It can be challenging to keep your financial strategy intact – so do whatever it takes to protect it.

County Seeks Grant For Free Internet Ready Computers

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The county government is pursuing its policy of providing internet connectivity to the neediest of county residents.

This week the Commissioners of St. Mary's County approved an application for money from the state's broadband office to provide 4,500 free HP Chromebooks to those otherwise unable to afford them.

County information technology director Bob Kelly told county commissioners this week that the grant opportunity from the state's office of rural broadband came under its "digital equity umbrella."

"This is a heavy lift for county government," Kelly said at the Dec. 13 meeting.

He noted that there were specific criteria that residents must meet to be eligible for an internet-capable computer from the county.

"But basically, it's for low-income and the elderly," Kelly said.

The state has already issued a contract for 145,000 of the HP Chromebooks to be distributed throughout Maryland.

Kelly said the notice of the grant opportunity came to their attention three weeks ago.

If awarded the county would receive the computers over a six-month period, Kelly said, for final distribution.

"We're heavily dependent on our community partners who have signed up who are going to help us do that," Kelly said.

The initial plan is to use public libraries and recreation and parks sites for distribution, said Kelly, with the local NAACP and sheriff's office also assisting.

"It's one device per home," Kelly said, noting that the county would have to be exact in its accounting of its distributing of computers. "We have to record that and report that to the state."

Commissioner Eric Colvin said the opportunity fit the shifting need of not only supplying broadband infrastructure but hardware for users as well.

"This is about ensuring access to the infrastructure once it's there," Colvin said. "This is a big lift for an already busy department."

Thrive By Three Program to Launch in St. Mary's

The St. Mary's County Health Department (SMCHD) has been awarded grant funding in the amount of $250,000 to launch a Thrive By Three Program in St. Mary's County. This funding was provided through the Maryland Department of Health Prevention and Health Promotion Administration Bureau of Maternal and Child Health.

The Thrive by Three program will help ensure that pregnant moms in St. Mary's County have access to adequate, effective, and equitable healthcare. The program focuses on pregnant and postpartum women previously disconnected with care and thus at higher risk of poor health outcomes. The Thrive by Three program will provide care coordination and appointment scheduling assistance for prenatal and primary care, behavioral health, and dental visits. Additionally, the program will offer a wide range of additional services, including Maryland Medicaid insurance enrollment assistance, linkage to community resources, breastfeeding support, and education on vaccines and safe sleep.

"This program will improve health outcomes for both mom and baby while advancing health equity in our community," said Dr. Meena Brewster, St. Mary's County Health Officer. "I commend our Health Promotion and Community Services Division Director Angela Cochran, Maternal Child Elder Health Director Ashley Milcetic, and other SMCHD team members for their dedication to healthy pregnancies and healthy families."

"Prenatal care is crucial in preventing pregnancy complications and managing conditions that can have an adverse effect on both the pregnant person and their infant," said Angela Cochran, Division Director of Health Promotion and Community Services at SMCHD. "We are very grateful to have this opportunity to provide more support for our pregnant moms and young children in St. Mary's County."

Commissioners, Delegation Meet on Proposed Legislation

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The Commissioners of St. Mary's County are seeking additional bonding authority this coming year to borrow $56 million for capital construction projects and they want the county delegation to the Maryland General Assembly to support their request.

This piece of proposed legislation was one of four official proposals made by the county to delegation members at their Dec. 14 joint meeting.

The Maryland General Assembly meets in January.

Del. Matt Morgan (R-Dist. 29A) wanted to know when those bonds would be up for sale, either next year or sometime after.

County Chief Financial Officer Jeannett Cudmore told the delegation, which includes Del. Brian Crosby (D-Dist. 29B) and Sen. Jack Bailey (R-Dist. 29) and soon-to-be sworn in Del. Todd Morgan (R-Dist. 29C), that the county has already sold $30 million in August and would see another $30 million bonds by the close of December of next year.

"Usually about two years after we get the authority is when we sell them," Cudmore said of the approximate time the $56 million in bonds would be sold if the county received authorization.

"We don't sell bonds until we need to sell bonds," said Commissioner Eric Colvin. "What we're asking for is two years' worth so we wouldn't have to come back next year."

Morgan approved.

"I think that's the smart way to tackle it," the 29A delegate said. "Instead of coming back every year."

The largest project the county is seeking to fund right now is the YMCA in Lexington Park, with the county putting in $15 million and the remainder to be raised through private means and state grants, Cudmore said.

The second county-proposed law would allow the county to continue to assess a transfer tax for an additional four years.

Deputy County Attorney John Houser explained that without the legislation approved this year the county's ability to assess the tax would sunset and cost it about $8 million a year in tax revenue that would have to be replaced by other means.

"The reasons we have sunsets on taxes like this is that it's important to justify it," Morgan said. "I don't think we'll have a problem passing this."

The third proposed bill had to deal with gambling, Houser said, and the small stakes games residents played at local senior centers.

Under state law, it is a crime for any space to be used, set aside or rented for wagering, he explained.

"While innocent enough... that question was brought to our attention and we just do not see room for leniency in the law," said Houser.

The proposed legislation seeks a carve out from state law for St. Mary's County senior centers — "and only senior centers — Houser said to continue with these small-stakes games.

The payouts for these games typically did not exceed $50 to any one player.

The fourth bill deals with the Metropolitan Commission (MetCom) and changes it wants to make to its administration, including not having to seek permission from the county commissioners when the utility is restructuring debt so as they do not take on any extra liability.

The bill is described as proposing text amendments and clarifying language to existing MetCom operating regulations.

The assembled state leaders had no further questions on the MetCom proposal and said they would take it under consideration for the upcoming session.

Several citizens rose in support of reviving a bill of Crosby's that would do away with at-large election of county commissioners and change to a district-based voting plan where residents in a commissioner district would vote in just their resident district for one candidate rather than four.

Local commissioners have opposed that legislation and Crosby has not refiled that bill as of press time.

Fatal Overdoses Drop in St. Mary's

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The prevalence of Narcan, a drug that counteracts the effects of a potentially deadly opioid overdose, continues to save lives and pare down the number of drug-fueled tragedies in St. Mary's County, both law enforcement and health department officials say, but the opioid crisis persists.

What's more, law officers say, it becomes difficult to ascertain just how many non-fatal overdoses there are in St. Mary's County since the proliferation of Narcan means that addicts can carry it with them and a friend or fellow addict can use the drug to counteract the overdose without it being reported to law enforcement or health professionals.

"It's really the proliferation of Narcan," said Lt. Shawn Moses of the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office. "Anyone can have it."

Years ago, Moses said, Narcan was only being prescribed to deputies and other law officers through the county health department.

This meant that law enforcement could track overdoses much more closely because they—along with rescue squads—were the only ones responding to calls for overdoses.

Currently, every inmate released from the county detention center, said Capt. Edward Willenborg, head of the Criminal Investigations Division, is provided a card that allows them to obtain their own Narcan from a pharmacy or the county health department.

The preliminary numbers of fatal overdoses the sheriff's office has responded to shows the effectiveness of Narcan.

So far in 2022 there have been 22 fatal overdoses the sheriff's office has dealt with, but that is down from 31 last year and 30 in 2020.

The number of non-fatal overdoses the sheriff's office responded to—and therefore are aware of—has also dropped.

In 2020 there were 225 overdoses the sheriff's office responded to; that fell to 187 last year and 156 so far this year.

"Some of these are being handled by family members or friends without us knowing," Willenborg said.

Moses said groups of addicts using opioids often designate one of their number to standby with Narcan and not use while the others pursue their high.

But Narcan, and its effectiveness, can be somewhat misunderstood, Moses and Willenborg said.

Addicts whose overdose is counteracted by the drug can still relapse when the Narcan wears off, they said, leading to the narcotics still in the addict's system leading to what is known as a "secondary onset" overdose.

Willenborg said many addicts refuse additional hospital care once their initial overdose is counteracted, leaving the user vulnerable to another overdose without taking any additional opioids.

Deputies have pursued emergency petitions with the courts to ensure users can be compelled to stay in hospital to guard against a relapse.

Dr. Meena Brewster, county health officer, said fentanyl, a powerful synthetic opiate, is responsible for 80 percent of fatal overdoses in Maryland.

The decline in fatalities from opioids locally does not mean the crisis has abated significantly.

"I don't think it's gotten better," Brewster said. "We're seeing fewer fatalities and that's because we're seeing greater use of our strategies to address the epidemic."

Virginia Man Arrested for Attempted Murder

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Brama Bussell

According to court papers filed this week against a man accused of trying to kill one of his apparent co-workers, bad blood on the job site led to the alleged assault.

On December 8 at about 7:44 a.m. deputies responded to the Point Lookout State Park in Scotland, for the reported assault. Investigation determined Brama Joseph Bussell, 28 of King George, Virginia, approached the victim, Tyler Knott, from behind, and proceeded to strike the victim multiple times in the head and back. Knott was pumping fuel into a loader at the time of the alleged assault, police said in charging documents, and he exhibited signs of having been struck several times.

During the altercation, Bussell submerged the victim's head in a ditch filled with water for an extended period, police said. Bussell held the victim's head under water until a witness intervened and ordered Bussell to release the victim.

When deputies examined Bussell they found that his sleeves were soaked in water from his cuffs to his elbows, according to charging documents.

One witness to the alleged assault said that the altercation was a result of "feelings of favoritism on the job site."

That same witness told police Bussell knew that he had done the wrong thing and that was why he had not attempted to flee the scene.

Bussell was arrested and transported to the St. Mary's County Detention and Rehabilitation Center in Leonardtown and charged with Attempted 2nd Degree Murder. Bussell has been held at the detention center on a no-bond status.

School Board Briefed on Use of Fund Balance

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Schools chief financial officer Tammy McCourt

School system budget officials reported to the St. Mary's County Board of Education on their vision for expenditure of several million dollars in budget savings from fiscal 2022 on numerous projects.

The school board voted unanimously to approve the expenditures.

Schools chief financial officer Tammy McCourt told board members at their Dec. 14 meeting how her department used already used much of the $3.7 million available in the school system's unrestricted fund balance.

In developing the current fiscal 2023 budget, $ 2 million had already been used, she said.

Much of these savings from fiscal 2022 were realized by instructional salaries that did not have to be paid due to continued vacancies to the tune of $1.5 million as well as savings in building operations costs and other fixed charges for an additional savings of about $1.2 million, according to school budget data.

McCourt petitioned the school board for permission to use the remainder of the fund balance on a new press box at Great Mills High School at a cost of $250,000, assorted playgrounds at a cost of $220,000, improvements to the Chopticon High School gym floor and bleachers at a cost of $575,000 and refreshing of technology for the 6th and 9th grades at a cost of $595,000.

"We are requesting a state bond match [for the press box] of $100,000," McCourt told board members.

The playground improvements would go to Green Holly, Greenview Knolls and Lettie Marshall Dent elementary schools, said McCourt.

McCourt also wanted to use $24,000 to replace the fire suppression supply tank at Greenview Knolls Elementary School.

Lastly, the school system was seeking a portable air chiller at a cost of $60,000.

"We are not going to let $1.7 million sit on our books," said Superintendent Dr. J. Scott Smith. "That's why we're coming before you, to put it into action."

The budget amendment approved by the school board this week must still receive support from the Commissioners of St. Mary's County for final approval.

The fire occurred Dec. 4 in the 22060 block of St. Elizabeth Court in Great Mills with units from the Bay District, Hollywood, Valley Lee and NAS Patuxent River fire departments called to fight the fire.

According to court documents, Mitchell lived in the area of the alleged arson fire.

Veterans' Home Receives Much-Needed Items

much needed items. Mrs. Parker shared the post on the funeral home Facebook page and began receiving donations. Collection efforts really took off when she created an Amazon shopping list, making it a matter of a few clicks, to log in to your Amazon account, choose from a preselected list of items, pay, and have your purchase shipped directly to the funeral home. "The outpouring of love, care, and support from the community is precisely what the Christmas spirit is about and this is truly heart-warming" said Parker.

The Parkers, who operate the funeral home, were looking for a way to give back to the Southern Maryland Community, which has graciously welcomed them with open arms. They have collected hundreds of toys in drives for Toys for Tots over the past few years but were moved when they saw veterans in need. "I lost my father, who served in Korea earlier this year. My family has a rich history of military service. I am an Army veteran, both of my grandfathers served in World War II, my great-grandfather, and his brother walked nearly 70 miles from their small farming community in Virginia, over the mountain to Charlottesville to enlist and serve eventually in France, during World War I. I have direct descendants who served in the Civil War, The War of 1812 and the American Revolution. Veterans are, and always will hold a special place my heart." said funeral home owner, John Parker. "We are both privileged and honored to give back to those who sacrificed for our great nation."

Collection efforts began after Kristy Parker viewed a post on Facebook, by the Charlotte Hall administration, seeking

Team members from Mattingley-Gardiner Funeral Home and Cremation Services were privileged to present veterans and family members residing at the Charlotte Hall Veterans Home with nearly 100 items, which they collected recently on behalf of the facility. Schwartz Continues 40th Year of Holiday Food Drive

Del. Todd Morgan (L) and Mike Schwartz (R)

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Good time, bad times, thin times or flush times, Mike Schwartz has continued to collect donations of money and menu items to give a Christmas dinner to the community's needy for decades.

Schwartz, 66, owner of Mike's Bike's on Great Mills Road, said this year will be his 40th giving event to the community.

This year, even with higher food and fuel prices, Schwartz said the St. Mary's County community continues to give as it always has, either monetarily or with food items.

It's a year-long process that Schwartz undertakes and the pressure accelerates during the holidays to ensure that as many families don't have to go without as possible.

"We're getting there," Schwartz told The County Times in an a little more than a week out from the food distribution day. "I think I'm going to make it."

Schwartz estimated about a week ago that he was about 75 percent complete for donations collected to provide about 1,000 turkeys — along with canned goods and a 10-pound bag of potatoes — to make a complete holiday meal.

The food will be distributed starting Dec. 19 and again on Dec. 20, Schwartz said, from the parking lot of Zion United Methodist Church on Route 235 in Lexington Park.

Despite the perpetual giving nature and generosity of the larger St. Mary's community, getting the turkeys and side dish items for the holiday food drive has not been without challenges and the costs have continued to rise.

To provide meals for 1,000 families will take an estimated $40,000, Schwartz said, of which he has collected $30,000 so far.

In years prior Schwartz had depended on the local Wal-Mart to provide bargains for turkeys and last year the McKay's family grocery stores, which are no longer in business, provided the yuletide birds for families. Thomas f. McKay is still picking up the turkeys for delivery this year, Schwartz said.

This year a more expensive brand of turkeys are on the menu, Schwartz said.

"We had to get Butterballs this year," Schwartz said. "The avian flu wiped out a lot of birds."

"That's why."

In years past, with a greater ability to economize, holiday dinners to be donated cost about $20, Schwartz said.

Now the same family-sized meal costs about $35.

A dedicated group of volunteers will gather at the church on the donation days to put together parcels for needy families.

Schwartz will also have several bicycles on hand to give away for needy children, he said.

Schwartz continues to collect donations up to the day when meals are distributed and then on throughout the year.

Any money from donations he has left from the holiday drive he said he uses for food emergencies for families.

"I take care of people year-round," Schwartz said. "I accept donations year-round."

This year's food drive is atypical for another reason, said Schwartz.

By this time of year his workshop at Mike's Bikes is usually filled with canned or boxed goods of food donations.

Not so this time around.

"None at all, which is weird," Schwartz said. "The money donations are running O.K. though."

"I'm not freaking out right now and there have been plenty of times when I'd be freaking out right about now."

Schwartz's food drive started back in 1983 in the aftermath of a personal tragedy when a fire drove him from his home.

But it wasn't long before the St. Mary's County community rallied to him help him in his time of need, he said. It was that show of kindness that inspired him to help those in need; he has never run out of demand.

While his food drive is one of the seminal St. Mary's community events each holiday season, becoming something of its own tradition, it has had its own highs and lows.

In 2008, when the nationwide economy took a major downturn and even St. Mary's County—usually immune from most economic woes with its defense industry dependence—shuddered, he gave out 2,400 birds to needy families, he said.

Now, at 66 years old, Schwartz said he has no plans to stop gathering and donating for the community that he has embraced and which has embraced him.

"I just feel like so many people depend on me around Christmas," Schwartz said. "I'd feel really bad if I quit."

He praised the community for its continued support of the efforts of he and his volunteers who work to keep needy families feed during the holidays and throughout the year.

"When you ask for help, they will step up," Schwartz said.
