MedStar St. Mary's: Care Close to Home

Hospital President Gives an Update

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

Care close to home and services in all parts of the community were the highlights of the message from MedStar St. Mary's Hospital in a March 31 report to the Commissioners of St. Mary's County. St. Mary's Hospital President Mimi Novello delivered the briefing to the commissioners.

During the presentation Commissioner Eric Colvin observed, "I really like in your mission, it says it's a community hospital. And that's what I always go back to, that I think there was a lot of nervousness among the community when MedStar came in because this hospital was built by the community," adding "I think you've done a really good job of not losing sight of that."

Novello, who has been in the position for four years, said, "We are part of MedStar Health and our vision and values are consistent with the rest of the system to be the trusted leader, caring for people in advancing health. And then we live by the values, we call them our spirit values."

She added, "Our mission in St. Mary's County is to provide a community hospital that upholds our tradition of caring by promoting, maintaining, and improving health through education and services, while ensuring high quality patient safety and fiscal integrity."

MedStar St. Mary's Hospital is one of ten MedStar hospitals.

"I would say even more significantly in the last five to 10 years, (we are) into a less hospital-centric delivery system to one that encompasses many ambulatory access points," she said. That includes urgent care, imaging centers, ambulatory surgical sites, physical therapy, and rehab.

Even with the main anchor hospital in Leonardtown, Novello said, "I would say that group also spends more of their time out in the community rather than in the office."

"We are also very proud of our hospice services. We have a Hospice of St. Mary's in Callaway (see separate story about upcoming hospice walk/run), which is the Hospice House. But our hospice services actually extend far beyond that house. We have some in the inpatient area at the hospital when needed. But primarily our hospice access is throughout the ambulatory space in folk's homes, in the nursing homes or the skilled care facilities."

"Our outpatient pavilion is on our campus as well, that serves our MedStar Georgetown Cancer Institute, which is an ambulatory cancer institute and infusion center," Novello explained. "So, for chemotherapy and other therapeutic agents like iron or magnesium or some of the immunotherapies. And then we also house several of our specialty physician offices in that building."

In north county they have two different sites. "We have an urgent care in that area, and then we have several different specialty care services to address issues that our patients need."

In Leonardtown they have OB/GYN, Orthopedics, physical therapy, breast center. They have urgent care in California and the Bean Center. "a jewel, which has multiple different subspecialties."

In south county "in the Great Mills area, we have an urgent care that we just opened there in August of 25, which is doing great. And we at the same time added another access point, an Ob/Gyn office that complements the primary care office there."

She touted the hospital's leadership. "It benefits the county having such talent here."

Novello observed about the county demographics, "I do think it's worth noting that we have a very young age, median county age of 38 years, which is unusual. But in addition, we do have that 65 and older population that is growing in this county, more folks retiring and staying, which is fantastic. And then we also have a very unique population that we care for. And we take great joy and pride in being able to meet the needs of these different groups of folks, including our Amish folks, the defense industry at Pax River, the colleges, etc."

Novello said when she arrived in the county "I was so struck by the range of services that we provide here in this community hospital. It is quite extraordinary," adding, "You don't see this in every community hospital. We do have acute care. We have a full intensive care unit, a busy emergency department. We have behavioral health services in both our inpatient treatment and our intensive outpatient day hospitalization treatment. And just coming the women's health and family birthing center services. Our interventional radiology program is also growing significantly... along with cancer care and infusion services."

She added, "We also have a wound healing center complete with two hyperbaric chambers... and we're proud to deliver those services here to our community. We also have a palliative care and inpatient dialysis."

So, she said, "I think as we look to see healthcare expanding beyond the four walls of the hospital, is really developing these advanced, minimally invasive services that are convenient, appropriate to care in the community with outstanding outcomes."

The result, she observed, "We like to be able to have services that before you would've had to travel to a tertiary or quaternary center. But now you get to come to MedStar, St. Mary's Hospital and receive this care close to home."

One way they expanded services is through e-visits. She said, "We were early adopters of this technology right before COVID started. So, we've been doing this a while and have served a large number of folks with the telehealth platform."

They also have Community Health Advocates (CHA) "who actually go out into our community and work with individuals who are challenged both from social needs and from chronic medical illness. We have one now that we have a partnership with the soup kitchen. We lease a space there so that we have a CHA who can interact with their clients as well."

After the presentation, Commissioner Scott Ostrow said. "I hear it a lot and see on social media here and there, and I've had a lot of questions about it in the community about overcrowding at the hospital. Can you expand on that? Let us know, are there any plans to expand the hospital and what is actually the real situation?"

Novello responded, "Our current hospital and emergency department are sized appropriately to care for the community that we serve. You know hospital volumes do ebb and flow. It's the nature of our business."

She said size is determined by the state and that there are no current expansion plans.

"We are staffed to care for our community at every ebb and flow of that volume. I would say that, as the community continues to grow, we are committed to continuing to serve the community, in accordance with policies from the state and the regulatory agencies that govern our business," she said.

What if there isn't an available bed. She said, "Borders is something when a person comes into the hospital, needs a hospital bed, comes into the hospital emergency department, largely needs a hospital bed, and there's not a hospital bed that's open at the time. They end up boarding in the emergency department. And we call that boarding. It is something that is probably in almost every hospital in the country. It's not unique to us. But I will say I'm really proud of the work that we've done to support our boarding patients. And so, we've done a lot of work to get them a hospital bed and provide them the same menu of options to be able to eat as though they were on the floors."

Commissioners Send Budget to Public Hearing

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The Commissioners of St. Mary's County (CSMC) have approved the budget for the next fiscal year that will go to public hearing on April 21. The commissioners can then make changes before formally adopting the budget.

Flush with additional projected income tax revenue, the commissioners have bypassed the usual fight over education funding by fully funding the school board's request for $8.4 million more than they received this year.

Chief Financial Officer Vanetta Van Cleave told the commissioners at their March 31 meeting, "We bring forth to you a balanced budget, which includes $78,000 in a public hearing reserve to allocate after the public hearing to be held on April 21st. The budgeted expenditures amount to $360,099,861. In addition, unassigned fund balance of $16,908,163 are budgeted to be used for non-reoccurring expenditures.

"CIP (Capital Improvement Program) is in the amount of $76,466,830 for FY 27 and in the years 28 through 33, (it is) $396,925,899."

She added, "Total new positions are budgeted at 13, eight of which are included in emergency services in the enterprise funds. Five are in the general fund, three of which are in countywide support departments and two in the state's attorney's office."

The public hearing, in addition to the budget, will include the request by the Bay District Volunteer Fire Department for a fire tax rate increase.

Commissioner Eric Colvin observe, "This is a good budget. It's balanced budget as we always do, but it's not our final budget. This is our recommended budget that goes to public hearing. There's still time afterward that changes can and most likely will be made. So, there's still an opportunity that we can meet more of the requests, especially the sheriff's office salary request, potentially."

A release after the vote said, "The CSMC will hold the annual Budget Public Hearing to present the FY27 Recommended Budget and receive public comment on Tuesday, April 21, 2026, at 6:30 p.m. at Chopticon High School (CHS), located at 25390 Colton Point Road in Morganza.

The hearing will take place in the CHS auditorium. Doors will open at 5:30 p.m., and sign-up sheets for those wishing to speak will be available in the school foyer.

"Community members are encouraged to attend and share their feedback on the proposed budget. Those wishing to address the Commissioners may participate in person or provide feedback via:

- Email to: csmc@stmaryscountymd.gov
- Mail to: PO Box 653 Leonardtown, Maryland 20650

"The deadline to submit public comments is 5 p.m. on Tuesday, April 28, 2026.

All submissions will be considered by the CSMC at the Public Hearing and for up to seven days following the hearing. Additional details regarding the Public Hearing are available at: www.stmaryscountymd.gov/publichearings.

"The FY2027 Recommended Budget Book will be available for public review online by the close of business on Wednesday, April 8, 2026, at: www.stmaryscountymd.gov/budget.

"Appropriate accommodation for individuals with language or other special needs will be provided upon request. To support these needs, we respectfully ask for one week's prior notice. Please contact the Public Information Office at (301) 475-4200, ext. 1340 or via email to pio@stmaryscountymd.gov by April 14, 2026, to arrange."

No Kings Rally Held in Leonardtown

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

Hundreds of St. Mary's County residents on March 28 joined millions nationwide in thousands of No Kings rallies against President Donald Trump.

The Leonardtown rally was part of a nationwide day of nonviolent protest as part of the third No Kings National Day of Action. Local organizers with St. Mary's County Indivisible hosted the rally from 2 to 4 p.m. at the intersection of Route 5 and Hollywood Road.

According to a press release, community members "gathered to call for accountability, defend democratic norms, and reject authoritarianism."

The St. Mary's County event is one of more than 3,000 coordinated actions nationwide, "reflecting growing grassroots momentum across the country."

"This is bigger than political disagreement," said Andy Wilson, organizer with St. Mary's County Indivisible. "We're bringing together local residents from all walks of life who recognize that this administration has defied our courts, harmed American citizens, and undermined essential services, all while prioritizing the interests of billionaires. We're not going to stand by and watch it happen; we're pushing back."

According to the press release, "The No Kings movement is a mass, nonviolent coalition effort that has already mobilized millions of participants nationwide. Previous days of action drew over five million participants in June 2025 and more than seven million people across 2,700+ events in October 2025, spanning all 50 states and Washington, D.C. Organizers say the movement continues to grow as communities unite to defend civil liberties, uphold the rule of law, and push back against concentrated power."

"All No Kings events are rooted in non-violence and community safety," Wilson added. "We are committed to peaceful protest and ensuring that everyone who shows up can participate safely and meaningfully."

The nationwide effort included participation from a broad coalition of organizations, including civil rights groups, labor unions, environmental advocates, and grassroots networks.

Funding Cut for Fourth Circuit Court Judge

Annapolis Conference Committee Removes New Judge

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

Funding for a fourth circuit court judge in St. Mary's County appears to have stalled in the Maryland General Assembly. Deputy County Attorney John Sterling Houser delivered the news to the county commissioners on March 31 during his regular briefing on happenings in Annapolis.

Houser said the funding of the new judge passed the House and then when it did not prevail in the Senate, went to a conference committee.

Houser noted, "Based on the budget that was announced last night and adopted,...it appears that the conference committee did reject the additional funding in the budget for the fourth circuit judgeship. So, if there's any intention at all of passing the bill to create the position, they have no means of paying for it in the budget, which is probably a good indicator that it will not move forward."

He added, "That is what it's looking like right now. Again, it's not over until it's Sine Die (last day, April 13) and things can happen at the very, very last minute. But the additional money that the House put into the budget appears to have been taken out by the conference committee between the House and the Senate and the budget that was passed yesterday evening."

Houser also reported that the county bill to regulate panhandling on roads deemed dangerous is moving through the Maryland General Assembly apparently without opposition. The bill was heavily amended to require State Highway approval before the county designates those roads.

Repeat Violent Offender Sentenced for Attempted Kidnapping

State's Attorney Jaymi Sterling announced today that William Francis Dixon, 53, of Mechanicsville, was sentenced to 53 years in prison for attempted kidnapping, armed robbery, and dangerous weapon charges.

"This was a predatory and horrifying attack by a convicted felon with a demonstrated history of extreme violence against women on an innocent victim who was a complete stranger to him," said Sterling.

On March 17, 2025, Dixon targeted a woman after seeing her at a shopping center and followed her vehicle to her child's school bus stop. While she waited for her child, Dixon, armed with handcuffs and a knife, attempted to kidnap her by dragging her towards his vehicle. The victim fought back, escaped to her car, and called 911, providing a detailed description of the attack and her assailant. Following an investigation, officers identified and located Dixon. A subsequent search of his home led to the recovery of the victim's personal belongings.

Dixon was previously convicted for a brutal 1994 offense in which he stabbed a St. Mary's County woman approximately 50 times with a screwdriver, raped her, and left her for dead. The victim survived.

Dixon was subsequently sentenced to life in prison, with 40 years of active incarceration. He was released with good time credit after serving just under 25 years.

"With this new sentence, the Defendant will likely spend the rest of his life behind bars. This victim and the previous victim, along with every potential victim, are now safe from him," said Sterling. "I want to sincerely thank the detectives, the incredible prosecution team, and especially our office's Evidence Review Unit. I am certain these results would not have been possible without their endless hours of investigation, dedication, and brilliance."

Senior Assistant State's Attorney Alena Mosier and Assistant State's Attorney Holley Hickman prosecuted the case on behalf of the citizens of St. Mary's County.

Detective Andrew Burgess of the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office was the lead investigator.

The Honorable Timothy J. Doory presided over the case.

Press Release from St. Mary's County State's Attorney

Stolen Vehicle Recovered, Three Juveniles Charged

A Kia Carnival reported stolen in Lexington Park was recovered, and three juveniles have been charged with unlawful taking of a motor vehicle and theft of property valued between $25,000 and $100,000.

On Sunday, March 29, the victims told deputies the vehicle was missing from outside their residence.

On March 30, a citizen reported suspicious activity on Old Missouri Street in Lexington Park. When deputies arrived, they located the stolen vehicle, and witnesses said four individuals had exited it moments earlier.

Deputies identified and located the suspects. Three suspects, ages 15, 16 and 17, were taken into custody and released to their guardians after being charged. A fourth juvenile was not charged.

Juveniles are not publicly identified due to legal protections.

Navy's 'Magic Carpet' for H-60 Successfully Demonstrated in Flight

For the first time, engineers from the Naval Air Warfare Center Aircraft Division (NAWCAD) successfully demonstrated assistive landing technology designed for the military's fleet of H-60 helicopters during a flight test on Feb. 27.

The technology, Low-Speed Precision Control (LSPC), was designed by the same warfare center who brought tactical aviation Precision Landing Mode – commonly called MAGIC CARPET – and was designed to assist pilots when landing, improving safety and operational capability for the Navy's largest community of aviators, as well those flying H-60 helicopters for the Army and Coast Guard.

"Low-Speed Precision Control is an important step forward in advancing aviator safety and operational readiness," said NAWCAD Commander Rear Adm. Todd Evans. "This milestone reflects NAWCAD's commitment to delivering solutions that address the most challenging conditions our warfighters face."

Among the most dangerous tasks for any rotary-wing pilot are landings in difficult conditions, from low-visibility environments in dust, fog, or snow to the pitching deck of a ship at sea. While newer aircraft like the CH-53K King Stallion feature built-in augmented landing technology via fly-by-wire designs, this milestone represents a critical advancement in bringing similar capabilities to thousands of older helicopters across the military, addressing a longstanding challenge that has contributed to several Class A mishaps.

LSPC is a modular hardware and software system that integrates directly into the cockpit controls, improving flight stability and precision and reducing pilot workload during shipboard landing or landings ashore. The system's modular design allows for rapid installation across all H-60 variants, making it a versatile upgrade for joint and allied forces.

NAWCAD's rotary Air Test and Evaluation Squadron (HX) 21 will continue Navy testing of the system through summer 2026, further proving its performance and operational impact.

NAWCAD employs military, civilian, and contract personnel to operate test ranges, laboratories, and aircraft in support of test, evaluation, research, development, and sustainment for all Navy and Marine Corps aviation platforms. Based in Patuxent River, Maryland, NAWCAD also has major sites in St. Inigoes, Maryland; Lakehurst, New Jersey; and Orlando, Florida.

Hospice Run Honors Local WWII Hero

By Vada Mercer
Contributing Writer

Hundreds of runners and walkers will take the streets of historic Leonardtown on April 11 in support of Hospice of St. Mary's.

The 29th Annual Run and Fun Walk for Hospice will start at 8 a.m., featuring a 5K run or fun walk, a 10K run, and the Defender's Cup 5K team race.

Since its start in 1996, the annual fundraiser has raised more than $1 million for Hospice of St. Mary's, and is expected to bring in over $125,000 this year alone.

"Facing death and dying is the most difficult thing any of us will ever do, and we will all have to do it," said Jim Dicus, event founder and hospice volunteer of more than 30 years. "But no one has to face it alone. That's the message and function of the Run and Fun Walk for Hospice."

Hospice of St. Mary's provides end-of-life care to community members, including those with little or no ability to pay. Their services range from daily personal and spiritual care to support for patients and families, as well as coordination of medical supplies and medication.

Dicus founded the event in 1996, inspired by his experiences with hospice patients. He hoped to raise both awareness of hospice's importance and funds to support those unable to afford care.

"I realized an auction at the firehouse could attract 250 patrons," he said. "But a run or walk could attract 2,500."

Over three decades, the event has grown into a major community tradition, drawing participants from around the nation and beyond. This year, runner Michael Wardian, who has been recognized with 27 awards including multiple Guinness World Records, will participate in support of hospice.

One of the event's most meaningful traditions is the Defender's Cup, a team-based 5K established in 2000 to honor veterans in St. Mary's County. Dicus was inspired to create this cup after caring for courageous veterans of World War II, the Korean War, and the Vietnam War.

Every year, the Defender's Cup is dedicated to a different veteran from St. Mary's County. This year, the Defender's Cup has been dedicated to Sgt. William Francis Yorkshire, a St. Mary's County local who served in the 784th Tank Battalion and was killed in action during World War II.

Sgt. Yorkshire was among the few Black Americans recognized for their service in World War II, posthumously earning a Silver Star for his bravery. When his tank commander was severely wounded, Sgt. Yorkshire dismounted under heavy enemy fire and carried him to safety. That same day, Sgt. Yorkshire helped evacuate five men from a burning tank despite the danger of imminent explosion.

He was mortally wounded the following day and died at 27. For decades, Sgt. Yorkshire's grave went largely forgotten, buried under four inches of soil, until Veterans Day 2025, when Dicus uncovered his marker and received permission to restore it to ground level.

This year the Defender's Cup will be renamed in honor of Sgt. Yorkshire to ensure his memory endures.

Teams competing for the Defender's Cup must be either active or retired, reserve or National Guard personnel, Department of Defense civil servants, or defense contractor employees and their immediate family members, and must have at least one female participant.

The winning team holds onto the trophy until the next race is held the following year.

Participation in the event costs a $50 donation, or $60 for the 10K. Children 6 and under can participate for free, and strollers are allowed. Pets are also allowed to join the event, with Furever Safe providing on-site pet support.

The race will conclude with a locally catered brunch, featuring tastings such as stuffed ham from Chief's, sliders from Mission BBQ and fresh fruit.

Registration closes April 9 at 4 p.m.

An Amazing Event Awaits

"It's reached the status of the U.S. Oyster Festival & St. Mary's County Fair - THAT is amazing!"
St. Mary's Commissioner Eric Colvin

"The Brunch ALONE sets this event apart from ALL others in MD-DC-VA" -RunWashington

Please consider donating to Hospice of St. Mary's, an organization that means the world to our family and supports countless others during their hardest moments. On April 11 we'll be walking in the Hospice of St. Mary's Run & Fun Walk for the 11th year in memory of our daughter, Sofie. Hospice cared for her with extraordinary compassion and dignity, and this walk is our way of honoring her life while giving back. Thank You. The Turbush Family

Wanderings of an Aimless Mind

Room to Room Communication

By Shelby Opperman
Contributing Writer

Remember when you were a kid and you used plastic cups or tin cans tied together to make a simple phone? I feel like that is something Robert and I should try. The only problem is that you can't text with the tin can phone method. I always wonder how many other couples text each other or message silly things from different rooms in the house. I hope we are not the only ones. The other method we could try is using an old fashioned bull horn to yell to each other, but then we also need those ear trumpets to hear each other's responses.

My husband will ask a question from the bedroom while he's watching whatever TV show he's watching, and I'll respond, "What?" then he will try and say it louder which really shouldn't be a problem since he is a loud person anyway. I say, "What??" one more time and then wait to see if he will come out of his lair into the living room where I am watching what I like to watch and tell me what he wanted. But no, I wait a couple minutes, then get up with a sigh and walk back there to check, usually missing some critical clue in a mystery I'm watching. And no, it doesn't matter if it's a Hallmark mystery that I have seen 30 times, I normally forget who the murderer is anyway. So, I get to the bedroom to find out that he wants to know if a certain website, usually for '65 Mustang parts, lawnmower parts, or something he has seen on Facebook, is legit. I go back to get my phone to check the site along with reviews and see where it's from, etc. and then we go through the whole order process. By the time I'm done and go back to my command center in the living room the only thing I hear is the ending music of my TV show.

There are many times, especially on the FBI show nights or the Wednesday night One Chicago shows of Chicago Med, Chicago Fire, and Chicago PD that we are watching the same programs from different rooms. The problem is that the bedroom TV and the living room TV are quite a few seconds different from each other. The living room TV is first. He will hear me yelling AHFFFH! or NOOOO! at the gory scenes when the Firefighters and Paramedics of Chicago Fire come across a really grizzly accident where someone is impaled with a telephone pole or something worse. Then I hear him yelling the same things a few seconds later. I know he has his eyes closed at that point. Chicago Med can sometimes be worse than Chicago Fire with all the ER mishaps and the surgeries. My husband was a tough, strong Firefighter in his day, but now I don't think he likes to see all that. My father was the same way later on. I suppose I could go watch the shows in the bedroom with him, but if I have my head on the pillow, that's all she wrote. When we do watch TV shows together, which we actually do quite often, one of us is sure to make a bag of popcorn to share, and then we can both yell and close our eyes at the same time.

Since our sweet dog Mindy passed, my husband's new thing (plus several other friends and family) is texting or messaging pictures of dogs from all over the East Coast to my phone. Of course I want them all, but I am not ready yet. I think my husband must be ready. I finally just put Mindy's dog food bowl set up downstairs yesterday. Her doggie bed and blankets I took downstairs two weeks ago. The only thing left upstairs is her large Rubbermaid 2 part dog food and treat container. It is empty and cleaned out, maybe that will go in the laundry room today. So, no, I am not ready for a dog at present, but who knows if I will see another pup with lots of soul in her eyes. For now, I will have to be happy with receiving lots of adoptable dog photos from everyone. And what's not to love about cute dogs... besides, I check all the adoption sites too. Happy Easter to everyone! I need to find my bunny ears again.

To each new day's adventure,
Shelby

How to Prepare Your Landscape for New Plants

New plants can add much to a landscape. Whether they're replacing plants that are no longer thriving or being added to supplement an existing landscape, new plants are an affordable way to give a home's exterior a whole new look.

Much consideration is given to which plants to add to a landscape. That's understandable, as homeowners want to choose plants that will thrive and won't compromise the health of surrounding plants and trees. Before planting or even choosing plants, it's important to plan for new additions to a landscape. Preparing the landscape can inform homeowners about which plants to purchase and can ensure they thrive after planting.

- Document sunlight exposure. Plants have different needs, and one of the biggest differences between species is the amount of sunlight they need to thrive. According to Penn State Extension, plants characterized as "full sun" require six or more hours of sunlight per day, while those considered "partial sun" need between four and six hours of sunlight per day. Plants designated as "partial shade" need two to four hours of sun per day, while "shade" plants need less than two hours of sunlight a day. Documenting sunlight exposure in advance gives homeowners an idea of which plants should be planted and where they should be planted. Jot down these observations in a journal over several weeks and then choose plants that will thrive in each area.
- Test the soil. A soil pH test is a simple and quick way to determine the acidity of soil. Soil pH levels will indicate how likely a plant is to thrive in a given spot. High levels won't necessarily mean an area should be avoided, as some plants thrive in acidic soils. Additional soil tests can determine other characteristics, such as the nutrient levels of soil and the amount of organic matter it contains. Each of these variables can help homeowners make the right choices as they introduce new plants to their properties.

- Consider local wildlife. If local wildlife makes its presence known on a property, homeowners may want to take proactive steps prior to planting anything new. A new fence might prevent animals like deer from getting in, but that likely won't do much to repel smaller animals like squirrels, rabbits or foxes. If wildlife is a concern, homeowners can seek advice at their local garden center about which plants certain animals are likely to ignore. Homeowners who want to attract wildlife can do the same in reverse, choosing plants wildlife will be drawn to. Homeowners who want to deter wildlife should erect fencing or other barriers prior to planting.
- Clear space if necessary. Plants grow up and out, and cramped quarters can make it hard for new plants to thrive. Some may thrive but only at the expense of other plants. If necessary, clear space prior to planting to ensure plants have ample space to grow. Some pre-planting landscape preparation can ensure new plants thrive.

Nine Signs of Pest Infestation

Individuals want a home that is welcoming and comfortable. Unfortunately many conditions that people find appealing also appeal to pests. Pests may be more problematic at certain times of year, such as when weather is extreme and pests like rodents or even raccoons seek refuge in a home. During times of year when temperatures are mild, certain insects may begin to hatch or swarm, becoming problematic around the home.

Some signs of pests taking up residence may be readily apparent, while others may be less obvious. The following are nine signs of pest infestation in or around a home.

1. Droppings: Small droppings may indicate that pests are nearby. Droppings will vary depending on the insect or rodent. It's good to familiarize yourself with the appearance of various droppings, from mice to termites to bed bugs.
2. Footprints: Footprints are another sign of pest infestation. Footprints left in dirt around a home, or in dusty areas in the attic or basement, may show that pests are tracking in and out of the house.
3. Sawdust piles or trails: Sawdust could be indicative of termites or ants. Insects like carpenter bees also may burrow into areas of wood and leave sawdust behind.
4. Shed wings, skins and casings: Many insects molt and, during this process, will shed certain parts of their anatomy to grow larger. Roaches, bed bugs and beetles are some pests that might be scattering sheds or egg casings in a home. Termite wings are discarded once the swarmers choose a new location for the colony.

5. Foul odors: Musty or foul smells, particularly in hidden areas, may indicate pests are nesting nearby.
6. Unexplained noises: Scratching or scurrying in walls or floors often indicates pests are present.
7. Bites: Waking up in the morning with welts or red areas on the skin might indicate the presence of bed bugs or other biting insects.

8. Presence of nests: Those who can see nests in corners or undisturbed areas of the home likely have pests present. Rodents often use chewed cardboard, insulation, paper, and other scavenged items to create nests, according to exterminators.
9. Increased number of beneficial insects: An influx of spiders and other predatory insects may indicate there are plenty of food sources in the home for them to feast on.

Pests can be problematic, but homeowners who recognize signs of infestation can take prompt action.

Did you know?

Many pest control methods don't only target pests — pollinators can often get caught in the crossfire. Without pollinators, more than 100 crops grown in the United States would not be able to thrive. Plants, including various fruits, vegetables, nuts and more, rely on pollinators to ensure to transport pollen. Though many plants are self-pollinating and others are pollinated by the wind or water, many others rely on insects and animals to become pollinated. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says birds, bees, bats, butterflies, moths, flies, beetles, and small mammals all can work as pollinators. Examples of crops pollinated by pollinators include apples, squash and almonds. Animals and insects help pollinate more than 75 percent of the world's flowering plants, and nearly 75 percent of all crops, according to the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service. Unfortunately, pesticide use can diminish the number of natural pollinators. Natural gardening and pest control can help protect the habitats of pollinators.

The Pros and Cons of Irrigation Systems

Maintaining a lush, green lawn and thriving landscape that includes shrubbery, flowers and trees requires time, money and often some sweat equity. However, the beauty that results from such effort compels many homeowners to take on the landscaping challenge.

Forgetting to water the greenery or getting hit with a drought can cause a lawn to deteriorate rapidly. An irrigation system may seem like a smart investment, but homeowners should weigh the pros and cons of such systems before having one installed.

Irrigation systems are installed to protect landscaping so plants can thrive year-round. Irrigation systems come in various forms, from sprinkler to drip to surface irrigation systems. No system is necessarily better than another. That's because each is designed to address specific watering needs.

Here's a look at various irrigation systems and the pros and cons of each.

Sprinkler system

Sprinklers are popular because they tend to be very affordable and easy to set up. Manual sprinkler systems utilize a hose and sprinkler head, while automatic systems are programmed and do all the work once they're installed. Sprinklers cover a lot of ground and can irrigate large spaces quickly. However, that same benefit can be a disadvantage as well.

Sprinklers are indiscriminate in their watering, sometimes hitting pavement or driveways. Also, the Gardening Channel says that water from sprinklers is lost due to evaporation on hot, windy days. In fact, as much as 80 percent of the water used may not make it onto the grass or plants.

Surface irrigation system

Sometimes called gravity irrigation, these systems use channels or furrows throughout the cultivation area. Once the water runs through these channels, gravity distributes it accordingly.

Surface irrigation systems require minimal effort but are best suited for farms and commercial enterprises because they require a large reservoir or pond to accumulate water. Also, uneven terrains could divert the water.

Drip irrigation system

This type of irrigation system is used primarily in arid regions. It is made up of lateral lines of flexible or rigid polyethylene pipe. Drip irrigation allows homeowners to focus watering on a particular garden area. It provides moisture directly to the soil. Therefore, there is no water waste from runoff or evaporation. Drip irrigation waters plants slowly and can cause less soil erosion and reduce nutrient leeching.

While easier and more effective than some other irrigation methods over the long haul, a drip irrigation system has a substantial startup cost. In addition, the system can get clogged at times. When gardening season is finished, a drip irrigation system will need to be drained and dismantled.

Irrigation systems can help care for plants and lawns. However, they can be costly and some require significant maintenance. Weather and pests also can reduce the effectiveness of yard irrigation systems by damaging equipment or directing water in directions homeowners did not intend. Customers are urged to do their research regarding which system, if any, is best for their properties.

Maintaining a Lawn Roamed by Pets

Vibrant, green lawns can draw attention to any landscape. Many homeowners toil for hours each week to ensure their lawns are pristine, or invest in lawn care services to help maintain a yard if they do not have the time to do so themselves.

While many treatments can be applied to lawns to help them thrive, animal waste is not among them. Pet owners who aspire to have beautiful lawns will have to take a few extra steps to ensure lawns can persevere despite the presence of furry companions.

Reseed with a damage-resistant grass. There are many different types of grass, and some are more resilient than others. Tall fescue, Kentucky bluegrass, perennial ryegrass, and Bermuda grass are just some of the grass varieties that can capably handle pet traffic. If replacing the entire lawn is not possible, consider reseeding or addressing the areas that pets frequent.

- Strengthen the root system. It may be tempting to cut the lawn short, particularly if dogs or cats like to nibble on longer blades of grass. But that approach could be doing the lawn a disservice. According to The Home Depot, letting the lawn grow to at least three inches will help keep moisture in the soil and prevent evaporation. That moisture will strengthen the roots, creating a healthier lawn for pets and people.
- Create pet paths. Various materials can be used in these high-traffic areas to minimize the sights and signs of pet traffic. Mulch or crushed stone can establish these pet highways and look like intended features.

- Set boundaries. Pet urine contains high levels of nitrogen, which can burn grass and turn it brown. It's not possible to water down urine or pick up solid waste immediately every time a pet goes outdoors, so designate a pet-friendly spot for potty time. Use fencing or a dog run to separate this area and help mitigate "land mines" all over the lawn. Fencing also can keep pets out of vegetable gardens and away from potentially toxic plants.
- Avoid chemical lawn treatments. When pets use the yard and rest on the lawn, you'll need to eliminate products that can be harmful to them. Choose all-natural fertilizers and weed and pest preventatives.
- Look for pet-friendly alternatives. If maintaining a lawn with pets seems like an uphill battle, consider swapping out your landscape with a variety of materials. Scale back on grass, and incorporate groundcover, hardscape materials like pea gravel, or extend the patio. Artificial turf also is an option, as it won't brown and wither. Some turf products can even be quickly and thoroughly cleaned with water.

It can take some trial and error for pet parents to protect their lawns from the effects of having furry friends playing in the yard.

Did you know?

A fenced-in space gives pets an opportunity to run around off-leash and enjoy time outdoors, but pet owners must recognize that inquisitive dogs can get into trouble even in seemingly safe yards. One potential danger is ingestion of potentially toxic mushrooms. It is essential for homeowners to check their yards for mushrooms all year long, but especially during wet springs and in the fall. Mushrooms can pop up overnight. Depending on the type of mushroom and the size of the dog, ingesting even a small amount can result in gastrointestinal distress or more dire circumstances, like liver failure. Certain mushrooms give off a fishy smell that may entice dogs who are prone to indiscriminate eating. According to the animal care resource Preventative Vet, signs of mushroom toxicity include vomiting, salivating, yellowing of the skin and "whites of eyes," coma, seizures, and loss of balance. Other dogs may experience diarrhea or refuse to eat. Any pet owner who has suspected a dog has eaten wild mushrooms should consult a veterinarian. Early treatment can help and prevent more serious organ damage or death.

John Norris, 95

John Abell Norris, lovingly referred to as Sprout, Abell-Toots, Pop Pop, and Dad, passed away peacefully surrounded by family at his home in Hollywood, Maryland on March 29, 2026, at the age of 95.

John was born September 29, 1930, to the late William Richley and Mary Catherine Abell Norris. On April 11, 1955, he married Lillian Farr Norris. Together they built a home on the Norris family farm.

John attended St. John's Catholic School followed by Margaret Brent and for employment held several jobs throughout his lifetime. He was a full-time farmer and while farming held several part-time jobs. He drove the school bus for St. John's Catholic School, was a truck driver for Mokley Mattingly, and performed lawn work for Lester Mattingly. He transitioned to full-time employment with Dean and Beavers until he found his professional calling working for the Maryland State Highway Administration (SHA). John began work with the SHA as a laborer, advancing to a heavy equipment operator, and retired after 31 years on June 30, 1992, as a Facilities Maintenance Technician III. Throughout all of this he maintained his commitment to farming.

John was a devoted son, husband, father, grandfather, great-grandfather, uncle, and friend. He will be remembered by his hours spent in the lattice house swing listening to music, sitting on the porch resting, or visiting with family, and his love of dancing and listening to live music weekly at Cryer's Back Road Inn. The family will cherish memories related to his love of Honey Nut Cheerios for breakfast every morning (his secret to a long life), his dedication to mowing the lawn until it shined green to perfection, and his always dependable nature.

He is survived by his children, Bonnie Jean Lemonds and Mary Lillian Wise (Raymond), his grandchildren, Joshua Wise, Crystal Sexton, and Jennifer Wise, and his great-grandson, Kevin Bates, Jr. He is also survived by his sisters, Dolores Wheeler and Betty Jean Guy (Lenny). He is preceded in death by his wife, brothers, Dickie Norris, Bobby Norris, Charles Norris, Philip Norris, and George Norris, and his young daughter, Grace Ann.

The family will receive friends on Tuesday, April 7, 2026, from 4:00 PM to 7:00 PM, with prayers recited at 6:00 PM, in the Mattingley-Gardiner Funeral Home, Leonardtown, MD. A Mass of Christian Burial will be celebrated on Wednesday, April 8, 2026, at 10:00 AM at St John's Catholic Church, Hollywood, MD, with Rev. Ray Schmidt officiating. Interment will follow at the church cemetery. Serving as pallbearers will be Joshua Wise, Kevin Bates, Jr., Tommy Wheeler, Phil Norris, Glenn Norris, Steven Norris, Ricky Guy, and Len Guy. Honorary pallbearers will be Crystal Sexton and Jennifer Wise.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Hospice of St. Mary's, St. John's Catholic Church, HVRS, or HVFD.

Condolences may be made to the family at www.mgfh.com.

Joseph Cullison, 97

Joseph Patrick Cullison passed away peacefully on March 25, 2026, and was undoubtedly welcomed by angels at Heaven's gate. He was a beloved husband, father, grandfather, great-grandfather, companion, and friend whose kindness, wisdom, and unwavering love left a lasting impact on all who knew him.

Born on Saint Patrick's Day, March 17, 1929, in Ridge, Maryland, Joseph lived a life defined by faith, devotion to family, kindness, and hard work. His quiet yet thoughtful presence was a comfort unlike any other.

Affectionately known as "Joe Pat" or

"Poppop," he spent much of his life in Virginia, where he built a life centered around family and his business ventures, including Heshman BMW and First Choice Auto Body Shop in Arlington.

Joseph shared 55 blissful years of marriage with his beloved wife, Dorothy Ann (Farrell) Cullison, until her passing in 2012. He returned to Maryland full time in 2016, where he enjoyed time with family and friends in Bushwood.

He was known for his steady presence, his willingness to show up for others, and his genuine interest in the lives around him. He found joy in storytelling, fishing, boating, working on cars, and spending time with loved ones and friends, especially during his daily McDonald's morning coffee meetups.

He is survived by his sister, Varrina "Tink" Yost; his son-in-law, M. Phillip Kalnitzky; his granddaughters, Victoria DeFruscio (Dominic), Amanda Kalnitzky (Dalton Rose), and Mackenzie Kalnitzky (Tyler Kowalski); his great-grandchildren, Carson Patrick Kalnitzky, Audrey DeFruscio, Charlotte DeFruscio, and soon-to-be great-grandson, Braeden Joseph-Taylor Rose; as well as several beloved nieces and nephews, including "Joe's Three Amigos," who were devoted and offered exceptional care and support. He is also survived by his longtime companion, Nita Knott, whose love and care meant so much to him and his family.

Joe was preceded in death by his wife, Dorothy Ann; his daughter, Pamela Ann Kalnitzky; his parents, Anna Maria (Peacock) and Francis Chester Cullison; his sisters, Sister Mary Rita Cullison, Sister Marie Francis Cullison, Carolyn Clark, and Anita "Betty" Raley; and his brothers, Edward Cullison and John "Jack" Gregory Cullison.

Joseph's life was a testament to faith, family, and love. He often said he had "no regrets" and truly enjoyed every moment. Though he lived 97 full years, it would never have been enough for those who loved him.

Visitation and Mass will be held on Wednesday, April 8, 2026, at St. Michael's Catholic Church, 16566 Three Notch Road, Ridge, MD 20680. Visitation will be held at 10am with Mass at 11am. Interment will follow at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Bushwood, Maryland. The family invites you to join them for a celebration of life meal following.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to St. Michael's Catholic Church in Ridge, Maryland, the church that stood across the street from where he was born and remained the foundation of his life or Hospice of St. Mary's in Callaway, Maryland.

Condolences to the family may be left at www.brinsfieldsfuneral.com.

Dr. Wilfred 'Bud' Ehrmantraut: Finding a Home and a 'Great Career'

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

National Doctor's Day, which just concluded on March 31, is a time to honor all the doctors who care for us every day. One of them, Dr. Wilfred "Bud" Ehrmantraut, a board-certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon, has been at CalvertHealth for more than 20 years.

CalvertHealth says of the doctor, "With nearly 30 years of surgical training and experience, Dr. Ehrmantraut is a well-respected surgeon with an outstanding reputation for providing exemplary results and patient care. A compassionate and caring physician, Dr. Ehrmantraut takes his time with each patient to compose a treatment plan tailored to their individual needs.

"Dr. Ehrmantraut has been a long-time member of the medical staff at CalvertHealth and has chaired the department of surgery at CHMC and served on the operative and invasive committees as well as the leadership team of the Sheldon E. Goldberg Center for Breast Care at CalvertHealth.

"He also served as the Chief of Medical Staff for many years.

"Dr. Ehrmantraut is a graduate of George Washington University Medical Center and completed his general surgery training at St. Agnes Healthcare in Baltimore and his specialty training at the Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center. He has been performing breast reconstruction for 15 years."

Dr. Ehrmantraut said, "I've been through a lot of growth with the hospital, with the community. It's changed so much over time. My wife and I moved down here, it was probably 2002, and we've raised four children here who are now, two in college, ones graduated from college and still have one little one here. So, it's been a great run here. I've really enjoyed life."

None of the children have pursued their father's medical profession.

One is pursuing environmental science. He said it "was really because of the environment here, the Chesapeake Bay and growing up on it."

He is a Marylander, having grown up in Rockville and attended the University of Maryland. At St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore, he did five years of general surgery and then went on and did a plastic surgery fellowship at Penn State for two years.

"And I moved down here and it was the water and I'm really familiar with the community," he said. His grandfather had "a small little beach place down in Clements: in nearby St. Mary's and they visited all the time. "We had a lot of fun. We'd go fishing together."

When did the light bulb go on that said he wanted to become a doctor? He said "I was pursuing a Bachelor of Arts in Anthropology, and I was rotating with a professor, actually volunteering with him, and I was doing a lot of work with forensic anthropology and was doing rotations at the Smithsonian Institute. Basically, we were reconstructing skeletal remains. And through the reconstruction of skeletal remains, we were able to determine sex, age, and some of the races and some of the causes of death. And I was extremely interested in that. He really encouraged me to pursue a career in medicine, which was already kind of in the back of my mind to begin with. And at that point I decided that I was going to medical school. So, during my rotations in medical school, I did a rotation in plastic and reconstructive surgery. And during that time it was once again putting together body parts that were broken and fixing things that were taken away from people. And I knew that's what it was that I wanted to do. And everything kind of came together right at that point."

He now works on all body parts "all the way from head to toe. So, I'm a board-certified plastic surgeon by the American Board of Plastic Surgery, and I'm certified to treat people and reconstruct body parts from the head to the toe."

It's a varied practice. "It's very. So, reconstructive surgery can be cosmetic and reconstructed. There's a huge overlap, so I do all of that range from suturing, treating lacerations, treating skin cancer, reconstructing people after they've had tumors removed. Reconstructing patients after they've had bariatric surgery with massive weight loss. It's a lengthy career because it's so diverse what you see every single day that really is just a wonderful thing. So, there's never a boring day."

What does it take to become a doctor? He replied, "You really need to be able to communicate properly. There's a lot of communication amongst professionals and also with the patient.

"I think you really need a very strong work ethic to be able to pursue a career in medicine. Medical school can be a fun challenge, but it's a lot of work."

He added, "Empathy, definitely for patients — compassion.

"And I think one of the biggest things for somebody who is going into a surgical subspecialty is ability to use their hands, and eye and hand coordination. Dexterity is certainly a really important thing to be able to do."

He said, "When I went through a bunch of different rotations, and through medical school and some of which are surgical subspecialties, in those surgical subspecialties, they really try to see how you're with hand-eye coordination. And there's some individuals that are very skilled at that set. And there are other individuals that aren't as skilled with that. So, they really do kind of focus in to see who's going to be best at it, and I think they encourage those residents and medical students."

Dr. Ehrmantraut noted, "Way back years ago, in order to become a plastic surgeon, most of the individuals had to complete a five-year residency in general surgery before you went into plastic surgery. Now it's a little bit different. So, what they do now is you do a couple years in general surgery and then finish out several years in plastic surgery."

He said about being at CalvertHealth, "It's a wonderful place to be. As far as doctors go, we really work kind of as a team, I would say with not only our fellow colleagues, the physicians, but also the allied health providers like nurse practitioners, physician assistants, and nursing, and all the ancillary staff we have. I think one of the most important things that we have at the hospital is a really strong support with our administration and the board of directors. They really, really emphasize patient safety and patient care.

"And the other thing we have is we have a lot of support from the Calvert County Commissioners too, and the emergency medical services that we have.

"It all works together."

When he was chief of staff, he saw, "It was just unbelievable watching how everybody was able to work as team, just year after year, better and better."

Calvert Cliffs Refueling Outage Delivers Close to $90 Million in Upgrades

The Calvert Cliffs Clean Energy Center recently wrapped up another successful, safely executed spring refueling outage, investing nearly $90 million in equipment upgrades and bringing significant economic impact to the Calvert County area.

"Calvert Cliffs Clean Energy Center reliably powers the equivalent of more than 1.3 million homes with emissions-free energy, while creating thousands of jobs and economic opportunity locally because of the annual maintenance and refueling outages," said Pete Moodie, Site Vice President. "This year's 27-day outage focused on multi-million-dollar equipment upgrades that will ensure the continued safe and reliable operation of Calvert Cliffs Unit 1."

The outage brought more than 1,500 skilled electricians, pipefitters, welders, carpenters, laborers, steamfitters and other tradespeople to Calvert County for close to a month, filling area hotels, restaurants and other shops to capacity. The workforce also raised $30,000 dollars that will be distributed among selected local charities.

"We are very fortunate to have Constellation here in Calvert County," said Kathryn Maney, President and CEO, Calvert County Chamber of Commerce. "Traditionally, the winter months are a slower season for hospitality, retail and restaurants. The influx of personnel during the outages brings increased consumer activity that delivers an economic lift to local businesses. This increased spending drives growth and encourages reinvestment within the community when it's needed most."

"The outage at Calvert Cliffs is a lifeline for Springhill by Marriott Prince Frederick during the lull between the winter holiday season and the spring," said Manager Kim Mina. "Springhill PF is one of the top performing Marriotts in the area specifically because of the outage. Our rooms are filled, translating to significant revenue for the hotel."

Many types of businesses look forward to the outage, including local eateries.

"For us here at Adam's Ribs, the best part of the winter is knowing that the outage is coming," said Jaime Padilla, owner of the Prince Frederick restaurant. "They are great people. They support us all the time. We are happy to have them and hate to see them go."

"The staff looks forward to everyone coming into town," said Brandon Harrington, owner of Buckets in Lusby. "It's a very active three to four weeks. We have been happy to extend our hours while they are in town, and we hope to keep doing it."

Located on the western shore of the Chesapeake Bay, the Calvert Cliffs Clean Energy Center is Maryland's only nuclear energy facility and one of the largest economic engines in the state. It contributes $21 million annually in property taxes and employs more than 800 full-time employees. The station is home to two pressurized water reactors capable of delivering 1,756 megawatts, which is roughly 40 percent of Maryland's total power generation and 80 percent of the state's clean power generation.

The thousands of tasks performed during the outage included the installation of a new $4.8 million, 151-ton transformer transported to Maryland from Alabama. The transformer is responsible for adjusting voltage so electricity can be delivered safely and efficiently to the grid. A $14.9 million upgrade to the unit's electrical equipment was also performed. Skilled workers also inspected, replaced, refreshed or overhauled various pumps, valves and systems that will keep the unit operating safely for the next 24 months. These investments support longterm grid reliability and reinforce Constellation's role as a cornerstone of Maryland's energy infrastructure.

Soil Conservation Efforts Move Offshore

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

An agency noted for its work on the land is embarking on a pilot oyster reef project designed to help save Calvert County's 33-mile Chesapeake Bay Shoreline. Those Calvert cliffs are eroding at a rate of two feet a year.

Calvert Soil Conservation District Manager Jason Leavitt explained the idea at the March 24 county commissioner meeting. He said, "The Soil Conservation District in the county plays a direct and measurable role in improving water quality in the Chesapeake Bay by reducing the flow of sediment and nutrients from the land into local waterways through conservation practices such as covered crops, repairing forest buffers, grass waterways, shoreline stabilization, and livestock exclusion fencing. The district helps limit nitrogen, phosphorus, and sediment before it reaches streams, rivers, and ultimately the Bay.

"Speaking of shoreline restoration, Calvert County shoreline was previously lined with oyster reefs. Current Bay-wide abundance is estimated at about one percent of historic levels."

Leavitt said, "Traditionally, soil conservation district improvements have been primarily land based. The agricultural industry specifically has been the primary focus and initial priority for nutrient reduction efforts because of the cost effectiveness of installing best management practices. However, significant strides made by agriculture alone have not yet proved sufficient to demonstrate meaningful water quality improvements in adjacent tributaries for the Chesapeake Bay. As a result, the Calvert Soil Conservation District is seeking to expand its sphere of influence to include oyster restoration and shoreline stabilization projects.

"Oysters naturally filter water, removing excess nutrients and suspended sediment while living shorelines and other stabilization efforts reduce erosion and nutrient run off by the water's edge. By complimenting land-based conservation practices with in-water and shoreline strategies, the district aims to accelerate water quality improvements and strengthen the overall health and resilience of local waterways and the Chesapeake Bay."

"The Great Shellfish Bay" was how the Chesapeake Bay was historically known, observed Soil Conservation Assistant District Manager Ryan St. Laurent. "Not so much today, but we're hoping to get that back."

The pilot project involves installing three mile-long oyster reefs along the shoreline, with the first being in North Beach.

The reefs not only provide habitat for oyster "spat" to mature to adult oysters, they also provide stabilization for the cliffs by helping to prevent the undermining of the cliffs (at their toe) along the water's edge.

St. Laurent noted that those who enjoy eating the remaining oysters should not feel guilty because those discarded oyster shells also can be panted to provide hard surfaces for that spat to settle on and thrive.

St. Laurent noted, "In some areas like down south in Florida, North Carolina, they can grow in the intertidal column, meaning like between mean low water and mean high water and sometimes they'll be up on the shoreline. But in Maryland, they primarily act as a toe structure... what's called a perched beach. Whether that toe structure is riprap or oyster reef, physically it's serving the same purpose. But historically that's what oysters did because they were the physical foundation. They hold sediment near shore, and they filter sediment out of the water column. They physically do that."

The project is costing $1 million per mile and is being funded with grants. But that's only three miles for the three projects and there's 33 miles to protect. St. Laurent said it obviously will take more money. But he's optimistic that with enough funding the entire shoreline can be protected in 20 years and expanded to encompass the entire Bay area.

Chesapeake Beach Appears Ready to Junk Sidewalk

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The majority of the town council members of the Town of Chesapeake Beach appear poised to reject an attempt to continue to go after state grant funding for a sidewalk that would connect Chesapeake Village with Beach Elementary School. The funding would have come from a program called "Safe Routes to School." But the majority of the council feel the sidewalk would not be used by students because the subdivision is too far from school. The school system sends school buses into the neighborhood because their regulations require it for any students living more than a half mile from school. The nearest home in Chesapeake Village is more than a mile.

The program, that has long been on the town's agenda, was 30 percent complete in its design, tantamount to a feasibility study.

At the March 19 town council meeting, Town Manager Samelia Okpodu urged the council members to let the state know what it intended to do. Although it is clear the council wants to relook at connecting the subdivision and the rest of town with perhaps a trail or path instead of a sidewalk, at the end of the meeting the council still had not formally voted.

Okpodu wanted to "get council feedback on the Safe Routes to School project." She said she provided council with "options based on what has been presented. So, it outlines where we are currently with the project, how much of investment the town has already invested in it. And the decision point now is critical, primarily because all of the work that was done before under the 30 percent grant was specifically for the sidewalk that would run the distance of Chesapeake Village to Beach Elementary along Route 261. The 30 percent design has already been completed."

She added, "When you do a feasibility study, if you decide you can move forward or not move forward, you don't have to pay anything back. Where we are right now is with the 100-percent design money. If the town chooses to sign off on it, then you are committing to build, to construct the project. So right now we don't have any grant funds for the construction of the project."

The issue proved extremely contentious at the February council meeting, with Councilwoman Laura Blackwelder, who supported the sidewalk, criticizing several other members, most notably Council Vice Chair Jamie Shuls, over apparently wanting to pull out of the project.

That back and forth continued at the March 19 meeting. Shuls said, "I am no for moving forward with this because this needs to be put to rest. There's too many unknowns with this, and it's a very expensive project. I'm in support though of looking at the alternative options and figuring out how we can still look to connect the neighborhood. I committed to that the last time. There's still a lot of due diligence that has to be done regarding that, but specific to this SHA piece, I think we're doing a disservice to not only the state, but to our town residents by continuing to pretend that we're actually going to move forward with this when the last council consensus was not met to even move forward."

Blackwelder said, "I have a question for you, Councilman. Just to clarify, if there was a design that was amenable to the council, you would support a project in this area or you support no project to connect Chesapeake Village?"

Shuls responded, "I think it'd be a disservice for me to play in hypotheticals because I think I can't commit to something that spends taxpayer dollars without understanding the totality of the project and the impacts and looking at all the other ones. So, I am open to the conversation for sure."

Shuls said that at the March work session council considered multiple options. "There's some additional conversations that need to occur. I'd like to understand what grant opportunities (there are).

Blackwelder pressed. "You understand the numbers. You, see the numbers. That's how much the project costs."

Shuls responded, "There is no plan placed in front of me right now that says to build a sidewalk, or to build a trail from Chesapeake Village to anywhere in town, it would cost this much other than estimates. So again, you have to allow me to do my due diligence and understand what we're committing the town funds to do. So, I'm in support of the conversation, but as of the 19th of March at 6:43 PM there is nothing in front of me that says we are committing to X number of dollars, and this is how much we would get from grant funding. This is a timeline and it is a feasible project."

Blackwelder told Shuls, "So the question is whether you have a project in front of you or not, do you support connecting Chesapeake Village? Because supporting connecting Chesapeake Village is going to cost money. Right now we have a grant. I also believe that there are opportunities to come up with the right project, but the right project is not going to be free."

'Potential' Amazon Data Center Plan Unveiled

Campus Would Be Next to Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

Amazon Web Services (AWS), a division of online giant Amazon, at a March 26 community meeting at Calvert Middle School, unveiled "potential" plans for a data center complex on property owned by Constellation next to the Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant.

Company officials emphasized that no site plan request had been submitted and final design was not available, thus a drawing was also not available.

The presentation comes two days after the county commissioners were presented with a plan for a four-building data center complex on land owned by the county just south of Calvert Cliffs.

Becky Ford of AWS, said, "We're here to talk about a potential project with Constellation Energy at a site adjacent to their existing facility here in Calvert County. We've spent a considerable amount of time in conversations with multiple members of our team and the Constellation team to find out if there's an opportunity for us to work together."

She said "The reason we've not had more public engagement is that there's a lot of work that goes on behind the scenes. A lot of time that we spend evaluating requirements, looking at the state's regulations, looking at county regulations, looking at our own requirements for a site, and looking at different aspects of the property and how we would design and construct data centers."

Ford observed, "We're at a point where we have some preliminary site plans. I know folks have seen some of this information online, but I want to reassure you that we've not submitted any site plans to the county. There are no existing agreements in place between Amazon and Calvert County, and this is still very much a project. It's not a done deal. It's not signed, sealed, and delivered. It's a potential project that we are evaluating as part of our initiative to support our customer requirements."

Ford said her presentation was in response to hundreds of questions submitted online by the public.

She explained, "Data centers power our everyday lives. They contain information that helps support our financial needs. It helps to process data, provide educational opportunities for our children, for our schools, for our universities, and we are actively working to help support cloud services and the infrastructure associated with that."

"We have millions of customers all across the world and have constructed campuses in a number of states in and around this area," Ford said.

She added, "When we talk about why Calvert County in partnership with Constellation, we have evaluated the existing opportunity and currently zoned industrial property. So, there will not be any rezoning required to support this project. It's all within the existing property that's zoned heavy industrial (where) data center use is allowed. Data centers are not new to Maryland, not new to Calvert County.

"In the due diligence that we've conducted, we've been through the county ordinance and requirements. They are among the highest standards that we've seen in any of the communities where we're considering development or actively developing."

She noted that a site plan submitted to the state for wetland permitting due diligence "shows eight buildings on the site and is reflective of what we are currently contemplating. What I will say is that as we get further along in our due diligence, in our design work, it's likely that this picture will change and shift a little bit. We may have one building added or others taken away or moved depending on how the site itself meets our requirements."

She observed, "A lot of the questions submitted through the portal were focused on water use and concerns related to cooling water. We use water in a few key ways on our site, and that includes potable water, so sinks and toilets that employees will use in everyday activities similar to any other business. And then we use water for cooling.

"And in this particular case, one of the biggest benefits of this project is that there is no new water required to cool our data centers. We'll use water from Constellation's existing process. Once it's been through their cooling system, it'll come over to our facility and be used to cool our data centers. And then it'll be sent back through the same process and at the same standards that currently exist."

Ford said, "In regard to cooling water, 96 percent of the year we cool our data centers with free-flowing air from the outside. The other four percent of the time we'll use that cooling water to help cool down the air, and that air will cool the equipment in the data center itself."

Mike Fredette, AWS's energy team head, said, "We're seeing significant electricity growth globally as well as the US through many factors, whether it be electrification of industry, shoring of manufacturing adoption, as well as the digitalization of the global and US economy, much of which is empowered and enabled by data centers. Data centers require highly reliable, scalable electricity to power the servers that store the data to deliver the services that our customers use."

He added, "As we think about that electricity that we consume, we like to break it down to three core principles. One, we're committed to continue paying our full share for electricity costs to power our data centers and provide the services to our customers. Two, we're committed to continue to operate more efficiently, and we're committed to operate more sustainably."

Fredette said, "The overall cost of service to provide electricity to those data centers was lower than the overall revenue received by those data centers. And what that results in is called a, a revenue surplus. That revenue surplus can be used by the utility for multiple factors. It can be used to continue the electricity grid, to harden the electricity grid, to digitalize, modernize that electricity grid, or it can go against existing and future fixed costs that existing rate payers are already bearing.

"And at this particular site, this campus, we've been working very closely with our stakeholders... Baltimore Gas and Electric, Constellation and SMECO to ensure that we study and that we're ensuring that this facility can be both served reliably, but will not negatively impact the surrounding community."

He said, "This campus is unique in that it's located directly adjacent to an existing nuclear power facility. It's cross cut by three different extra high voltage transmission lines, which provides a good opportunity for data centers to come in and secure highly reliable, scalable power to both continue to scale up the overall generation capacity in the region as well as to serve that load for data center purposes."

Ford said, "We work with organizations like College of Southern Maryland, high schools, and community colleges in order to provide programming for the skills that are necessary to construct, operate, and maintain data centers. This project in particular, based on the site plan that we looked at earlier, is likely to create at least 250 new jobs. And that does not count the construction phase where there will be thousands of construction workers involved in helping to construct those facilities and develop the site plan throughout that process. The folks that we hire are typically in the $80 to $100,000 pay range."

After the presentation, attendees were able to go into a separate room to discuss various aspects of data centers with experts provided by AWS. Two sessions were held at the middle school.
