HE CAN HELP

It can be hard to admit we need help.

It can be frustrating, disappointing, and embarrassing.

We don't want to show weakness, and we want to feel self-sufficient, as though we can, and will, take on the world.

But there are times when we simply are unable to move forward without someone to give us a hand, whether it's in our work, our social life, or our recreation.

Sometimes we refuse help because the person offering is not close to us, and sometimes it's because we feel that we don't deserve the help.

In the Gospel of John, we see a situation very similar to this. Jesus had gathered all of His disciples for Passover for a supper of celebration on the night He would be betrayed. Before eating, Jesus donned servant's clothing and offered to wash the feet of His friends, an act of service of which Peter deemed himself unworthy. When Jesus came to him, Peter questioned the purpose and then declared that Jesus would "Never wash my feet!" He couldn't see a world in which his Lord should take on a servant's position, helping him with such a lowly task.

But Jesus responded with words which cut to the heart of His reasons, saying, "If I do not wash you, you have no share with me." And so Peter accepted Jesus's offer of help.

Many of us can be like Peter, at times. "Certainly, God wouldn't help me with this," or "God doesn't want to help me because of that." But He is willing and desiring to be the help we need, loving us all with a love expressed by His sacrifice on the cross.

Jesus told Peter that He wanted to wash Peter's feet to make him clean. Likewise, He has spilled His blood in sacrifice, hoping that we would be washed by His blood so that we can be made clean in Him. He, long ago, put on His servant's clothing by coming down to us in flesh and took up the lowly position of suffering the consequences of our sin, so that we could wash in His grace and be made whole in Him. He's now waiting for us to accept His offer to help.

And the help Jesus offers is not just an offer of salvation after death, but a promise to help us in life. He will seek and work towards a better way of life for us, through our relationship with Him, in our relationships with others, and in our view of ourselves. Jesus has offered us a way out of the negative we see around and within us.

If you've been feeling the weight of this world but don't know where to turn, please remember that Jesus is waiting patiently, arms open. I pray that you will find His embrace and allow Him to begin healing you and to wash away the sin and the hurt that weigh us all down.

Budget, with Tax, Fee Increases, Goes to Public Hearing

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The public will soon have the chance to tell the Commissioners of St. Mary's County their thoughts on the fiscal 2025 operating budget after local leaders approved the spending plan go to public hearing.

The latest budget contains an increase in the income tax rate from 3 percent to 3.2 percent, an increase in the fire and rescue tax for three volunteer fire companies — Leonardtown, Mechanicsville and Ridge as well as other fee increases.

The total operating budget for the coming fiscal year is $329 million, according to county budget documents, with an unassigned fund balance of about $5.4 million added to bolster the operating funds.

The commissioners have a reserve to allocate as they see fit to honor certain budget requests of a little over $573,000.

The fire tax increases requested would raise the rate to 5.6 cents per $100 of assessment, county budget documents show.

Four of the five county commissioners voted to approve the budget as written; Commissioner Mike Hewitt, who has opposed any tax increases this year and was especially vocal in opposing the income tax increase voted against approving the budget proposal.

All five commissioners did vote to schedule the April 23 public hearing on the fiscal 2025 budget; commissioners said in the prior budget work session of March 19 that they would reconsider raising the income tax if public outcry against the increase was sufficient.

Commissioner Eric Colvin proposed the income tax increase in previous budget work sessions in order to provide an additional $7 million for the county public schools system to fulfill state mandates of providing base level teacher salaries of $60,000.

Superintendent Dr. J. Scott Smith warned without this extra funding that the system would likely have to cut up to 120 positions and even consider redistricting students to other schools so they could shut down one of them to save operating costs.

Commissioner Rails Against Assault on CHS Student

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office recently announced that one student at Chopticon High School was assaulted by five others earlier this month, with one of the alleged attackers being charged with both first-and-second-degree assault.

Commissioner Mike Alderson, a parent of a student at Chopticon High School, decried the "cowardly" assault this week near the end of the regular business meeting of the Commissioners of St. Mary's County.

"What bothers me the most about this as a parent ... is that we received no notification other than what my son told me a couple of days ago," Alderson said.

The sheriff's office reported that the assault occurred March 4, approximately three weeks ago.

The initial investigation by the sheriff's office revealed that five students attacked another student in the hallway of the school. Specifically, during the assault, the suspect's actions had the potential to cause life-threatening, severe, serious bodily injury to the victim, the sheriff's office reported.

That male juvenile has been charged as an adult.

The other four suspects involved in the assault have been charged as juveniles with second-degree assault, according to the sheriff's office.

The school system, sheriff's office and state's attorney's office "need to come down very, very hard on this," Alderson said, owing to the rumored reasons for the assault on the student.

"This behavior cannot be tolerated," Alderson, whose wife is also a public school teacher, said. "If you allow this kind of behavior in school, unchecked, these kids turn into adults who believe that behavior can carry on into adulthood.

"We cannot stand for that as a society."

Alderson said it "pained" him as a county commissioner to be made by the state to fund schools where this kind of behavior continued.

MedStar Surgeon Makes a Home in St. Mary's

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Dr. Veronica Marshall has only been working at MedStar St. Mary's Hospital in Leonardtown for less than a year now, but she said she and her husband already plan on making a life here for the foreseeable future.

"I really enjoy St. Mary's County," said the Pennsylvania native, noting that the local hospital where she performs surgeries largely reflects the type of community she has come to call home.

"I like the community atmosphere," Marshall told The County Times of the local MedStar unit. "They truly focus on quality patient care."

"I want to treat them [the patient] like people rather than a number."

Marshall's route to becoming a doctor — specifically a general surgeon — is an interesting one.

She attended Grove City College, also in Pennsylvania, majoring in history with a concentration in pre-medical studies.

"I'm glad I had a concentration in the humanities," Marshall said. "It reminded me of the importance of focusing on people."

Before completing her medical training, she even worked as a sailor on board a tall ship, the U.S. Brig Niagara, that sailed Lake Erie.

The heavy emphasis on hard work and team work on board ship appealed to her nature, which she carried over into the operating room.

"It showed me the importance of doing something that needs to be done, you work hard at it," Marshall said.

As a board-certified general surgeon, Marshall is kept busy tending to patients, but she is one of a new breed of surgeons who are using the latest technology that changes what it means to go under the physician's knife.

She does a lot of laproscopic procedures — or surgeries that use small incisions, aided by a camera, into the abdominal or pelvic areas, that are designed to be minimally invasive.

Her skills are augmented when using the surgical robot known as the Da Vinci machine.

"It allows us to see the anatomy better," she said of the multi-armed surgical robot that performs the surgery with her at the controls. "We do a lot of abdominal work."

The machine provides a three-dimensional image versus the normal laproscopic procedure using the camera which provides a two-dimensional image on a screen, offering greater precision.

This translates into easier and faster recovery times for patients.

"It makes it significantly better for patients," Marshall said. "Patients do very, very well afterwards."

"It's the wave of the future."

Though she wants to engage in what she calls minimally invasive surgeries, Marshall said, there are still times when she must take much more invasive steps to make a patient better.

Marshall said she admires her colleagues in medicine, but being a surgeon means the most to her in what she can accomplish in a relatively short amount of time.

"What makes a good surgeon is also knowing when not to cut," Marshall said. "But, I'd much rather get in there and get things done, take out what needs to be taken out." Marshall and her husband have just welcomed a baby boy into their lives.

"I plan on staying here for some time," Marshall said.

Changes Proposed to Animal Control Ordinance

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Significant changes could be coming to the county's animal control laws, including more stringent and expensive regulations pertaining to the ownership of dogs.

At their March 19 meeting the Commissioners of St. Mary's County were briefed on the culmination of several years of work to revise the county's animal control ordinance.

Perhaps the most significant change to the ordinance, which was last updated in 2017, is the institution of a fee for a dog license and a $250 fine for not having a license.

"Currently the average is about 2,000 a year," said Animal Control Warden Joy Wilson of the number of dog licenses the county provides.

The number of owners with dogs who must get a license, which is proof of rabies vaccination, is much more than the annual number, she intimated.

"Hopefully this [new ordinance] will bring our compliance much higher," Wilson said.

In response to a question on the necessity of licensing from Commissioner Eric Colvin, Wilson replied that the county had to follow state law in requiring that canines be licensed.

"We know we're bringing animals into rabies compliance [with licensing]," Wilson said. "If they have the dog licensed, we know where they live."

If a licensed dog goes missing, that can help reunite them with their family.

"We can get them home," Wilson said, noting there is "a very large population" of unregistered dogs in St. Mary's.

The fee for a dog license would be set by the county commissioners each year, according to the updated, proposed ordinance.

The new ordinance also makes illegal the feeding of stray cats in public parks operated by the county, which has long been the practice of certain cat lovers in the Lexington Park area and elsewhere for years.

Computer Scientist Runs for District 4 School Board Seat

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Charles Carrington, a 27-year-old computer scientist who works for the federal government says that parents need to go back to being more involved in the education of their children and he wants to win the District 4 school board seat to aid in that return.

Carrington, who lives in Lexington Park, is especially worried about young men in schools, who he said are being left to their own devices with predictable results.

"They get involved in stealing cars, becoming violent," Carrington told The County Times. "My main thing is addressing the needs of these young boys.

"We don't pay attention to them until they become a problem."

He said he wants to ensure that all students are well instructed in the basics of mathematics and reading, especially with an eye towards teaching them how to think and learn properly and not just gather information.

Parents are key in achieving that goal, Carrington said.

"That means getting the PTAs and PTOs back in schools," Carrington said.

He also wanted to institute tutoring programs for students in need of help with subject matter but also wanted to extend help to parents so they could tutor their own children.

"How long has it been since you've taken a geometry test?" Carrington asked by way of explanation. "It also helps when it comes to things of a moral question that teachers and parents are on the same page."

Parents, he said, should know what their teachers are sharing with their children and also have a say in what their children are taught.

Getting parents more involved in the education of children, even making them more able to participate in the educating, worked, Carrington said, because his parents and teachers worked together closely.

"I'm a result of cooperation between parents and teachers," Carrington said. "Education is a community responsibility."

Traffic Stop Results in Arrest for Drugs and Concealed Weapon

On Sunday, March 24, 2024, James Errick Barnes, 52, of Lexington Park, MD, was arrested following a traffic stop conducted by Patrol Deputies from the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office.

During proactive traffic patrol in Lexington Park, Deputy Joseph Senatore witnessed a Ford Taurus fail to stop as required by a traffic control device. A traffic stop was initiated at Great Mills Road near North Essex Drive. During the traffic stop, deputies observed the operator pass an item to a passenger in the vehicle, who then attempted to conceal the item. The operator, identified as James Errick Barnes, was found to be unlicensed, and the vehicle was unregistered. A subsequent search of the vehicle by Cpl. Lacey Smith and K9 Kyra revealed narcotics and a brass knuckle knife.

Barnes was transported to the St. Mary's County Detention and Rehabilitation Center and charged with concealment of a dangerous weapon, CDS: Possession

James Errick Barnes

Not Cannabis, and CDS: Possession of Paraphernalia. Barnes was also issued traffic citations for 12 related violations of Maryland Vehicle Law.

Town to Mull "Ice House" Project Proposal for Wharf

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

For almost two decades now the Town of Leonardtown has been seeking interested developers who might be willing to establish some sort of restaurant, eatery or food court at their wharf property at the end of Washington Street.

After sending out a request for proposals in January, said Town Administrator Laschelle McKay, the town is now ready to examine one.

"We have a presentation that the person who responded to the proposal will give and then it will go to the [town council]," McKay said. "Right now, it's a negotiation on how the deal will be constructed."

The details of the proposal, which the town is not divulging to the public yet, will be negotiated between the developer, McKay said, and a committee to include her, Mayor Dan Burris and newly-hired Main Street Manager Emily Stagner and a member of the consultant group the town has hired to help carry out the development of the wharf property.

The plan would then go to the town council for consideration in public, McKay said.

"The details would be worked out in private negotiations," McKay said.

The town's plans to develop the wharf property include a structure that would serve to house multiple food vendors — named "The Ice House" — and boost tourism and public use of the wharf.

McKay said the initial meeting with the as-yet-unnamed developer was set for the first week in April.

"We're excited," McKay said. "Hopefully it will come to fruition."

St. Mary's to Adopt Maryland Building Performance Standards

In compliance with State law and the Code of Maryland Regulations (COMAR), St. Mary's County Government's Department of Land Use & Growth Management (LUGM) will begin the adoption process for Maryland Building Performance Standards (MBPS). This initiative includes the incorporation of the International Code Council's 2021 version of the International Building Code, the International Energy Conservation Code, the International Residential Code, and the International Green Construction Code, as modified by the Maryland Department of Labor and published in COMAR. More information can be found online at: <https://www.dlhr.state.md.us/labor/build/buildcodes.shtml>.

St. Mary's County Government is obligated by law to ensure that the implementation and enforcement of the MBPS includes the following:

- Review and acceptance of appropriate plans for permitting.
- Issuance of building permits.
- Inspection of work authorized by building permits.
- Issuance of use and occupancy certificates.

LUGM will also review additional codes drafted by the International Code Council, such as the National Electrical Code and the Maryland Swimming Pool and Spa Standards, which have been amended by various State agencies including the Maryland Department of Labor and the State Boards of Plumbing and Heating, Ventilation, Air-Conditioning, and Refrigeration.

The Department's review of the 2021 International Codes aims to identify necessary modifications relevant to St. Mary's County. The following tentative timeline has been established and the Department intends to collaborate with stakeholders throughout the process:

- January 2024: Feedback solicited from various stakeholder boards, including the Building Code Board of Appeals, the Electrical Board, and the Plumbing & Gas Board.
- April 2024: Local amendments drafted and made available for public review and comment before consideration by the Commissioners of St. Mary's County (CSMC). Public comments can be emailed to bpservice@stmaryscountymd.gov.

- April 9, 2024: LUGM will submit a request to the Commissioners of St. Mary's County (CSMC) to hold a public hearing on April 30, 2024, to receive public testimony prior to adoption.

LUGM is considering adopting the following codes, which have been partially modified by various State agencies responsible for creating them:

- COMAR 09.12.50
- COMAR 09.12.51

NAVAL AIR STATION PATUXENT RIVER News

Contract Awarded for New Block III Super Hornet Aircraft

The U.S. Navy awarded The Boeing Company a $1.3 billion contract March 19 for the purchase of 17 F/A-18 Super Hornets and delivery of a technical data package vital to the sustainment of the platform.

"The technical data package was a crucial part of this negotiation; it is necessary for naval aviation's operational readiness and post-production sustainment," said Rear Adm. John Lemmon, Program Executive Officer for Tactical Aircraft Programs. "The Super Hornet remains a predominant aircraft in the carrier air wing and will continue to provide significant combat capability into the 2040s."

The Navy received appropriated funds from Congress to purchase these Super Hornets to help mitigate the strike fighter shortfall. The award is an Undefined Contract Action with the intent to definitize within the next few months.

"I am very proud of our team; their mission-focused mindset, data-driven approach and persistence resulted in an agreement that will greatly benefit the sustainment of the Super Hornet and Growler aircraft well into the future," said Capt. Michael Burks, Program Manager for the F/A-18 and EA-18G Program Office. "It is our job to ensure our warfighters have all the necessary resources to defend our nation and return home safely."

Delivery of the new Super Hornets is scheduled to begin in the winter of 2026, with final delivery no later than spring 2027.

School System Offers Solar Eclipse Viewing

A partial solar eclipse will occur on Monday, April 8, 2024, in St. Mary's County. The eclipse will begin at approximately 2:00 p.m. and end just after 4:30 p.m., with maximum coverage at approximately 3:20 p.m. During the eclipse, there will be 86-88% coverage, during which it will get darker outside, but there will not be total darkness.

All St. Mary's County Public Schools (SMCPS) dismiss at some point during the eclipse period. Families and students should be aware of the following safety tips:

- Never look directly at the sun, especially during a solar eclipse. It is dangerous and can cause permanent damage to the eyes. Do not look at the sun through sunglasses, telescopes, or binoculars.
- Anyone using special viewing glasses or filters should only use those that conform to all International Organization for Standardization (ISO) standards.
- If you purchase special viewing glasses, ensure they are from reputable manufacturers. There have been reports of counterfeit products labeled as if they conform to international safety standards. The American Astronomical Society, whose products are known to conform to ISO standards, provides a list of reputable companies that conform to safety standards.

Eclipse resources for elementary students, including how to safely view the eclipse, will be shared with schools on April 2.

Students and families are encouraged to read more about solar eclipses and safety and enjoy experiencing this exciting phenomenon.

Families and students can safely view the eclipse via live stream at science.nasa.gov.

In addition, St. Mary's County libraries will host the following Solar Eclipse Parties:

- Charlotte Hall Library on Friday, March 29 at 2 pm: <https://stmalib.libnet.info/event/9822769>
- Leonardtown Library on Friday, March 29 at 2 pm — this program is already full, but folks can join the waitlist for a spot in case of cancellations: <https://stmalib.libnet.info/event/9704060>
- Lexington Park Library on Saturday, March 30 at 2 p.m.: <https://stmalib.libnet.info/event/10155082>

Everyone who attends will receive eclipse-viewing glasses (and make their own pinhole viewer). If the branches have surplus glasses after their programs, they will be available to library visitors on a first-come, first-served basis while supplies last. Then, on the day of the eclipse, the Mobile Library will be at the Dorsey Park pavilion with the same solar science activities and more glasses to give away.

Spring Celebration for the Battle of St. George Island

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Southern Maryland usually doesn't figure prominently in the list of great battles of the Revolutionary War in most history lessons, but in the summer of 1776, shortly after the colonies declared their independence from Great Britain, local militia members repulsed British regulars from the shores of St. George Island.

For Maryland, it was the biggest battle of the nascent nation's war for independence against its far-flung colonial master. It was also the only Revolutionary War battle to occur in Maryland.

The county is holding a celebration April 6 at the Piney Point Lighthouse Museum — near the sight of the centuries-old battle — to commemorate the local patriots who fought to make America free.

Rebels and Redcoats will offer military reenactments, historical displays of life in Revolutionary War-era Maryland, period encampments, food vendors and more, according to the St. Mary's County Recreation and Parks Museum Division.

The all-day event is free to the public.

On July 16, 1776 a British invasion fleet attempted to invade St. George Island; John Murray, the Earl of Dunmore, had been the colonial governor of Virginia before being driven out by colonists.

Murray took to using British naval force to prosecute raids against patriot forces along the Chesapeake Bay coast in an attempt to reestablish royal control over the region and resupply his forces.

By July of 1776, Dunmore had about 70 ships that needed resupplying as Maryland patriot troops were gathering in Annapolis to head to New York to counter the next anticipated major British strike.

But warnings soon came to the patriot forces that a major naval flotilla was coming up from the south near Point Lookout to threaten patriot forces in their rear.

The British were able to land about 10 boats full of troops to forage for supplies; they also dumped bodies of those who had perished from small pox on the journey up and down the coast.

By July 16, though, patriot forces had arrived under the command of local militia Captain Rezin Beall, who led his 100 militiamen in a holding action that prevented the enemy from again coming ashore on St. George Island.

The militiamen lay in wait, hiding in bushes along the shore line, and fired on the landing boats and the troops within when they rowed into range.

By July 19, about 400 militiamen had arrived in St. George Island and were able to keep Dunmore and his forces from establishing a base of operations there.

The Battle of St. George Island is recognized as one of the earliest victories for the patriots in their war for independence against King George III, though it is mostly thought of as a major skirmish rather than a fully-fledged battle.

History records five British ships being disabled during the battle, which were scuttled under the orders of Dunmore to prevent them from falling into the hands of rebel forces.

The Institute of Maritime History has targeted the battle site, where the St. Mary's River joins the Potomac River, as worthy of underwater investigation in an attempt to find the remains of what has been called "Dunmore's Floating City."

Bob Crickenberger, a member of the Friends of Point Lookout which will take part in the event Apr. 6 as part of the St. Mary's Militia, said the militia and members of the Continental Army, which were from Maryland, returned from Annapolis to counter the British invasion.

Crickenberger and other reenactors will be on hand in Revolutionary War gear, garb and weapons — including a reproduction cannon from that era — to give visitors a glimpse into what the patriots had to deal with on short notice.

"It was a smart skirmish," Crickenberger said of the relatively low casualty rate suffered on both sides versus the tactical benefits the patriots achieved.

"They held them off," Crickenberger said of the combined force of militia and regular troops. "They [the British] could have held those Maryland troops from going to [Gen. George] Washington's army.

"That's one possibility."

Southern Maryland acquitted itself well in the Revolutionary War, both on its one home front battle on St. George Island and throughout other campaigns.

Maryland troops gained notoriety for aiding Washington's retreat from impending destruction during the Battle of Long Island in New York; it is here that Maryland gained the name "The Old Line State" from the stalwart behavior of its troops in that battle.

"It was big news down here at that time," Crickenberger said of the skirmish at St. George Island. "Here's the British coming down on us right off the coast.

"We lucked out; the British Navy was the most powerful in the world at that time."

FINANCIAL FOCUS®

When should you take Social Security?

One of your important sources of retirement income will likely be Social Security — but when should you start taking it?

You can start collecting Social Security benefits at 62, but your checks will be considerably bigger if you wait until your full retirement age, which is likely between 66 and 67. You could even wait until you're 70, at which point the payments will max out, except for yearly cost-of-living adjustments. But if you need the money, you need the money, even if you're just 62 or any age before full retirement age.

However, if you have adequate financial resources to meet your monthly needs, whether through earned income, your investment portfolio or a combination of the two, you could have some flexibility in choosing when to take Social Security. In this case, you may want to weigh these considerations:

- Life expectancy – For all of us, it's one of life's great mysteries: How long will we live? Of course, we can't see into the future, so the question can't be answered with total confidence. But to make an informed decision on when to take Social Security, you don't need to know your exact lifespan — you just need to make a reasonably good estimate. So, for example, if you're approaching 62, you're enjoying excellent health and you have a family history of longevity, you might conclude it's worth waiting a few years to collect Social Security, so you can receive the bigger payments. Conversely, if your health is questionable and your family has not been fortunate in terms of longevity, you might want to start taking your benefits earlier.
- Employment – You can certainly continue working and still receive Social Security benefits. However, if you're under your full retirement age for the entire year, Social Security will deduct $1 from your benefits for every $2 you earn above the annual limit of $22,320. In the year you reach your full retirement age, Social Security will deduct $1 in benefits for every $3 you earn above $59,520. So, you may want to keep these reductions in mind when deciding when to begin accepting benefits. Once you reach your full retirement age, you can earn any amount without losing benefits. (Also, at your full retirement age, Social Security will recalculate your benefit amount to credit you for the months you received reduced benefits because of your excess earnings.)
- Spouse – Spouses can receive two types of Social Security benefits: spousal and survivor. With a spousal benefit, your spouse can receive up to 50% of your full retirement benefits, regardless of when you start taking them. (Your spouse's benefit can be reduced by the amount of their own retirement benefit and whether they took Social Security before their full retirement age.) But with a survivor benefit, your decision about when to take Social Security can make a big difference. A surviving spouse can receive the larger of their own benefit or 100% of a deceased spouse's benefit, so if you take benefits early and receive a permanent reduction, your spouse's survivor benefit may also be reduced for their lifetime.

When to take Social Security is an important — and irrevocable — decision. So, consider all the factors before making your choice.

Wanderings of an Aimless Mind

by Shelby Oppermann

Happy Spring Thoughts

Yesterday, my back fence neighbor and I were talking about what flowers to plant that will not get eaten by moles, voles, deer, and insects. I believe the end result was to plant marigolds. I remember hearing many years ago that vegetable gardeners would plant them around the plot to ward off certain creatures. I may have to surround the hostas and daylilies too. Nothing seems to bother the daffodils thank goodness. Normally, our pansies were not bothered but last year the deer ate them as hors d'oeuvres.

What I would love to plant are hyacinths again. My husband normally gets me flowers or a hyacinth pot to put on the table for Easter. I usually have to plant the hyacinths quickly because I am so highly allergic to their beautiful scent. Previous Easter's hyacinths used to come back year after year, but a few years back something would come and eat the blooms by the next day. Our yard has become a smorgasbord for creatures.

At present, no flowers, Easter baskets, or anything else can fit on the dining room table because I have about 5 piles of LLC tax items spread out on one long side of the table just waiting to be added up and taken to our tax preparer. My husband's bread and snack basket takes up one short side of the table. The other short side is where I put all my paperwork that needs to be gone through and dealt with. Mindy's snacks are on the other long side. And with the two tier fruit basket and napkin holder in the middle it is impossible to see the surface of the table. Somehow it will be clear before Easter... or more like on Easter morning.

And somehow, everything will get dusted, vacuumed, and mopped before Easter morning; those usually are Saturday's tasks though I've been doing little bits here and there as my back allows. I had two cortisone shots Friday and may have overdone things on a very busy weekend for us. I stupidly danced a couple dances at The Blues Brothers live show down at The White Rose Hall in Callaway – very fun night. But it felt sooo good – until the next day anyway when I could barely move. My husband kept saying when we got home, "I tried to tell you not to do it". But there are times when you just want to feel normal or like you used to feel and took for granted. I just wanted to dance!!! I never realized back problems can nearly grind you to a halt until the fall of 2020.

But I am happy because Easter is almost here, and I cannot wait to see the early morning sunlight filter through the colorful Easter bags, or the happiness in our grandkids' eyes. A photo is attached from a past Easter Sunday. I have loved that memory from childhood of the sunlight streaming through purple, red, and yellow cellophane and creating prisms on the table and floor. I have no photos of Easter growing up, but that image is imprinted on my mind like a photograph. One of my favorite memories of Easter was the little bottles of Harvey's Bristol Cream Sherry that my mother would put in our Easter baskets. No, I have not kept that tradition alive for our grandkids.

Springtime thoughts of our Christ Church Lenten and Easter week preparations, spring flowers, spring cleaning and Easter Sunday happiness are heavy on my mind. My husband will smoke a ham starting early Easter morning. It always tastes so good. Depending on how many family members are coming, we sometimes bake a spiral ham as well. I also thought about getting an already cooked smoked salmon slice this year to have out as an appetizer. My husband just came home from errands, and lo and behold he bought the ham, other groceries, and a beautiful bouquet of flowers. Uh oh, I guess I better start getting that dining room table cleared off earlier than Saturday. So, I will get to that, but I want to wish for you a beautiful spring Easter weekend with thoughts of the resurrection, our own renewal and a host of family to cherish and love.

To each new day's adventure, Shelby

County Escalates Sign Enforcement

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

As the Calvert County Department of Planning and Zoning continues to work on updating the county's zoning ordinance, only minor changes are being proposed for the sign regulations contained within it. But the county is launching on a new sign enforcement initiative.

According to a press release from the county, "The Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) recently approved a proactive initiative aimed at enhancing the safety and aesthetics of our community by eliminating unpermitted signage that does not conform to the signage regulations. These unpermitted signs pose a hinderance to motorists by obstructing views at intersections and they contribute to excessive clutter along our roadways.

"Beginning April 1, 2024, unpermitted signs will be removed by the Department of Public Works staff. The signs will be stored for two weeks at the Appeal Landfill located at 401 Sweetwater Road in Lusby and may be retrieved by the owner for a fee of $6 per sign. Any signs remaining after two weeks will be discarded.

"The BOCC encourages all residents and businesses to support this initiative by adhering to the sign regulations listed in the Calvert County Zoning Ordinance. If you require permitted signage, the process is designed to accommodate legal and safe placement. View the sign ordinance at <https://ecode360.com/29293346Z>. By working together, we can ensure pleasing aesthetics, safer roadways, and intersections free of obstructions."

The existing and proposed sign regulations were explained by Planner III / Zoning Will Hager at a March 20 joint work session with the county commissioners and the planning commission.

Hager explained, "Current sign regulations go all the way back to 2011. The BOCC directed staff to complete a comprehensive review of sign regulations using a large stakeholder group to simplify, make more consistent, and to address the filing issues, regulation of signs on vehicles, banners attached to vehicles, and the use of vehicles in parking lots as signs. Again, temporary signs, specifically the placing of signs near competitors' businesses, and the lack of enforcement of size of signs, complaints that the permitted sizes of the signs were too small to read from the road, farm signs on farms not located on a main road, and off-prem directional signs. And considering the allowance of electronic signs on and off premises for individual businesses and/or shared by multiple businesses.

"Meetings were held on a regular basis in 2012 and 2013 to study the issues and to develop proposed changes.

"In 2015, there was a US Supreme Court decision, Reed vs. town of Gilbert, Arizona, where the court found that communities cannot regulate signs based on the content of the sign. You should not have to read the sign to determine how to regulate it.

"Since the county's draft regulations included content-based regulations, the draft regulations needed to be reworked to address the Supreme Court's decision. The county hired a consultant to write new sign regulations to address the US Supreme Court case to be content neutral. Public meetings were held in 2015 to allow for public input on the draft regulations."

Hager said, "Options for decision in the joint public hearing included window signs to be allowed with a restriction exemption of inward facing signs for stadiums, open air theaters, parks, and similar use facilities. Electronic message centers were to be permitted and the amount of time a message may change. The updated sign regulations were officially incorporated into Calvert County zoning ordinance in early 2018."

Hager said because those regulations are relatively new, major changes this time around were not deemed necessary, although he said that could change based on public comment. So far there has been none.

The only proposed change Hager explained: "Signs will be removed when the circumstances leading to its erection or installation no longer apply."

Commissioner Catherine Grasso asked, "What do we do, with the advent of shopping centers up and down Route 4 and businesses with beer being advertised on sale, mattress flags flapping, and then on the weekend, and it seems to go into the beginning of the week, we have those trashy little signs. You know, you have to have 50 of them in one spot. I don't know why."

Grasso was informed about the new county enforcement effort. "That's great," she responded.

Director of Planning and Zoning Mary Beth Cook

Director of Planning and Zoning Mary Beth Cook said, "For years there was, what we called a handshake agreement with realtors, and it extended to businesses, that we weren't going to regulate if they put signs up on Friday night and took them down on Sunday. It went in waves where there would be compliant because they were limited to the number that they could have."

But she added, "State Highway would pick them up on occasion. They haven't been doing that so much anymore. So, we got together internally as a county and public works is going to start April 1 picking up those signs, not only on the weekends, but during the week."

Changes Approved for Emergency Communications

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) on March 26 approved three regulation changes affecting emergency communications. The approvals came after three separate public hearings during which there was no opposition voiced.

The changes are:

- Incorporating the provisions of Kari's Law into county code.
- Requiring emergency communication compatibility for new construction and major renovations.
- Raising the 9-1-1 county surcharge fee to be consistent with state law.

Communications Chief Stanley Harris provided briefings on each of the proposals. He explained, "Kari's Law was enacted by Congress in 2018 following the tragic death of Kari Hunt, who was killed by her estranged husband on December 1, 2013, in a Texas motel bathroom. Hunt's daughter attempted to dial 911 four times without success, as she was unaware that the hotel telephone system required dialing an additional access digit, "9," to reach an outside line. Maryland Public Safety Code § 1-314 mandates that multiple-line telephone systems connect directly to a public safety answering point (PSAP) without necessitating the user to dial any supplementary numbers. Additionally, the enforcement and PSAP certification of compliance are integral aspects of the code."

For the second proposal, Harris explained, "Calvert County operates an 800 MHz digital trunked public safety radio system for first responder's communications within the county, while the State of Maryland operates a statewide 700 MHz digital trunked public safety radio system. These systems are utilized by both local and State first responders in Calvert County. However, modern building design and construction techniques, particularly those required for LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) certified building designs, can hinder reliable two-way radio coverage for first responders inside buildings. The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) 1 Fire Code, 2021 Edition, and NFPA 101 Life Safety Code, 2021 Edition, outline requirements for ensuring reliable public safety radio system coverage in both new and existing structures."

As to the 911 fee increase, he said, "Telecommunications service providers offering "9-1-1 accessible service" in Maryland are mandated to collect a 9-1-1 surcharge fee for each subscriber. In 2003, Maryland enacted House Bill 780 to bolster the 9-1-1 Trust Fund, augmenting services for wireless callers. This legislation increased the State monthly fee from $0.10 to $0.25, with counties empowered to adjust their local charge to $0.75. Until 2019, the fee stood at $1 per phone account in Maryland. In 2019, the General Assembly passed Carl Henn's Law, implementing recommendations from the Commission to Advance Next Generation 911 (NG911) Across Maryland. This included a fee increase for 9-1-1 services, as existing revenues covered only about 40 percent of actual costs. Instead of the previous $1.00 per phone bill, the new structure charges $1.25 per phone line, thereby raising the State portion of the surcharge $0.25 and encompassing mobile phone accounts with multiple numbers. Carl Henn's Law also enabled counties to increase the County portion of the surcharge from $0.75 to a maximum of $2.25 per subscriber. Since 2003, it is pertinent to highlight that the county portion of the surcharge has remained constant at $0.75."

Regarding Kari's Law, Commissioner President Buddy Hance said, "Just so everybody understands, this is a system whereby if you have to dial a number to get out, it eliminates that process for 9 1."

Hance wanted to know who would cover the cost. Harris said, "The cost is covered by the business," adding, "They would work with their telephone provider to strip that number from any phone to dial 9-1-1."

Harris added, "Maryland law requires it. We're just incorporating that into the county code ordinances."

Regarding building compatibility for emergency communications, Hance said, "So just once again, so everybody understands, if somebody's building a new building, if there's some design feature in that building that would inhibit radio communications, we would ask them to alter that design or make some change to make sure that there is communications inside and outside."

Harris said those constructing new buildings will be notified of the provision. For willful violations, there would be "a $100 fine for the first offense and $200 every day that you're in non-compliance for a second and every subsequent event." Harris said. They would be given enough time to correct the problem before the fines kick in.

Chesapeake Beach Honors George Owings

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

April 11 of every year will be George W. Owings, III Day in the Town of Chesapeake Beach. The town council established the day in a resolution passed on March 21 9n honor of the long-time public servant who died on Oct. 41 of last year.

The council in the same resolution renamed the town's annual Memorial Day weekend festival as the George W. Owings, III Stars and Stripes Festival.

Owings was a state delegate for 16 years (1988-2004) and was Maryland Secretary of Veterans Affairs under governors Robert Ehrlich and Larry Hogan (2004-07, 2015-23). Owings, a Democrat, held a major legislative leadership position (majority whip) for 10 years.

The resolution enacted by the council noted that Owings "was born on April 11, 1945, grew up in North Beach, and proudly referred to himself as a 'Beach Kid'."

He was raised in Calvert County and attended Calvert High School before enlisting and serving in the United States Marine Corps and the Vietnam War from 1964 until 1968.

The resolution took note of the fact that Owing was "an advocate of our first responders (and) testified, along with Mayor Mahoney, North Beach Volunteer Fire Department Chief Mills, and late President Weber before the Maryland State Senate, to rename the Fishing Creek Bridge, the Fallen Heroes Bridge."

It further stated that Owings "believed in service and with vigor fought for this Country, State, County, and the Twin Beaches."

He was one of the founders of the Stars and Stripes Festival and annually attended the event in his official capacities and as a private citizen after leaving state government.

Former governor Larry Hogan said on Owings passing that he was "a dedicated public servant, tireless advocate for our veterans, father, grandfather, and close friend. His distinguished career in the Maryland House of Delegates and as Secretary of the Maryland Department of Veterans Affairs left an incredible mark on our state. As a Sergeant in the Marine Corps who served our country in Vietnam, George's commitment to those who have worn our nation's uniform was unwavering. His leadership and dedication to our veterans and our state set a high standard for all who follow in his footsteps. Yumi and I offer our prayers and heartfelt condolences to his family, friends, and loved ones."

County Commissioner President Buddy Gance, who served as Maryland Secretary of Agriculture, said Owings was a great guy who served "a great deal of his life to Maryland. We're going to miss George."

"He worked hard on issues and worked across party," Hance added.

Former state senator Roy Dyson said it wasn't just Owings' bipartisanship. "If you or I were governor and an issue came up, it would be so easy to turn to George and say, George, can you take care of this? Are you aware of this? I think it was his effectiveness that ensured that he was a good secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs. If you have a situation and I had many, and maybe it was trying to get somebody buried into one of our veteran's cemeteries, you want somebody that's effective. Families don't really care about your politics or if you're partisan. They just want it handled."

Dyson said, "I think he was a great representative for the veterans."

Observing National Doctors' Day

CalvertHealth Chief of Medical Staff Muses on His Profession

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

As the community's hospital, CalvertHealth Medical Center, prepares to celebrate National Doctors' Day on Saturday, March 30, The County Times spoke to their Chief of Medical Staff Dr. Samuel Foster about the profession.

He said, "Medicine is a highly regarded profession. And I think any profession where you are sacrificing and involved in the care of others and helping others heal and get better, it's always going to be rewarding and satisfying. People can look at it from different angles. Now, the esteem level, and that's in reference to how we are seen by other professionals and by society as a whole, that has changed somewhat in terms of the perception."

Dr. Foster, a cardiologist, observed, "I think some of the confusion there has really come about because of how healthcare is being delivered at this time. You no longer have primary doctors per se in terms of private practice or solo practice. You have doctors who are part of big community set-ups or big national setups or regional set-ups, the MedStars of this world, etc. And when you have doctors involved in a setup like that, they no longer have control of their time and, as such, time that they can spend with patients to some extent. So, I think that sometimes takes away from what the patient's perception is of the provider because of circumstances beyond their control. But it's still very rewarding, something that I think people should aspire to if you have the desire. Never go into it out of thinking that you're going to be wealthy."

He added, "I've always believed personally, you go into it, and if you do the best that you can for every patient that you see day in, day out, then that's rewarding enough. And any financial rewards that will come, will come your way as a result. Just do your best for your patients."

It's not something that you can see patients in the morning and play golf in the afternoon, he was asked. He said, "Not in this present environment at all."

CalvertHealth, which is not part of a chain, allows doctors to avoid bureaucracy. He said, "I think that's one of the beauties. I am with Calvert Internal Medicine Group. I'm one of the owners of them. And the model that we use in Calvert Internal Medicine Group is really one way. It is, we encourage independence for providers in terms of how they provide care. So, you have that time, there's no time constraints on how long you spend with patients. Now with CalvertHealth Medical Center, they also have adopted a similar model where I think they allow the primary providers to spend that quality time to build relationships with the patients, which is really important because half of healing has to do with belief. It goes into the idea of is the glass half full or is the glass half empty? If I can have a patient come into me with a sense of despair, but at the end of the day they have that sense of that things are going to be better tomorrow, then that's a win for me and a win for the patient. But mindset is very important in terms of recovery from any kind of illness, and in terms of your general wellbeing."

Dr. Foster originally wanted to be a veterinarian. He said, "I'd gotten accepted in the Royal College of Edinburgh to study veterinary medicine. But at the time, my sister was at NYU and the resources weren't there. So, I got a national scholarship and my dad said to me, well, son, you know, you like taking care of animals. Maybe you'd enjoy taking care of people. From there, really and truly, I have really enjoyed being able to interact, take care of patients, and the joy of having them feel better at the end of a visit, there's nothing more rewarding than that for me."

He's been a doctor since 1993. Since then, he said, "There have been changes in terms of how we practice. And the main change, I think, has to do with healthcare is no longer ger just about the individual provider, but it's really more about the ability to provide care to the community and in whatever form that might make. So, you have a community-based approach to healthcare where we are looking at Calvert and how we provide healthcare to Calvert County. How do we keep patients out of the hospital? We've really moved in that direction as opposed to one where it is as an individual provider, you focus on that one patient, and you try to provide care to that one patient as best as possible. We're looking at it from a larger scale now, and if you are in groups, your quality of care is measured by your ability to meet certain benchmarks now. So there are more markers they use for quality of care now, than it was back then. And I think doctors, to some extent, are expected now to work harder, to demonstrate their abilities and competencies when it comes to these things."

As Chief of Medical Staff, Dr. Foster said, "responsibilities entail being part of the credentials committee. So, we are under medical executive committee, and we are essentially functioning as the gatekeepers to ensure that quality providers become members of staff, and that we can rest assured that our patients that come through the turnstile, they are getting the highest possible care. And it involves also disciplinary proceedings if necessary, or counseling as necessary. And it's really with the aim of keeping the medical staff involved, which is something that's difficult in this day and age. And it involves ensuring to a large extent that the needs of not just the physicians, but the institution is being met."

Dr. Foster said, "Medical schools are always over applied for, so there are never empty slots. But unfortunately, where we are going right now, we have the expectation that by 2035, there is going to be definite unmatched needs in terms of primary care and different specialties. So, we have to try and come up with a solution as to how to deal with that. Doctors are no longer practicing into their seventies, as we did before. And I think sometimes the stresses of the healthcare are providers are retiring at a time when they can. So, it is not the same as it used to be, and we don't have the answers, or at least we are not willing to listen to what the real answers are. And what we are doing by and large is a Band-Aid approach where we are training our more mid-level. So instead of creating new physician slots, we are creating mid-level spots, which would be like your nurse practitioners and your physician assistants, to try to fill some of that gap left by the physicians."

On Doctors' Day, Dr. Foster said he would like residents to remember "that we doctors are dedicated to providing quality care to them, that we empathize, we have concern for them. And we will always try to do what's best for them. And that's something that they can't find with Google Doc. Because many people now are using Google as their source for healthcare."

Annmarie Garden Expansion Plan Unveiled

Includes Waterfront Welcome Center

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The long-range expansion plan for Annmarie Sculpture Garden and Arts Center was unveiled March 26 in a briefing for the Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC).

Annmarie Director Stacey Hann-Ruff and consultant Scott Scarfone of Mahan Rykiel Associates of Baltimore presented the plan. Highlights include a Waterfront Welcome Center overlooking St. John's Creek and an improved parking area.

According to the county's public information officer, "Annmarie Garden (AMG) had requested Calvert County Government incorporate their organization within the county government structure; to date, the decision to this request is delayed. The county continues to support AMG through Outside Agency Funds (over $300,000 in FY 2024), a lease arrangement for the use of county property and general maintenance services."

Hann-Ruff said the facility is run by two non-profit organizations, Ann Circle, and the Koenig Private Foundation, which she said have a 20-year partnership with Calvert County Government.

She explained, "Our campus consists of two properties. The main part of the campus is the 30 acres that belongs to Calvert County and the people of Calvert County and was donated to the county in 1991 by Mr. and Mrs. Koenig. The other property is about 20 acres and sits right next door, and it is owned by the Koenig Private Foundation. And so, this truly is a public/private endeavor and a true partnership. But when we undertook this long-range planning process, our goal was to really look at the two properties as a whole campus. We want them looking forward. We want them to feel like one place."

Artist's rendering of the proposed Annmarie Garden Waterfront Welcome Center

So, Hann-Ruff said the planning process began 18 months ago and included multiple listening sessions with stakeholders/.

Scarfone said of accomplishing the plan's goals, "It's not going to happen overnight. It could take 15, 20 years to realize, and it's going to take a lot of hard work and a lot of money," adding, "The fundraising comes from a myriad of different sources."

He said of the Waterfront Welcome Center, "This was something that was, I don't want to say required, but sort of the top of the wish list." He noted, "This was something that was strongly desired. And so, this was a big driving element between the plan to try and find out how we can get the garden to have more of a focus on the water."

The consultant said, "With the Koenig parcel, there was an opportunity with the view shed, it looked right down St. John's Creek, to really present the garden as part of being on the water. And so, when guests come to the garden, their first experience will be the water, and then they will come into the woods and experience the garden from that. So, it's a paradigm shift from how visitors are going to experience the garden and make it more water-centric."

Scarfone said, "There's a series of spaces around the welcome center that include outdoor patios for both guests as well as for staff, as well as for special events."

Hann-Ruff said the welcome center would include a retail space for the selling of items such as art and sculpture.

The consultant said, "One of the big things we're recommending as part of this, there's actually a dilapidated timber bulkhead down there now. We're recommending that being removed and be created into a living shoreline. There's a pier that's out there now that we're recommending being rehabilitated, which will allow boat access and kayak access, as well as pedestrian access to actually get down and touch the water where there's none now."

Of the parking lot, he said, "So where's the balance that we strike between providing enough parking, but also keeping the garden looking like a garden. So, we spent a lot of energy trying to understand the parking, get as much parking in there as we can without making it feel like a parking lot. So, the recommendation for the parking is to create a sustainable parking lot with pervious pavement, bioswales, lots of plantings to really minimize the impacts that it's going to have, because we're right adjacent to the critical areas."

Other parts of the plan include the Studio School environs, Fairy Folly Nature Play Area and more gardens along the sculpture garden walkways and woodlands.

The consultant said a detailed budget for the plan would be available shortly.

The commissioners gave the proposal a generally favorable review. Commissioner Mike Hart said, "It would be phenomenal. There's no doubt."

Hart added, "What you've done with it is incredible with just a little bit of space to work with now. It would be truly phenomenal for that (the plan). It would be a destination spot."

Calvert Bills Pass House, Move to Senate

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

As the 2024 Maryland General Assembly Session enters the home stretch of its closing two weeks, several Calvert County bills have passed the House of Delegates and are now in the Senate for hearings. The bills are all supported by the Calvert County Board of County Commissioners. They are:

- HB 766: Prohibiting a person from standing in a roadway, median divider, or intersection to solicit money or donations from the occupant of a vehicle in Calvert County.
- HB 834: Requiring that the conflict of interest provisions enacted by Calvert County include certain provisions relating to judicial relief for certain violations of the county's conflict of interest provisions; requiring the ethics provisions enacted by Calvert County to include a provision requiring the Calvert County Ethics Commission to make public any recommendation it makes to expel a Commissioner; and requiring Calvert County to enact a law or regulation that authorizes the removal of a county elected official for certain violations.
- HB 835: Authorizing the County

Commissioners of Calvert County to enact an ordinance that establishes a local percentage preference for certain procurement contracts; and requiring the County Commissioners to comply with certain provisions of law under certain circumstances.

Two of the bills, HB 766 and HB 835, had been unsuccessfully introduced last year and have been modified in hopes of securing passage this year.

The ethics bill is new this year and was proposed by the advocacy group Calvert Citizens United to prevent situations such as occurred when former commissioner Kelly McConkey voted to add to the Huntingtown Town Center two pieces of property that he owns.

Students Charged with Hate Crimes

Three 13-year-old students at Plum Point Middle School have been charged as juveniles with harassment and violations of Maryland's hate crimes statutes. According to charging documents, the students displayed swastikas, made Nazi salutes, and directed offensive comments to a classmate because of the classmate's religious beliefs.

The behavior began in December, 2023, and continued over several months, despite repeated requests to stop. The victim ultimately reported the matter to Maryland State Police officers, who investigated and filed the charges against the juveniles.

The charges will be forwarded to the Maryland Department of Juvenile Services (DJS) for appropriate action. DJS has the discretion to refer the charges to the Calvert County Circuit Court for an adjudicatory hearing, at which time the State will be required to prove the allegations beyond a reasonable doubt.

Calvert County State's Attorney Robert Harvey issued the following statement: "Maryland was founded on the principle of religious toleration. It is frankly astonishing that nearly 400 years later some people continue to persecute others based upon their religion. I call upon parents, educators, and community and faith leaders to make sure that our children know that religious persecution has no place in our society."
