Three Vie for 3rd District Seat in Primary

Jeanette Flaim

Paul Harrison

Joseph Marchio

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

Calvert County voters will have a local race to decide in the May primary in addition to the presidential and congressional races. Three Calvert County Board of Education seats are up for election this year. Since the top two vote getters in the primary move on to the November general election ballot, only one of the school board races is contested in May, with three candidates vying to represent the northern part of the county, Commissioner District 3. They are Jeanette Flaim, Melissa Goshorn and Kelly McConkey. Since it's a nonpartisan election, Democrats and Republicans will have a chance to cast their vote in the primary. Maryland law precludes Independents from voting in the primary.

Jeanette Flaim has lived in Calvert County for about 35 years. She and her husband have two children who went through the Calvert County Public Schools and the Career and Technology Academy. She has worked as a collections and contracts manager for a union electrical contractor for about 25 years.

She said her job gives her flexibility to serve on the board. "I've been here 25 years. I have two grade assistants, so I do have that flexibility."

The election is nonpartisan, although Flaim has been active in the Democratic Party, having formerly been chairperson of the Calvert County Democratic Central Committee.

As to why she's running, Flaim explained, "I decided to run because I think the school board has done a great job for our children and our students, and I just want to continue to promote those policies and support those policies."

She was asked if that means she supports the majority in recent 3-2 votes. She responded, "What I like about the school board is, even though it is a lot of times three to two votes, I think they all give consideration to what is happening. I don't think it's always cut and dry, like all three of us are going to do this. I've noticed lately that everyone's looking very, very closely, and thinking about things. So, I hope I do that, but again, I agree with all the policies that have happened so far, so I probably would be in the majority."

That means supporting the Anti-Racism Policy and against book censorship. "Yes, I would agree with those policies."

She was asked about violence against teachers and some students. "I've talked to other people and people who have gone to the school board to do the comments. I think everyone would agree that this is a complex problem with complex solutions. So being on the school board, I think you have the opportunity to see all the expert opinions of what you need to do. I've talked to school counselors. I've talked to school psychiatrists. It seems like it would be nice to have more of those people so they could help students navigate difficulties. And it would be nice to have more support staff or teachers so they can help students who need that help."

Regarding the commissioner audit, she said, "I don't think they voted against it as far as they wanted to know exactly what the board of county commissioners wanted to audit. They have audits all the time, so the Board of County Commissioners could look at those audits. I also think the Board of County Commissioners had said that they would pay for those audits. So, I think they just want to know exactly what's your question? What do you want audited?"

Flaim said, "My kids went through the school system. They got a great education. Whenever I went into the schools, you could see how much the teachers enjoyed being in that school. And my kids would always talk about what they learned. So that's what I want to support. That's what I want to continue with Calvert County Schools. Calvert County Schools are excellent, and I just want to be here to continue with that excellence."

By contrast Melissa Goshorn has often been on the vocal opposition. She and her husband have three children in the school system. She said, "Like many people, I moved here for the school system when I had my babies." That was 10 years ago. She was raised in Charles County.

Goshorn works for a digital services consultancy. "I'm the VP of Delivery and Professional Services. So, the company, we help different organizations with all things digital services, building software, data strategy, all things technology, mainly in the healthcare space." She said her job has flexibility that would allow her to serve on the board/

She said she is running because, "I tried everything else. I tried joining different committees within the school system. I tried doing public comment, and scheduling meetings and that sort of thing to get my voice heard. And it didn't seem like it was really working. And so, I figured the only way to really make a difference in the school system is to run."

She at one time filed suit against the school system over Critical Race Theory but the suit was thrown out.

She said her philosophy would be aligned with board member Lisa Grenis and Jania Post, who were elected in 2022. That would give them a majority if she's elected. She added, though, "I would say all the races are important. If we get one seat, then the shift will happen. If we get a majority, then the shift will happen."

She noted, "I think that people just didn't pay attention to the school board for a long time. I think we all just assumed that it was going well. I'll say what I've learned, the school board is a lot of work. Jana and Lisa put in a lot of hours every single week," adding, "it's something that you have to do in addition to an actual job. So, it's a huge undertaking."

Regarding the Anti-Racism Policy, she said, "I think it's racist. I don't think that you can call out a single race in an anti-racism policy."

Is a policy needed? She said, "I think that the way that this school system functions is through policy. I think that what they aim to accomplish and creating a tolerant environment, they're not going to accomplish through that policy, because you need to change student behavior and students don't read policy. So, it's something I feel like the school system feels like they have to do, especially I think that it came about after those kids vandalized the football field that one year. I think that's what caused the anti-racism policy to be put in place. But I think that it's misguided."

What can be done, she was asked, "I think we need to start by enforcing the student code of conduct, and we need to hold kids accountable. Our school system is run by the children, and they know that they can break the rules and not be held accountable for them. And so that trickles down into everything, including the way that they treat one another. If we need to demand that the children follow the rules and we need to hold them accountable, and I think that it'll all trickle down to respecting one another."

Former county commissioner and school board member Kelly McConkey did not respond to The County Times invitation for an interview.

The 1st District race features Joseph Marchio and Dr. Michael Shisler. Shisler responded. He is a retired educator, having amassed 43 and a half of his 47 years as an educator in Calvert. He was a classroom teacher for ten years and then vice principal and then for 31 years principal at Beach Elementary.

He is running, he said, "because it's important. And it was not on my radar screen right now. I had thought about it a couple years ago as I was getting closer to retirement, but I didn't want to run then because I didn't want to compete with some of the folks that were running who I thought were good candidates. But this time around, I was approached by a couple folks within the last month, started on Martin Luther King's birthday at the celebration. And a couple folks asked me if I would consider doing it, and my first response was, thank you for asking and I'm honored, but I wasn't sure that I lived in the first district. I had always been under the presumption that we lived in the second district, and the vacancy is in the first district. So, I confirmed that I did live in the first district, I gave it some more thought, went and got a packet from the local Board of Elections, looked that over and discussed it with my wife, and I decided it's very important to do this. I think the school system's made a lot of progress, not just academically, but socially in pushing the equity issues in the last decade or so. And I get surprised and upset when people feel threatened by equity issues."

In the 2nd District, incumbent Antoine White, the current school board president, is being challenged by Paul Harrison, who responded to the interview request. Harrison has raised three kids, native countians, all through the public school system. They have lived in the county since 2002.

Harrison is an accountant. He graduated from Georgetown University and went to graduate school at the Robert H. Smith School of Business at the University of Maryland College Park.

He feels his background will help him navigate the sometimes-confusing world of the school system's budget. He said, "I've seen the budget; I identified $24 million that was unidentified. It was actually labeled as unidentified in the school budget. And that concerns me because there are needs in the county, and we need a budget that's more aligned with our needs."

"That's what I can look at quickly as an accountant, as a finance major." He added.

Recreational Facilities Capital Budget Presented

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

As part of the six reviews of departmental capital budget requests, the Calvert County Board of County Commissioners on Feb. 13 reviewed the almost $100 million, six-year recreational facilities request.

Capital Projects Analyst Veronica Atkinson said, "The Department of Finance & Budget has reviewed the Recreational Resources FY 2025-FY 2030 six-year CIP (Capital Improvement Plan) Staff Recommended Budget, totaling $98,285,285. This allocation encompasses diverse initiatives, including recreational parks, pools, the Golf Course, and Natural Resource parks. The fiscal impact for Recreational Resources six-year CIP proposed budget of $98,285,285, also includes $18,062,285 in Grant Funding. The county funding portion is broken out below:

- Paygo/General Fund: $ 6,615,300
- Debt/Bond: $73,422,200
- Excise Tax: $ 185,500
- Grants/Other: $18,062,285
- Total county contribution: $98,285,285

The discussion during the commissioners briefing included questions about the $2 million budgeted for the Breezy Point camping pump out station. Acting Parks and Recreation Director Bob Branham said, "The move to transitioning to short-term camping at Breezy Point, there is a need to offer a pump-out station so that campers have easy access to get in and offload and get out of Blackwater Gray Water. Rather than use the current contract that we have for twice a week pumping of each individual camper."

He was asked if there was consideration for charging the campers for the pump out. He said, "We have not placed anything in the fee and revenue manual. We are currently working as a team on updating the fee and revenue manual. So, I would think that the plan would be to reflect it in the cost of camping or to have a fee to dump. But our current fees are a little high for the individualized pump outs. We're on a contract and it's roughly $50 a pump out that we have to pay. It was put out to bid and that was the best deal we got. So, I think it actually could be a cost saving measure to the consumer as well.

Branham was asked how critical the $875,000 budget item for Breezy Point parking and drainage was. He said, "I would say extremely. The property holds water and the design for this was to mitigate that, not only impermeable but permeable surfaces. So, we think that would be almost a phased approach. I think that that has to be done before you can have a pump out station. The likelihood is that there would be flooding around the pump station when it's holding water."

Park and Safety Division Chief Amanda Stillwagon explained the $1 million for Cove Point Park is to "start building Cove Point Park out per its master plan. But I can tell you all right now, the biggest thing that I see as an issue there is the playground. It's in really, really bad shape. And to put it into perspective, when we replaced the playground that Dunkirk District Park a few years ago, we were just shy of $800,000 then. So that million dollars could be used simply just to replace the playground, put in some new bottle filling stations, maybe some new covered areas for folks. It really is our main playground in the southern end of the county."

Acting P & R Director Bob Branham

The commissioners will resume their CIP review at their Feb. 27 meeting.

Eileen Kleinheinz (nee Michel) quickly passed away on February 8, 2024, days after celebrating her 91st birthday with family and staff at The Landings of Lake Gaston where she resided.

Eileen was born in New Jersey to parents, George and Edith who moved the family to Springfield, MA and later to Hyattsville, MD. Eileen and her 2 sisters Marilyn (Mannie) Hooker and Dorothy (Dottie) Hussmann grew up there and graduated from Hyattsville High School.

Eileen was an active parishioner of St. Anthony's Catholic Church where she had taught Faith Formation, served as a Eucharistic Minister, and was a member of the Ladies of Charity.

Eileen cherished her children and especially her grandchildren and 2 great grandchildren. Time with family was often in the form of holiday and Sunday dinners, pool parties, celebrations at their home, and an annual family vacation, where the Kleinheinz family talent show was always a highlight.

In 2020, after 62 years of marriage, she lost her soulmate and eventually moved to assisted living in Lake Gaston. She had regular visitors and greatly treasured her time with Mark and Mary who brought her pug, Gia, to sit in her lap while facetimeing her great grandbabies.

What's Coming to Calvert

The following list of pending Category 1 site plans was presented to the Calvert County Planning Commission at their Feb. 21 meeting. # St. Mary's Has Lots of Summer Camps

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Summer will be here in a few months and St. Mary's has lots of opportunities for parents to ensure their children can have fun but still learn something when school lets out.

Some of the programs available have only been running for a short while, yet others have been operating for nearly 30 years.

At Camp Maria retreat center outside Leonardtown, staff there are leading young people aged 7-to-14 years old through Camp Creation, which introduces campers to the environment around them through a variety of activities.

"It's fishing, it's crabbing, it's canoeing, arts and crafts," said Greg Shedd, operations manager at Camp Maria. "We're trying to raise awareness of the ecosystem and the health of the [Chesapeake] Bay."

Shedd said that children who come to the day camp will learn about environmental stewardship and how they relate to the world around them.

This is just the second year that Camp Creation has run, Shedd said, and the session will run from July 15 through July 18 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

At Black Belt Academy in California, Kyu Shim, Tae Kwon Do master, will be holding his 25th summer camp this year for young people aged 4 years old to 13 years old. The camp runs from June 17 through Aug. 19.

Along with teaching the Korean martial art — which is also an Olympic sport — students will be able to take multiple field trips throughout their time there, from movies to magic shows, including trips to the Great Mills public swimming pool.

Games, arts and crafts are also part of the 10-week summer camp curriculum, Shim said, as well as weapons training and gymnastics.

"I'm expecting 60 to 80 students this year," Shim told The County Times, noting spaces were filling up quickly already.

Rich Olon, who runs the summer camp program for St. John's School and Catholic Church in Hollywood said their program is actually 86 individual and distinct learning opportunities for young people for eight weeks between June 17 and Aug. 9.

"Some camps run for just one week to two or three weeks," Olon said,

They include acting, baking, paintball, "gross and fun" science, junior engineering, volleyball, POM squad, sushi camp, survival, flag football, stuffed animal design and Nerf wars, Olon said.

He said the camp employs approximately 80 high school and college students over the summer to teach each camp class; the program usually draws between 350 to 400 campers each week.

"This will be our 14th consecutive year," Olon said.

A View From The BLEACHERS

GOING TO OVERTIME

By Ronald N. Guy Jr.
Contributing Writer

The current view from the bleachers reveals only courts with rusty poles, slightly bent rims and frayed nets waiting to snap with the splash of another successful shot. Kids are playing half court games at either end. Their voices echo, but their words are indiscernible. Sweat glistens on their skin. Their laughter and determination are infectious. Balls bounce in some hypnotic rhythm. These are beautiful sights and sounds.

Ahh...basketball. This busy "View" will need regulation and overtime.

For the former, we will start with horse...or H-O-R-S-E. Not the animal. The game. It's a universal basketball language. Simple. Fantastic. A test of basketball skills and the imagination. One player makes a shot, then the other has to sink it or get cursed with a scarlet letter. Fail to match your opponent five times and you spell out HORSE - and take the loss. The shots can be traditional jumpers, lay-ups or deep bombs. And, if called in advance, they can be creative. Underhand shots. Bank shots. Behind the backboard attempts. Hook shots. Back to the basket. Bounce off the ground. Blindfolded. Whatever you can imagine.

I would lose HORSE to Caitlin Clark, Iowa's sensational guard and newly anointed all-time leading scorer in women's NCAA history, every time. It wouldn't be close. I would take an honorable "L".

Shooters, man. Here's the thing about them. Scant few humans can dunk. Just as few have elite basketball athleticism. And the masses who can't dunk and possess only modest moves, are acutely aware of said limitations; they aren't in the backyard duplicating Michael Jordan's dunks or LeBron James's fly-through-the-air-and-pin-the-ball-on-the-backboard blocks. Maybe on a Nerf rim, but not a real basketball court. This is other-worldly stuff beyond the capability of "normal" humans. We watch. Jaws drop. And that's it.

Shooters leave the imaginative door ajar. Anyone who has played basketball at any level sees the stuff Larry Bird did, and that Stephen Curry and Clark do, and thinks, hmm...I can do that. I can hit a fade-away jumper. I can finger-roll. I can drill "logo threes" two steps inside half-court. And we can. Not every time. Not regularly. Certainly not while being defended and in the clutch. But in the backyard? All alone? Sometimes. Sometimes we can hit those shots. And...it...feels...fantastic.

Which is, I think, part of Clark's allure. She is one of the best basketball players I've ever seen and maybe the best women's player ever. Her range, feel for the game, flair for the dramatic, confidence, command of the stage - sensational. She is the biggest thing in college basketball since some long-ago previous biggest thing that escapes my aging and cluttered mind. Around the country (world?), little kids, teenagers and aging weekend warriors, are shuffling out to public courts, driveways and hoops at the end of cul-de-sacs, and doing their best Caitlin Clark imitations. It usually ain't pretty, but every now and then, a shot tickles the nylon as it splashes through the hoop. These are the warm thoughts Clark inspires.

Clark's recent assault on the NCAA scoring record has been magic. It embodies everything we love about sports. She's transcended individual moments and accolades. This is an all-time, generational player doing stuff never seen before. It's prime Jordan. It's peak Jerry Rice. It's Wayne Gretzky hoisting Stanley Cups in Edmonton. It's Serena Williams and Novak Djokovic. It is one of those beautiful things that life drops in your lap sometimes and, with this likely her last season at Iowa, the only proper thing to do is enjoy it (and attempt feeble backyard replications).

Overtime: Charles "Lefty" Driesell passed away last week. He was 92. Maryland basketball fans of a certain vintage know that no greater personality has coached or played for the Terrapins. He was the coach of my youth - a bombastic, determine cuss who shook a defiant fist at the Atlantic Coast Conference power brokers in the state of North Carolina. I am grateful for the disdain he sowed for Duke and North Carolina; part of fanhood, part of loving a team, is knowing who to hate. Rest easy, Lefty. Tell Lenny we said hello (#34forever).

CSM Dedicates New Cyber Security Lab for a Popular Educator

By Dave Spigler
Contributing Writer

There are many stories appearing in today's news fraught with warnings about the rise in "cybercrime" and the invasion of large corporate files by "digital thieves" up to no good. A recent CNBC report noted "the FBI has seen a 300% increase in reported cyber-crime cases since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic." Fortunately, this is not one of those tales. This is a "good news" story about a wonderful individual and her latest accomplishment in a long prestigious career as an educator, a naval officer, and community leader. This is a story about Barbara Ives, aka Captain B. Ives, USN ret., an impressive, multi-talented lady, wife and mother. Her story is inspiring. To quote Dr. Yolanda Wilson, President of College of Southern Maryland [CSM], "Barbara's impeccable service to our country, dedication to Southern Maryland and commitment to education, including her years working for CSM, are remarkable and we are deeply honored to name our new cybersecurity labs after her as a way of distinguishing her service and legacy for all future generations. Barbara's decorated career and decades of service to our warfighters, their families, and students of all ages in this community is simply extraordinary and has certainly left an incredible positive impact on Southern Maryland."

These words introduced the audience to reasons why this lady was selected to have this important, state-of-the-art facility named in her honor. Amazingly, there is much more to this than meets the eye. To establish these labs took great persistence and discussion to acquire the amount of funding needed to invest in this large, complex laboratory. These elaborate technical classrooms are not cheap. And there was no funding in the college's budget to make them happen. So loving a challenge, Barbara stepped forward to lend a hand. Her vast experience as an educator provided access to many friends who could be called upon to help with this effort. She teamed up with the Patuxent Partnership whose support was pivotal to making this desire become a reality. She sought government funding that was available for these purposes. And she called upon many friends who directed her to sources of funding as well.

Barbara is a friendly, bright, and charming lady with a warm personality and beautiful smile that will naturally open doors of opportunity. But don't be fooled as she is also very persuasive and always determined to meet any objective she may choose. It is this dedication that was instrumental in making the CSM cybersecurity labs becoming designated by the Department of Homeland Security and the National Security Agency as a "Center of Academic Excellence in Cyber Defense for 2-year programs." There is no doubt she was the right person at the right time to make it happen.

A quick glimpse at her impressive record of accomplishments reveals her ability to pursue two parallel careers, that of a Naval Officer and as a civilian educator and leader in academia. A 1980 honors graduate of the US Naval Academy in Annapolis, she was a member of the first class to include female midshipmen to graduate from this prestigious "men only" school. She pursued a naval career in the Meteorology and Oceanography field, but don't call her a "weather guesser." She fulfilled her 6-year obligation then transferred to the Naval Reserves where she continued for an additional 21 years and attained the rank of Captain. When she retired, she was the senior naval officer in her field.

Earlier in her career as a Lieutenant Junior Grade stationed in California, she was approached by a Lieutenant Glen Ives, a more senior officer, and gave him a "snappy" salute that thoroughly caught him off guard. She impressed him with her military bearing. As they chatted, she soon learned Glen was also a Naval Academy grad having graduated a few years earlier. They later married and started a family.

Barbara began her teaching career as a certified instructor in the California Community College system and then taught in several states due to their numerous Navy assignments. Her primary focus was in Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts and Math [STEAM]. She became a certified science fair judge for the Office of Naval Research. In 2001, the Ives family was transferred to Patuxent River and Barbara was hired by St. Mary's Ryken High School to teach Math and later became head of the Math Department. She was selected as "Veteran Teacher of the Year" by the Archdiocese of Washington and later honored by Maryland Governor Robert Ehrlich as a "National Honor Roll Outstanding American Teacher."

Later, Barbara founded and served as the Director of the Individual Augmentee Spouse Support Group [IASSG] an organization designed to support spouses and families of service members serving overseas fighting the Global War on Terror. Her program became the model for all of these programs that formed throughout the country. For her efforts she was awarded the Maryland Governor's Volunteer Service Award as well as the Navy Meritorious Public Service Award for her support of 450 spouses and their families during her service.

In 2008, Barbara was selected as Dean of Academics for St. Mary's Ryken and rapidly went to work with developing new innovative and effective STEAM programs. She again was recognized as a "Xaverian Pillar of the Community Leader" for her development, implementation and management of Xaverian Programs of Academic Excellence and STEAM curriculum. Additionally, she designed rigorous curricula to prepare her students for college. Further, she oversaw the development of a robotics programs and a Middle School Leadership Course with the support of many government leaders at the local, state, and national levels.

Over the years, this energetic lady continued to initiate programs to acknowledge the needs of citizens while demonstrating a lifetime commitment to community service in making a positive difference in the lives of others. She continues to receive recognition for her great volume of work. She recently was honored by the St. Mary's County Commission for Women with her selection for their "Ruth Bader Ginsberg Lifetime Achievement Award."

In January 2018, she was selected as the interim College of Southern Maryland Vice President and Dean at the Prince Frederick Campus responsible for supervising college administration and overseeing college operations. She also became involved with GI Enterprises, a firm that provides educational consulting to support grant, educational management, and leadership training needs for the Southern Maryland region including schools and the Navy. She has served as the CEO for this woman veteran owned small business.

Finally, just prior to Barbara's acceptance of this latest recognition by CSM, her husband Glen took the podium to offer some special remarks about his remarkable wife. He put many smiles on the faces of the audience when he mentioned "he never had his name placed on "anything." Many in the crowd knew Glen as a great and popular Commanding Officer for the Naval Air Station Patuxent River. He too has a great reputation as a leader and a friend who cares for others. He has fully supported Barbara's efforts over their many years together. They are a great team and are greatly missed by many here since their retirement to Florida two years ago. Although they have gone, they are not forgotten. Together, they have left a wonderful legacy and set a great example for all to follow.

$1.4M Grant Awarded for School-Based Health Centers

The St. Mary's County Health Department (SMCHD) has been awarded $1.435 million in grant funding through the Maryland Consortium on Coordinated Community Supports, which is responsible for developing a statewide framework to expand access for behavioral health services for Maryland students. Funding was made available by the Maryland General Assembly under the Blueprint for Maryland's Future.

SMCHD's Maryland Consortium on Coordinated Community Supports award will support the addition of behavioral health services for St. Mary's County youth at the two School-Based Health Centers (SBHCs) located at Margaret Brent and Spring Ridge Middle Schools. New services made available through this award are expected to begin in the Summer of 2024 and will include onsite evaluation and treatment for behavioral health concerns, individual and family counseling, care coordination and youth mentoring.

The SBHCs are open to all SBHC-enrolled SMCPs students and employees, regardless of host school, during and after school hours. The SBHCs are also available after school hours for general community members who enroll in the SBHC program. SMCHD provides routine and urgent medical care, rapid testing and management for colds and chronic illnesses, sports physicals, treatment of minor injuries, and primary care services at the SBHCs. Regardless of health insurance, all persons can be seen, and a sliding fee scale is available for those without insurance.

"This grant provides the resources we need to expand behavioral health services for St. Mary's County youth and grow our youth development programs," said Dr. Meena Brewster, St. Mary's County Health Officer. "The investments that the state and our County Commissioners made previously in our School-Based Health Centers are helping us bring additional grants and services to our county. I am grateful for their support, this new funding from the Maryland Consortium on Coordinated Community Supports, as well as the phenomenal work of our SMCHD Clinical Services Division Director Lisa Nelson and other health department team members leading this grant effort."

Bill Would Stall Further Growth at Abell Pot Farm

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Legislation passed in the Maryland General Assembly last year ensured that cannabis facilities such as growers, processors and distributors, faced even fewer restrictions on their operations from local jurisdictions than before, argues Sen. Jack Bailey (R-Dist.29).

This means that local zoning regulations that the Commissioners of St. Mary's County promulgated and passed in the aftermath of the construction of a 50,000 square foot industrial cannabis growing plant in the heart of the 7th District and the critical area have been essentially swept away, Bailey argued last week in committee hearings in the state senate, and a new bill he has introduced aims at giving control on such matters back to the local elected officials.

"These processes have had a significant detrimental effect on my constituents who live near a cannabis facility," Bailey testified in the senate of the facility located in Abell that drew much controversy over its construction a little over two years ago.

Bailey's bill — SB 158 — would statewide hold facilities that were permitted and licensed prior to Oct. 1, 2022 to once again by subject to local zoning laws on cannabis facilities.

Bailey said he has routinely heard complaints from neighbors of the facility about noise and cannabis smell emanating from it disturbing the rural character of their homes.

The facility was initially allowed to be built when a zoning department director in St. Mary's categorized the use as agricultural in nature, thus exempting it from public scrutiny and approval requirements in the normal channels of the planning commission.

Also, at that time, the county had no specific regulations regarding zoning for such facilities, leading county commissioners to create some in the aftermath.

This caused an uproar as a major industrial facility unlike any other in the critical area of the watershed was allowed to be built, seemingly in contravention of the same environmental law.

"It's not to say they're opposed to the facility right now," Bailey said of neighbors to what now stands in Abell. "What they're opposed to is that facility getting larger and having a detrimental effect on their area."

Matt Bohle, of RWL Law, representing Story of Maryland, the owners of the facility, said Bailey's legislation, if passed, would "create a patchwork system" of laws regulating cannabis.

"If counties are given greater authority to restrict this segment of the cannabis ecosystem it will result in less access and opportunity... a potentially create a patchwork system," Bohle said.

Bill Sullivan, executive vice president of operations for Story of Maryland, said the company has tried to maintain good relations with its neighbors in Abell as well as try to mitigate the smell and noise; any excess runoff from the facility's irrigation operations is collected and transported for treatment to Charles County at the Mattawoman-Beantown plant.

"The facility does not spill runoff into the nearby creek," Sullivan testified. "At this time, we do not have imminent plans to expand."

Sullivan said before the senate committee that his company is currently approved to expand by an additional 70,000 square feet.

Sullivan noted that the legislation, if passed, would essentially stall any expansion plans they may have at the Abell facility in the future and that would go for any other such license holders throughout the state.

Bailey said St. Mary's County was the original conservator of the watershed and the estuary.

"It's [the cannabis facility] right up against the water it is a huge industrial facility," Bailey argued. "This building is in direct conflict with everything we do."

"We are not here to limit medical marijuana in the State of Maryland."

Bailey further argued that Story of Maryland could eventually build two more cannabis growing buildings of the same size at the Abell property.

The zoning ordinances passed subsequently by the county to prevent such construction again in the critical area, Bailey said, were essentially made of none affect by cannabis legislation passed by the assembly last year.

"That is the whole reason we are here," Bailey said.

Kimberly Gibson, a local resident, said "gone are the days of serene quiet and fresh air" from her childhood home in Abell with the arrival of the cannabis facility.

"There is not a day that goes by that we do not hear the buzzing of the 20-plus air compressor units or smell the stench of marijuana in the air," Gibson testified before the senate Finance Committee on Feb. 15. "There is now a commercial, industrial operation improperly placed in the critical area."

As a hospice nurse, Gibson said she saw patients who had benefited from the use of medical marijuana, but the placement of the facility so close by in Abell detracted from the value of the neighborhood's homes.

"We never had the opportunity to participate in a public hearing prior to this monstrosity being erected," Gibson said. "There were no studies done, no informational sessions, it wasn't required because it was deemed agricultural."

"Now any efforts made by citizens leave us with dead end phone calls and finger pointing back and forth between the county and the state."

Chamber of Commerce Gala to Celebrate 50 Years

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The St. Mary's County Chamber of Commerce is celebrating half a century of bringing business, government and community together early next month at a gala evening in Callaway.

Dr. Christine Bergmark, president and CEO of the chamber, said the gala is open to members of the public who pay the entrance fee as well as chamber members; the evening will be full of networking opportunities as well.

"It's going to be a great event," Bergmark told The County Times. "Our goal is to thank the members of the chamber for all their support."

The chamber has accomplished much in its 50-year history, Bergmark said, including performing studies for the county on the need for workforce housing, forming recommendations for dealing with blight and advocating for tax reductions for commercial businesses.

"We bring together big business, small business, community, government and non-profits," Bergmark said. "That's our mandate."

Scheduled to take place at 6 p.m. on Friday, March 8 at The White Rose in Callaway, the gala will feature dinner and dancing, Bergmark said.

"We are thrilled to commemorate this significant milestone with our community," she said. "For five decades, we have stood as a beacon of support for local businesses, and this gala is a testament to our shared success and enduring partnerships."

Shed Fire Victim Identified, Cause Still Under Investigation

The victim of last Friday night's shed fire in Avenue has been identified as 26-year-old Joseph Williams Bowles, Jr.

Deputy State Fire Marshals have concluded the fire originated within an 8' x 10 shed in his parents' backyard. While the fire remains under investigation, they have not recovered evidence that it was an act of arson and continue to explore all possible accidental causes.

At around 11:00 p.m. on Friday, the owners reported their shed on fire, with their son possibly still inside.

Firefighters arrived and extinguished the fire in under 10 minutes and confirmed a deceased victim was inside.

The Office of the State Fire Marshals continues to work in collaboration with the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office, which is a standard operating procedure whenever a fatal fire occurs.

Although smoke alarms are not required in sheds, the Office of the State Fire Marshal requests everyone to remain vigilant in installing and maintaining smoke alarms in their homes and practice fire safety, including having an escape plan. "Please take time to ensure the safety of your family and friends by maintaining these early warning life safety devices," stated Acting State Fire Marshal Jason M. Mowbray.

Delegate Warns of Sexual Identity Amendment to Education Bill

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

During deliberations Feb. 20 in the Maryland General Assembly Del. Vanessa Atterbeary (D-Dist.13) from Howard County introduced an amendment to HB 558 — titled Comprehensive Health Education Framework — that would eliminate the ability of parents to remove their children from the teaching on gender identity and sexual orientation in public schools.

HB 558 is Atterbeary's bill and in floor deliberations she said that parents would still be able to opt their children out of family life curricula but not teachings on gender identity and sexual orientation.

Del. Matt Morgan (R-Dist. 29A) called the amendment an affront to parental rights.

"Remember when Democrats said gender identity ideology was not happening in our school," Morgan said in a social media post. "They just snuck in an amendment... that will disallow parents to opt out of the teaching of gender identity and sexual orientation curriculum.

"This curriculum will be taught to children as young as kindergartners."

In her testimony, Atterbeary said the curricula taught to students on gender identity and sexual orientation would be "age appropriate."

The amendment was adopted by acclamation vote.

"Tell them that your child is not their property," Morgan posted to constituents. "Tell them to stop taking away parental rights."

As originally written, the bill would have provided options for parents to hold their children back from health topics taught in school; the bill also leaves responsibility for the establishment of curriculum to county school systems.

The bill also covers mental and emotional health, substance abuse prevention, healthy eating, disease prevention and violence prevention.

The bill, which was introduced Jan. 24, has already passed its second reading in the House of Delegates and will next proceed to a third and final reading in the house before moving to the Senate.

Medical Director, Paramedic Still in Critical Condition

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Two key personnel in the county's Department of Emergency Services (DES) who suffered severe injuries during a traffic collision earlier this month are still in hospital and face a long and difficult period of recovery, according to an update given on their condition.

Kiersten Shea, deputy director of DES, said Paramedic Todd Bowman and Regional Medical Director Dr. Todd Finkelstein remain in critical condition after being struck by another vehicle while in the performance of their duties.

"Obviously, it's been a very challenging week," Shea said at the Feb. 14 meeting of the Emergency Services Board. "They remain in critical condition and they face a long road ahead of them with multiple surgeries still to come.

"We continue to hope for positive news on their outcomes."

Shea thanked multiple county agencies — including some in neighboring Calvert County — who rendered assistance to the local agency during this time.

A GoFundMe account has been established to help pay for the extensive medical bills for both men.

So far there have been 141 donations since their crash, totaling $17,405 raised for a goal of $20,000.

The crash occurred Feb. 8.

"One of the things we do well in St. Mary's County is we take care of each other," said county rescue chief Sean Davidson. "It's been a moving experience to see all of that happen."

Students Plan Walk Out in Protest Over School Safety

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Word has spread of a planned walk out by students throughout St. Mary's County Public Schools set for this Thursday, Feb. 22 in protest for more focus and resources on school safety and security, The County Times has learned.

The message has been spread on social media through students — but it also claims to invite staff to join students in a noise-less protest that would stay on campus.

Officially the school system has not commented on the potential walk-out but unofficially sources inside the school system have acknowledged the walk-out but say it is not sanctioned by the system.

A Great Mills High School student, Javari Dove, said he is the one who has organized the event with other like-minded students who are concerned about violence in his school in particular and the school system in general.

"It's to get everybody's attention on more safety in our schools," Dove said. "The school security personnel, they're not strict on us."

"That's why there are all these fights."

Dove said school security personnel often do not act to break up fights when they occur.

The school system has been shaken by recent events involving the threat of gun violence as well.

Earlier this month four former students at Great Mills High School illegally entered the building while students were changing classes and took several images of themselves in various parts of the school and posted them on line.

Some of those images showed that one of them very likely had a gun. When they were confronted by school security staff — after students had noticed the unauthorized entrants and reported them — the four trespassers fled without incident.

In the aftermath several of the intruders were arrested and charged and a firearm recovered but parents were still in shock over the ease with which the intruders gained access to the building and their ability to bring a firearm with them.

In another incident that happened last week the sheriff's office was alerted to a student at Spring Ridge Middle School about a student who had been inquiring of others about how to acquire a gun.

Other social media posts from Spring Ridge students also warned not to come to school because a student was planning to bring a gun, the sheriff's office reported.
