Schools Closed Four More Weeks

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

State School Superintendent Karen Salmon announced March 25 that public schools would remain closed an additional four weeks to help combat the spread of the novel coronavirus, which has caused more than 400 COVID-19 cases in Maryland to date.

The closures of all public schools will continue through April 24, Salmon announced after Gov. Larry Hogan spoke at length about all the steps his administration had taken in a short time to combat the virus, which continues to spread rapidly.

“This crisis continues to accelerate at a rapid pace,” Hogan said from Annapolis. “This crisis is really just beginning. “It’s not going to be over in days or even weeks.”

The governor said it was critical for residents to practice social distancing and remain out of the public.

Hogan, who is also the head of the National Governors Association, said he would continue to press the federal government for a presidential disaster declaration that would provide the state with more funding for long-term unemployment, emergency protective measures and hazard mitigation, among other services.

Salmon said she had directed school systems in each county to enact a continuity of learning plan to ensure students could get instruction over the next month; before the action taken by Salmon and the state Board of Education this week schools were set to reopen March 30.

“We do not make this decision lightly,” Salmon said. “However, we have a responsibility to ensure the health and safety of our school communities and our communities at large.”

Salmon said her department was working with all jurisdictions to solve the issues they were having providing education to students and they would work diligently to ensure disabled students also received instruction.

Salmon also said the state was working to find space throughout the state to provide childcare for thousands of essential workers who have families; about 1,200 have been identified, she said, and she was seeking to get an additional 1,300.

Space for this initiative would include YMCA’s, public libraries and parks and recreation facilities for example, Salmon said Wednesday.

She said the state may consider enacting an extended school year, but that was still under discussion.

“We’re just trying to get geared up for the continuity of learning,” Salmon said. “Then we can start planning for other things.”

Salmon said the state leaders would continue to press the federal government for greater levels of economic assistance.

“We’re still pushing hard for major economic stimulus and for money to go directly to the states,” Hogan said. “All of the federal assistance is critically needed.”

Hogan said, however, the state would not wait solely for the federal government to act. Last week Hogan signed emergency legislation allowing for tapping into the state’s “rainy day” fund and allow workers to collect unemployment if their place of employment had been shut down due to COVID-19.

Hogan also announced a state-sponsored $175 million business relief program, from the state’s “rainy day” fund and allow workers to collect unemployment if their place of employment had been shut down due to COVID-19.

Hogan also announced an order against price gouging on household goods by retailers.

“These are the times that try men’s souls.” Thomas Paine wrote that on December 23, 1776, but he could just as easily have written it this week.

With so many local, small businesses now closed, it is our urgent plea not to forget about them when this crisis passes. They are the backbone of our community. Many of them have national names above their doors, such as Ace Hardware, Hallmark, and Subway, but they are owned by your neighbors.

The County Times, like many in our community, is also a small business and we too have had to adjust to continue to survive and continue to provide you with the information that now more than ever you need and have come to expect from us. To ride out the temporary hard times we have decided to consolidate our Calvert and St. Mary’s editions into one. This will allow us to have our small staff of veteran journalists continue to keep you informed.

We are dedicated to you, our readers, just as those now-shuttered small businesses are dedicated to you, their customers. Keep them in your prayers and remember them when they reopen. They are a part of what makes this such a great place to live.

Southern Maryland Battles COVID-19

Four Cases in Calvert, Four in St. Mary’s

By Guy Leonard and Dick Myers
Staff Writers

The map produced every day by the Maryland Department of Health shows as of March 25, eight COVID-19 cases in Charles County, three in Calvert and two in St. Mary’s. Local health departments have reported a fourth case in St. Mary’s and a fourth in Calvert. There have been four confirmed deaths in the state, none in Southern Maryland.

Dr. Meena Brewster, St. Mary’s County Health Officer, said specialists in her agency are continuing to investigate the possible exposure to the community of the four confirmed cases of COVID-19.

The health department has issued two warnings to the community about possible community exposure this week, once at the bar area at the Outback Steak House that health officials believe could have occurred on March 10 and again between March 12 and March 17 at the Weis Markets in Callaway from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m., at the Wal-Mart Super Center on March 16 from 10:15 p.m. to 10:45 p.m. and at the Family Care Pharmacy at Lexington Village Way in Lexington Park on March 17 from 2 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Anyone who was in these areas at the specified time might be at risk for developing the COVID-19 disease, which is caused by the novel coronavirus, according to the health department’s statements.

The first three cases are county residents who are all in their 20s, according to the health department, two are women with one of them self-isolating and the other who may have contracted the virus while on domestic travel.

The third patient is a male, and health officials are still unsure as to how he contracted the virus.

The latest case was announced March 25 as a male in his 60s who likely became infected through international travel.

Brewster said these investigations are time consuming and require interviewing the infected person and getting them to remember who they were in contact with for at least 30 minutes and at six feet apart or closer over a period of many days.

If the infected person identifies being in a place where these criteria are not met, then the health department will not make a statement about public exposure, Brewster said, because it effectively did not occur.

“Walking through a hallway is not public exposure,” Brewster said. “It’s just going to inflame panic when there really is no risk.”

Unlike St. Mary’s, Calvert has not provided any details on where the infected persons may have frequented, except to say in an online post that in the second case, “This person did not have any travel outside of the Southern Maryland region over the past month, reinforcing the potential that anyone can become infected through routine contact within our state. This person has had no contact with vulnerable populations such as those in nursing facilities or daycares. Within one hour of being notified of the diagnosis, the Calvert Health Department staff was able to reach each individual who could have been potentially exposed to coronavirus by this individual. Everyone who may be at risk of infection as a result of this exposure is under isolation for a full 14 days.”

The mother of that affected person did however post on Facebook that her son worked at a Dunkirk restaurant. She said, “He has had limited exposure to people and places but he has been to the doctor’s office at the hospital, the drive through CVS pharmacy in Dunkirk, Bayside Toyota Used Car office in Prince Frederick, Carmax in Waldorf last Saturday, Wawa in Dunkirk, and the CSA Fieldhouse two weeks ago. This just shows that limited exposure means nothing. I cannot stress enough for everyone to STAY HOME and WASH YOUR HANDS and DISINFECT regularly.”
Larry Polsky has criticized the Facebook postings: “This morning (March 25) the 4th Calvert County case of coronavirus infection was confirmed. This person is currently recovering at home. As with previous cases, Calvert Health Department nurses have obtained detailed health and contact histories from this person within one hour of notification from the testing laboratory. Our nurses have already reached out to those who had sufficient contact to put them at risk of becoming infected.

“Regardless of time of day or day of the week, our staff is immediately responding to all positive test results. Our ongoing goal is to notify those at elevated risk of infection as quickly as possible, so those people take appropriate precautions to isolate themselves per CDC guidelines. Along with everyone in the general public limiting contact with others, washing their hands frequently, and staying home if they develop any respiratory symptoms or fevers, we will minimize the spread of coronavirus and prevent severe illnesses and deaths.

“Social media continues to churn with posts about individuals who are supposedly infected with coronavirus and settings in which people could have been infected. Most of these posts have been wrong and are leading to unnecessary stress in our community. The Health Department is asking people not to propagate unfounded rumors.

The health and safety of everyone in Calvert is critically important to us. The Health Department staff, along with our families, are part of the Southern Maryland community. We have a professional, ethical duty to provide the most timely and accurate information to everyone. We will continue to personally contact those at increased risk as a result of exposure to confirmed cases of coronavirus infection. At the same time, we have a legal obligation to protect confidential health information. As a result, information on specific cases that is not necessary to protect those at direct risk will not be provided via our website or social media posts.”

Though the number of positive cases remains small so far in St. Mary’s, Brewster has said that the more testing occurs the more people will be found to have COVID-19. Testing is only effective, she said, when a patient exhibits symptoms such as fever, coughing and shortness of breath.

“At some point we will not be reporting public exposure,” Brewster told The County Times. “That’s because there will already be enough community spread.”

That means that the virus had become so pervasive, that almost any activity would put residents at the risk of exposure.

“I think we’re there already, we just don’t have the testing data to back that up,” Brewster said Tuesday. I think people are generally at risk.”

Brewster has said that most people who contract the novel coronavirus will experience mild to moderate cold or flu like symptoms. Just having the novel coronavirus, Brewster said, did not necessarily mean that a patient would develop the COVID-19 disease.

Sheriff Timothy K. Cameron, in speaking with the Commissioners of St. Mary’s County Tuesday during a budget work session, said that he had six personnel who were waiting for test results to see if they were infected.

Brewster said her greatest concern was that residents honor the orders of Gov. Larry Hogan to continue social distancing and avoid any gatherings of more than 10 people as the best way to reduce the exposure to the virus and defeat it.

She said she believed most county residents supported those goals.

“We have good residents here who want to do right by their neighbors,” Brewster said. guyleonard@countytimes.net dickmyers@countytimes.net

Meeting held in empty rooms

By Dick Myers

Editor

With social distancing the new norm and gatherings of more than 10 people prohibited, the town councils of Calvert County’s two municipalities met anyway the last two weeks, albeit in eerily empty rooms. North Beach met March 12, with council members present but the public barred. A week later, things had gotten to the point where only Chesapeake Beach Mayor Pat Mahoney and Town Administrator Holly Wahl were in the room and the rest of the council were on conference call. Both meetings were streamed for the public to view.

North Beach

The town posted the following messages on their website:

“...the majority of town staff will be teleworking to perform job duties. These staff members will be able to receive phone calls and emails during normal business hours.”

“The top priority of the Town of North Beach continues to be the safety of residents, staff and guests. As confirmed cases of COVID-19 Coronavirus increase, it is extremely important for all citizens to do their part in social distancing. The safest place for everyone is in their own home.

“Effective at sundown today, March 22, 2020, the entire boardwalk, Sunrise Garden and Wetlands Overlook Park. We feel this closure is necessary to prevent the crowds we have witnessed in our town over the last few days.

“In addition, effective at sundown, March 22, Callis Park will be closed to residents and non-residents until further notice. We are following the guidance of Governor Larry Hogan that the public should avoid playgrounds and pavilions. Public parks contain benches, play structures, etc. that are high-touch areas and could potentially be a source of spread of COVID-19 Coronavirus.”

“Lastly, because it was impossible to ensure surfaces were always disinfected, the public restrooms at the boardwalk are closed. Another reason for the restroom closures is to prevent additional supplies from being removed without permission.

“The March 12 town meeting focused almost entirely on the effort to make parking more efficient by making signs more uniform.

“Zoning Administrator Rick Crump showed slides of signs with a confusing array of shapes, sizes and messages. He has proposed standardized signs, with consistent colors. For instance, red will mean no parking zones and green will be for parking with restrictions. “It will make parking easier to use and understand,” he said.

Mayor Mike Benton said, “There are signs that don’t make sense” He added, “We just want to get some uniformity, so they do make sense.”

“Councilman Mickey Hummel, as did former mayor Mark Frazer at a recent meeting, urged some caution in making the changes because he said there were reasons why the signs were placed the way they were.

Crump said that a new system to allow residents to make cellphone pictures of possible zoning violations and report them to the town could also be used to aid town parking enforcement so new personnel wouldn’t have to be used.

Benton said the initial focus for the new signs would be the streets closest to the waterfront. He said a more detailed plan with the various proposed signs would be presented at a subsequent meeting.

Chesapeake Beach

The following were posted on the town’s website:

“Closure of Bayfront Park: Effective at sundown March 18th, Bayfront Parks beach and parking areas will be closed to public due to COVID-19 public health and safety concerns.”

“The Town of Chesapeake Beach’s highest priority is the safety and well-being of our residents, staff and visitors. Consistent with expert public health guidance related to the spread of COVID-19, the following adjustments have been made to Town Hall operations beginning Thursday, March 12 and until further notice. The guidelines are being implemented on an emergency basis and in concert with Federal and State recommendations for controlling and containing the spread of COVID-19 for the purpose of protecting public health and safety.

“The Chesapeake Beach Town Hall is closed for walk-ins by the public. All contact with Town Hall should take place through phone at (410) 257-2230, email at info@chesapeakebeachmd.gov or our Town website at www.chesapeakebeachmd.gov.”

At the March 19 meeting, Mayor Mahoney said, “During this crisis our main focus is going to be clean water, toilets flushing, trash removal and public safety.”

The council awarded a $543,1809, three-year contract for trash removal to Evergreen Disposal. Prior to the award, Mayor Mahoney read an email from the town’s current trash contractor, Southern Maryland Recycling of Owings, which lost the bid. The letter from company owner James Grainer, Jr. alleged Evergreen was ineligible to receive the contract. He said, “First, Evergreen Disposal is a Virginia corporation that does not meet the minimum qualifications because it has not performed these services for a municipality, local, or state government in the last five years.”

Southern Maryland Recycling further alleges that Evergreen did not include a bid price in its bid.

The letter goes on to say that Southern Maryland Recycling “regrettably” has filed a lawsuit seeking to overturn the bid award. Mahoney, or any of the council members on the conference call, did not comment on the letter.

It is believed the suit has not yet been filed because of the closure of the courthouse because of the COVID-19 virus.

Also, at the meeting, ordinances were introduced establishing the proposed town budget of $6.2 million for the next fiscal year. A hearing on the ordinances will be held at the April 16 town meeting.

Calvert Unveils Staff Budget

Economic Outlook Shaky

By Dick Myers
Editor

The Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) held a public hearing March 24 on their staff’s recommended budget for the fiscal year that begins July 1. In keeping with the impacts of the coronavirus pandemic, there was no public in attendance. Instead viewers of the streamed meeting were encouraged to call in their comments.

Director of Finance and Budget Tim Hayden said he is watching the impact on the economy that as of now “is not subject to measurement.” Of particular concern is the impact on income tax revenue caused by layoffs and how the economy might be spiked by the stimulus package making its way through Congress. There also might be some aid to states that could be passed on to Calvert.

Hayden said he is watching the impact on the economy that as of now “is not subject to measurement.” Of particular concern is the impact on income tax revenue caused by layoffs and how the economy might be spiked by the stimulus package making its way through Congress. There also might be some aid to states that could be passed on to Calvert.

In the meantime, Hayden must go with what he now has, which is a $322 million proposed staff budget that includes a property tax rate reduction from $0.937 to $0.932.

The staff started with requests for more than $14 million more than is currently in the budget and during meetings that was whittled down to more than $9 million. Those requests are not in the budget but what is in is a $3.4 million proposed budget that includes feasibility/design of Beach Elementary School, completion of the new Prince Frederick VFD firehouse, planning for the Prince Frederick Wastewater Treatment Plant upgrade and $3.8 million for public safety, including design for the new St. Leonard firehouse.

Hayden’s presentation, School Superintendent Dr. Daniel Curry discussed details of the school board budget which will be finalized at a meeting today (March 26).

Due to technical problems with the meeting streaming, The County Times was unable to hear the exchange between Curry and the BOCC nor the call-in comments. We will try to report on that aspect of the public hearing in next week’s issue.

Food Bank Takes First Delivery

“Food stocked at the Feed St. Mary’s Food Bank.”

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Feed St. Mary’s, the county’s first food bank designed to give local food pantries a close source to feed the needy, announced it became fully operational this month as the county came to grips with the ravages of the COVID-19 disease’s spread.

“We had our first shipment last Friday [Mar. 20] said Charlie Wharton, spokesman for Feed St. Mary’s, which has their food bank located on Signature Lane on Great Mills Road. “It allows local food pantries to order food at a discounted rate.”

Before the formation of Feed St. Mary’s, spearheaded by former local high school principal and head of the Lexington Park Rotary Club Linda Lymas, food pantries had to order food at a discounted rate.”

In a collaborative effort to provide immediate relief to the escalating food crisis, the Maryland Food Bank added additional food to help jump-start food distribution in St. Mary’s County, a statement from Feed St. Mary’s said. “The donated food is made available to pantries and soup kitchens in need of extra food.”

Organizations that provide food directly to people in need or anyone interested in monetarily supporting the partnership can contact Feed St. Mary’s directly via feedstmarys@feedstmarys.org or by calling 240-237-8197.

Transportation Plan Approved

By Dick Myers

The Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) has unanimously adopted the Calvert County Transportation Plan. The decision art their March 24 meeting came under unusual circumstances, since much of daily routine has been altered with the Covid-19 pandemic.

The meeting was held at the Harriet Elizabeth Brown Community Center will only three commissioners in the room, spaced at least six feet apart. The other two commissioners (Steve Weems and Buddy Hance) were at separate remote locations as were planning staff, all joined by teleconference. The public could view everything via live stream.

Some changes were made to the plan since the Feb. 25 public hearing. But the plan still contains two controversial items brought up at the hearing. Staff took pains to assure the BOCC those items did not have the dire consequences predicted during hearing testimony.

Left in the plan were traffic predictions based on three growth scenarios. Concerns had been raised about two of those growth scenarios – hyper and aggressive. Language was added to address the contention that they were not growth predictions.

The plan now says: “This chart shows all options considered during the planning stages of the strategy. Aggressive and Hyper growth are not the basis for the plan’s strategic transportation policy and investments for Calvert County. These two scenarios are what the county is trying to avoid.”

County Administrator Mark Willis, who was in the room with the three commissioners, added, “It’s not an objective to achieve. It is a highlight to stay away.”

Commissioner Tim Hutchins pointed out that the aggressive growth scenario was one that included a buildout under the existing zoning regulations. He said that buildout would be 176,000 people, compared to the county’s current 90,000.

Hance was taken aback. He said that was the first he had heard that number. And Commissioner Mike Hart said, “We are not built to double the number.”

The BOCC was assured that number was only if every piece of property was developed to its maximum allowed. They were assured that the buildout number could be revised during the update of the county’s zoning ordinance.

The other major concern raised during the hearing was the method used by the consultant to determine if an intersection is failing. The consultant averages traffic volume at all four connecting points of an intersection while the stare just uses volume on the most congested spikes. As an example, traffic may indeed back up in the evening at Routes 2/4 and Stoolkey Road in Prince Frederick, but those numbers for north and southbound would be aggregated with Stoolkey Road and the hospital entrance. The state could conclude the intersection is failing while the consultant’s method would provide a less dire message.

Staff insisted throughout the process that the consultant used an accepted way of measuring traffic volume.

The BOCC was assured that number was only if every piece of property was developed to its maximum allowed. They were assured that the buildout number could be revised during the update of the county’s zoning ordinance.

Weaver’s business is comprised of a sit-down café and catering. The café had to close when the order was given for all sit-down restaurants to temporarily shutter.

And, the catering business has been decimated by the order to ban gatherings of 10 people of more, the very definition of the special occasions such as weddings and dinners that she catered.

The catering business has completely evaporated, forcing the layoff of the part-time staff. Her restaurant business has been reduced to providing carry-out meals, which she was used to doing, from her storefront location in the Prince Frederick Shopping Center.

She asked her café staff to decide who best could weather the layoff and make the decisions accordingly. “There is a lot of distress,” she said about the tough decision.

Weaver said she has yet to decide whether to apply for the small business loans that are being made available through the state and federal governments. She said she has never done that before and hates to put herself in a position of being in debt.

Weaver said the county’s Economic Development Department and the Chamber of Commerce have been there for her in providing assistance. “They have been very helpful,” she said.

Waver is offering the carry outs from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., including dinners in the afternoon hours for those wanting something different to take home.

While some sit-down restaurants have repurposed for carry outs, others have been unable to do so, putting them 100 percent out of business for the duration.

In an effort to mitigate hardships to local business caused by the spread of Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19), the Calvert County Department of Economic Development has established a local business response team.

According to Director Kelly Robertson-Slagle, “The team includes the Calvert County Chamber of Commerce, Small Business Development Center, Southern Maryland Workforce Services and Maryland Department of Commerce, and other members of the business community. The team will coordinate efforts to determine what resources are needed by local businesses and to make those resources available.

“The department is also working closely with federal and state agencies and other partners to determine what resources exist or are being implemented and to make that information known to business owners.

“Business owners are encouraged to begin documenting economic impacts now, to be ready to apply for recovery assistance when it becomes available. Business owners can stay informed through Calvert County’s virtual resource center at www.CalvertCountyMd.gov/Coronavirus and the Maryland Department of Commerce Business Express COVID-19 online resource at https://BusinessExpress.Maryland.gov/Coronavirus.

“Business owners with questions or in need of assistance may contact the Department of Economic Development at info@ecalvert.com or 410-535-4583.

All business owners, employees and patrons are urged to follow aggressive precautionary actions that will reduce the risk of infection and limit the spread of COVID-19 from other areas.

The county continues to share the latest updates surrounding Calvert County’s response to COVID-19 through a virtual resource center on its website, including any precautionary measures, guidance and closures at www.CalvertCountyMd.gov/Coronavirus.

Maryland issued the following press release on its COVID-19 Emergency Relief Fund Programs for Businesses:

Maryland has authorized $130 million in loan and grant funding for small businesses and manufacturers that have been negatively impacted by the Coronavirus (COVID-19). This emergency assistance provides interim relief and proceeds that can be used to pay cash operating expenses including payroll, suppliers, rent, fixed debt payments and other mission critical cash operating costs.

If you are a Maryland-based business impacted by the Coronavirus with under 50 full- and part-time employees, or a Maryland manufacturer, check out the programs below to see if you qualify for assistance.

Maryland Small Business COVID-19 Emergency Relief Loan Fund - This $75 million loan fund (for for-profit businesses only) offers no interest or principal payments due for the first 12 months, then converts to a 36-month term loan of principal and interest payments, with an interest rate at 2% per annum. Learn more.

Maryland Small Business COVID-19 Emergency Relief Grant Fund - This $5 million grant program for businesses and non-profits offers grant amounts up to $10,000, not to exceed 3 months of demonstrated cash operating expenses for the first quarter of 2020. Learn more.

Superintendent Makes Impassioned Plea For More School Funding

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Schools Superintendent J. Scott Smith asked the Commissioners of St. Mary’s County for an additional $7.5 million over last year’s schools operating budget as well as an extra $2 million for a one-time expenditure to increase the system’s online teaching capability with technology purchases.

The commissioners were quick to say that the money was not available to honor Smith’s request; most of which was to pay for increases in health insurance costs and to fulfill the negotiated compensation agreement for school system employees.

Smith’s budget also calls for more special education teachers, security assistants as well as other added employee billets. About $5.4 million was requested for the negotiated agreements and health insurance costs, while an extra $974,151 was to go towards transportation of students; about $700,000 of that was to boost pay for bus drivers and attendants, most of whom are employed by private contractors.

Commissioner Todd Morgan was quick to point out that the four-year negotiated agreement recently reached between unions and the school system amounted to about a 4 percent increase each year for the next four years.

“That would be similar to what you did for corrections officers in one year, for a 13 percent increase,” Smith said, adding that sheriff’s office deputies and county employees all recently received steep increases in compensation on the salary scale. “It still doesn’t bring us to parity with any of our neighbors.”

The negotiated agreement would also satisfy the demands locally of the recently passed Blueprint for Maryland’s Future legislation, also known as the Kirwan Commission recommendations, to vastly increase education spending, particularly on teacher salaries.

For fiscal 2021, Smith said, system employees would receive just a one percent salary scale increase and a one percent cost of living increase, which he called “modest” before the COVID-19 crisis hit.

“We’re very cautious about how we allocate dollars now as we don’t know what will happen in the coming months,” Morgan said.

Morgan said he would be willing to support adding $3.7 million to the school budget; the proposed county allocation for the school system is $117 million, with a total budget reaching $263.5 million with state and federal funding combined.

Smith told commissioners that they had already committed more than $6 million in salary increases to 790 employees of the county.

“You want to talk about fairness, I’ve got 2,300 employees… and the budget we brought before you asks for one merit step and one cost of living increase,” Smith said. “That’s all they’re asking.”

Smith said the school system had just a $6 million fund balance, while the commissioners had a $30 million, unassigned fund balance with an overall fund balance of $65 million.

“We are really trying to do the job, we are really trying to do the work,” Smith implored. “We are not asking for anything more than we deserve.”

The commissioners came to a consensus on adding $3.7 million to the school budget and returning to the issue in May.

Coping with Stress During the COVID-19 Pandemic

The pandemic of coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) may be stressful for some people – everyone reacts differently to stressful situations. Older people, people with chronic illnesses, children, teens, health care workers and first responders, and people with mental health conditions may be particularly vulnerable to stress due to the outbreak.

“Feelings of fear, anxiety, sadness and uncertainty are normal during a pandemic. Fortunately, being proactive about your mental health can help to keep both your mind and body healthy,” said Tammy Loewe, Behavioral Health Director for the St. Mary’s County Health Department. “People with pre-existing mental health conditions should continue with their treatment plans during an emergency and monitor for any new or worsening symptoms.”

There are things community members can do to support themselves and their loved ones to alleviate stress. Avoid excessive exposure to media coverage of COVID-19. Take breaks from watching, reading, or listening to news stories. It can be upsetting to hear about the crisis and see images repeatedly. When you do read news, turn to information sources that provide reliable information about how to protect yourself. Try to do some other activities you enjoy to return to your normal life.

Most people that do get sick with this illness will experience mild or moderate symptoms similar to the common cold or flu, and will recover well. Stay grounded, exercise, and meditate. Talk to friends and family via phone or video to maintain connection. Try to get regular sleep, follow a healthy diet, and avoid alcohol and drugs.

If you or a loved one are feeling overwhelmed with emotions like sadness, depression or anxiety, please call 211, text your zip-code to 898-211, or visit 211md.org. These resources are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

The National Suicide Prevention Lifeline is also available 24/7 and provides free and confidential support for people in distress and crisis. Call 1-800-273-8255 or CHAT online with counselors for emotional support. Help is also available en Español and for the deaf and hard of hearing.

Locally, behavioral health providers have continued to offer needed treatment and support services in the community through telehealth services and appointment based scheduling. Visit www.smchd.org/bhtreatment/ for more information.

For local COVID-19 updates and resources, including information on mental health and coping, please visit the St. Mary’s County Health Department’s website at www.smchd.org/coronavirus/.

Regional Agency Launches New Website

The Tri-County Council for Southern Maryland (TCCSMD) recently launched a redesign of their website, www.tccsmd.org. The new website is a comprehensive overview of all TCCSMD programs and divisions, providing users with a complete picture of the resources and opportunities available from the council.

The new website includes sections devoted to workforce development, agriculture, transportation, regional planning and heritage. Users can also view council meeting times and minutes, get updates on TCCSMD news and contact each division.

“The website redesign is an extension of our mission to serve the people and communities of Southern Maryland,” says John Hartline, TCCSMD executive director. “The new design is simple and easy to navigate. Viewers can use the new site as a platform to discover more about our resources and reach out to our team members.”

Video Highlights Local Horse Industry
Second in “Farms in Focus” Series

The Southern Maryland Agricultural Development Commission (SMADC), a division of the Tri-County Council for Southern Maryland, has announced the launch of the second video in their “Farms in Focus” series, which showcases Southern Maryland’s vibrant agricultural profile.

SMADC’s latest video, “Find, Ride, Thrive”, focuses on the region’s equine (horse) industry, with the goal to inspire public appreciation for the many economic, recreational and health attributes that horses and horse businesses contribute to the area’s quality of life.

According to a 2018 impact study by the American Horse Council Foundation, Maryland’s horse industry is a dynamic agricultural entity that keeps thousands of acres of the state’s farmland in production, and is integral to the States’ economy with an economic impact of more than $2.1 billion supporting 28,000 industry jobs, and 16,000 horse enterprises with over 101,000 horses.

“Horses and horse-related activities are an important part of Maryland’s history and way of life. Here in Southern Maryland there are hundreds of horse barns and stables to choose from offering lessons for all ages and abilities, in every discipline from English riding to Western, as well as farms that focus on breeding, boarding, training, and therapeutic riding programs for adults and children,” explained SMADC director, Shelby Watson-Hampton.

The “Farms in Focus” series highlights overall agricultural industry products, not specific producers or farms, so the videos may be used industry wide. Each video is approximately five to six minutes long and features a combination of educational information and promotional marketing to help bridge the knowledge gap between consumers and their local farmers and encourages consumers to purchase products or services from local Southern Maryland farms.

The videos are free to view on the SMADC YouTube channel and are available to use by farms, school systems, economic development and tourism offices, libraries, and the general public. Stay tuned for more editions coming soon through 2020 featuring Southern Maryland’s key agricultural industries: agri-tourism, seafood, forestry, fruits/vegetables/row crops, livestock, nursery/cut flowers, and value-added products.

The videos are made possible by a grant awarded to SMADC through the Rural Maryland Prosperity Investment Fund (RMPIF).

Dawn Allison Rock

Dawn Allison Rock, 56 of Mechan- icsvile, MD passed away on March 14, 2020 at MedStar St. Mary’s Hos- pital, Leonardtown, MD.

Dawn was born on December 19, 1963 in Camp Springs, MD to the late Harley L. Lawrence and Jean L. Tefft Lawrence.

Dawn is a 1981 graduate of Suit- land High School. She is a 1999 graduate of Penn Foster College where she earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Management; graduating with a 3.96 GPA.

She was employed for over 17 years with KBR supporting PMA-265 F/A-18 Program Office at NAS Patuxent River for her first 16 years. As Project Manager, Dawn directly supported PMA-265’s Executive Leadership as the Graphics and Pow- erpoint expert and later expanded her career into a more technical and Programmatic roll. Over her 16 years in PMA-265, she supported multiple Program Managers; which meant developing a new working relationship on multiple occasions. On each occasion, Dawn was an over- whelming success in quickly building that repour with the new PM. Dawn would take raw ideas from the PM and turn them into a refined product that were often presented and briefed at the Pentagon and to Congression- al Staffers. Dawn took the lead in coordinating major Program Office events such as the Program Manag- ers Review, annual Industry Dinners and Dining Outs. Her attention to detail coupled with her fun and wel- coming smile made these events first class occasions.

Dawn transferred to the Ad- vanced Development group of KBR in September 2019 as a Program Management Analyst supporting PMA-231. She was eager to help the Advanced Development team in her new position; while at the same time was always there for her PMA-265 teammates to pass on her vast knowledge and expertise as KBR trained her replacement. In Dawn’s short time supporting PMA-231, she was recognized as a go getter and willing to take charge. Dawn quickly gained the respect of her customer and will be remembered for her en- ergy, initiative, and attention to de- tail. Dawn was always motivated and prepared but brought a positive energy to her team.

On May 30, 2014, she married her beloved husband, Robert Spencer Rock in St. Inigoes, MD. Together they celebrated over 5 of the happiest years of marriage. She and Rob planned trips and vacations and simply enjoyed the bliss of being togeth- er. Dawn beamed when she spoke of her life with Rob, they shared a very special love. Dawn enjoyed hosting parties, family gatherings, dinner parties, Women’s Ni- ght and Ladies Pool Day. She was warm hearted and always made everyone feel welcomed. Her cooking abilities were second to none. Dawn loved to cook and enjoyed sharing cooking tips with friends and family.

Dawn was a devoted mother to her two children guiding them into adulthood with her knowledge and compassion. She took great pride in watching them grow and turn into two wonderful adults. They maintained a beautiful relationship throughout and could always call on one another in good times and bad.

Dawn loved being a mother and hav- ing children that grew up into two of her best friends.

In her spare time, Dawn enjoyed coordinating events and worked as a part-time wedding consultant. She also enjoyed going on tropical vaca- tions, most recently to the Riviera Maya, Mexico. Dawn always lit up a room with her smile and energy. Her outfits matched her personality with a shoe collection that would knock you off your feet. Even though she loved all of her 300 plus shoes, she was happiest barefoot with her feet in the sand on a tropical beach.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by her son and daughter, Ryan Cole of Mechanicsville, MD and Kacy Kirk (Mallory) of Daphne, AL; sister, Kim Lawrence of Ster- ling, VA; brothers, John Lawrence (Laura) of Franklin, TN and Richard Lawrence of Owings, MD; neph- ews, Jason and Brandon Lawrence; nieces, Kelly and Hayley Lawrence; great niece, Jaycee Lawrence; mother-in-law, Sandra Rock of California, MD; and many extended family and friends. She was preceded in death by her parents.

Second-place team: Huntingtown High School, Calvert County

Southern Maryland Electric Cooperative (SMECO) held the 31st annual Southern Maryland High School Computer Bowl on March 7 at North Point High School in Charles County.

The event helps students prepare for careers such as software development and cybersecurity. Computer skills are vital for students who plan to become proficient in technical and industrial fields. With information technology firmly embedded in daily life, electric utilities depend heavily on computerization to help keep the lights on for their customers.

This year’s Computer Bowl featured approximately 70 young computer enthusiasts in a test of their coding skills and technical knowledge. Sponsors for the annual competition are SMECO, the College of Southern Maryland, Booz Allen Hamilton, and the public school systems of Calvert, Charles, and St. Mary’s counties.

Nineteen teams from nine high schools in Southern Maryland faced the challenging literacy and programming tests in the Computer Bowl. In the first round of the competition, students took a written test of their knowledge of computer history, hardware, and software. In the second round, teams of three to four students created computer programs to solve specific problems, writing code in programming languages such as Java and Python.

An all-girl team from Great Mills High School in St. Mary’s County won first place this year. Team members were Zoe Coughlan, Venzah Hamilton, Maya Lee, and Emma Staats, coached by Nora Blasko. Huntingtown High School won second place; Tom Currier coached Ethan Hilton, Quintin Hilton, Evan Fee, and Grayden Hays. North Point High School had a team take third place, with Melody Stahl coaching Ishaan Chada, Eric Fotang, Maxwell Stine, and Gabriel Alleyne. In fourth place was another Great Mills High team, made up of Holland Henderson-Boyer, Leanna Eldridge, Daniel McLawhorn, and Ryan Rex.

Winners received plaques and trophies, and SMECO awarded gift cards to the top four teams. The College of Southern Maryland also provided the first-place winners with performance awards.

Booz Allen Hamilton provided 11 judges for the Computer Bowl: Rachel Aaron, Alan Cooper, Janet Cooper, Carrie Dalton, Amber Dull, Shannon Katulich, Stephen Katulich, Laurie Lawrence, Caillean Parker, Doug Sanborn, and Jennifer Sanborn. Other judges were Tom Incore and John Stine of Charles County Public Schools; Joe Burgin, Eugen Leontie, and Brian Warnecke of the College of Southern Maryland; and Steve Nixon of Small Satellite Alliance. Lora Bennett and John Stine with Charles County Public Schools developed the literacy and programming tests used in the competition.

Press Release from SMECO

So, I imagine everyone is now caught up on their laundry, has baked (and eaten) a ton of comfort food, and frozen all the rest for future meals. I am sure many of you are catching up on long-needed home projects. I saw a funny meme (funny photos and sayings if you are not on Facebook), well lots of funny ones on Facebook about staying at home, and one said something to the effect that now we have all the time in the world to finish all those home projects, but we realized that we don’t feel like doing them anyway. It is a constant battle isn’t it to get that motivation, especially when there is a general feeling of anxiety and uncertainty in our lives.

Well, I am going to tackle the simple things here and there and to get that feeling of accomplishment. Right after I finish writing, and let’s be honest, maybe playing on Facebook a little more I am going to tackle my purse. I’m at that “just in case” point in life now. When we go anywhere (of course, no one is on Facebook), well lots of funny memes about staying at home. Because of the present state of our world, I know carry alcohol wipes, masks, and blue hospital gloves (left over from my hospital and home health care time in January).

This explains why my shoulder muscle is hurting all the time. And also, why, when I went to the ear, nose, and throat doctor a few years ago with fears about a large lump at the base of my neck collarbone area, she immediately asked how heavy my purse was. After an x-ray, it was revealed that my purse was indeed too heavy. Apparently this is a common medical complaint by women.

When we went on our one and only cruise together in 2002, one of the fun events was a scavenger hunt, but it was a scavenger hunt for what you had on you or with you. I was on a roll; I don’t think there was anything that they called out that I didn’t have. When the announcer got to the more intimate item requests there were actually women bringing them out to show. No, I didn’t.

Every few weeks, I dump out my purse, and refill it with all the best of intentions of going light. Yeah, that works for about two days. Then the receipts, and other items start to slowly add the weight back in. When I dump it today I am going to really be strict with the “no overfill” rule. My shoulder will thank me later I know.

The next big project for today is to cut and trim my hair. Might not be a good idea, and then again it might make feel light and reenergized, and no, I do not have any training in this area. There is a good chance that it will be a disaster, but I always have hats. It’s not like I have anywhere to go. I would just like to look presentable for my husband and myself. Oh, and for my rheumatologist, since I have a televiset scheduled in place of my normal JHU appointment. Maybe I should pluck my eyebrows too, if only I could see where to pluck. Maybe once I cut my hair I will do that. Well, wish me luck, and drop me a line if you have found any fun projects to do on yourself or in your home.

To each new day’s adventure, and to good health and blessings for all of you, Shelby

Corona – What’s Good About It?

To the Editor:

CORONA, what’s good about it? Here are some quirky observations!

I ventured out of the house last Thursday to acquire Orville Redenbacher Theatre Popcorn. I’m amused; I tried to give it up for Lent and didn’t make it to day three after being anointed with ashes on my forehead. For this fabulous blend, Walmart has the best price. No surprise there. I hang my head in shame as I grab the twelve pack. I also learn this virus has been around for some time. Unbelievably, the only Corona I’d heard of comes from Mexico and includes a slice of lime.

I digress. As I leave my Huntingtown domain and venture out to Rte. 4 this thought strikes me, “I’ve entered a time warp and it’s now early 1970 in Calvert” So few autos! My first stop was the bank (just to see if anyone was guarding the cash). As it turned out, the branch would commence lock-down (till whenever) two hours after my departure. Holy mackerel, maybe I should pick up a bottle of Champagne in case we don’t get released from lockdown by New Year’s Eve. Meanwhile, the polite, and might I add, charming young male employee opened the door for me. There were no other customers; we started chatting right away. He asked how I was feelingl and I inquired about his parents and grandparents. He was very concerned about ‘Nan and Pop.’ They are in their early 60’s; I decreed they are just SPRING CHICKENS.

I informed him people 60 and older come from harder stock: living through an assassinated president, tanks in Lafayette Park during Nam demonstrations, gas rationing, hostages and yellow ribbons, a run on Cabbage Patch dolls. I even mentioned my uncle was a Marine who survived the “Bataan Death March.” (You know, just light and lively conversation prior to lockdown.) He’d never even heard the name Bataan in school or college, but thought it would be an interesting read. I felt I’d accomplished my duty to pass on American History. Here’s the kicker, he was barely three on fateful 9/11 and really doesn’t know much about it. Evil tragedy is like having a suicide in the family. You want to stop reliving it. Gone in the blink of a text message. Have we come to believe and enabled our children to believe, reality only happens on television? Maybe a better motto for our loved ones, Don’t Believe Everything You Think!

Leaving the bank, I moseyed over for the Champagne. The friendly owner recently purchased the store. We chatted about how well her sales were going, she meeting such nice customers, plans for “dressing up the store.” A gentleman over 60y joined the “check-out banter” and he was definitely giving up smoking due to Corona. (The Chinese virus not the Beer.)

Heading north on Rte. 4, I shared the road with about 10 cars, all of us going under the speed limit. The reason there were no cars on Rte. 4, they were all sitting in Walmart’s lot. Exiting I was closer to Rte. 4 than the front door of Walmart. Abiding by social distance protocols, five of us shared how simply charming the perfect pots of pansies were at the front door. And only $9.98. Something to take our minds off toilet paper. Inside, a few of us ganged up on the cereal aisle only to witness complete brain-freezing emptiness. With no possible selection, each of our little band inquired how the other was feeling? We actually laughed and agreed to meet back when the stock was in! Walmart employees, all ages and shapes, were looking after us forlorn shoppers who reminded me of salmon swimming upstream. Thankfully it was nothing like Thanksgiving Madness. Exiting, customers were telling each other, STAY HEALTHY. I never once heard the “F Bomb” slip from customer lips. People were patient and polite. Waiting in line to check out at the grocery store, the cashier had a unique name and I asked about it and where he was from. To his delight, I pronounced it perfectly after he said it in his delicious patois. He’s from Zimbabwe. I asked if his mother was still there? Yes. Did he talk to her often? He replied “oh yes, every day”! All I could think was WOW!

So what’s good about Corona? We’ve slowed down! Most likely we are regaining some semblance of sanity even though everything seems insane. e seem happy to discover the storeowner’s business is great, that a young gentleman has now heard of the Bataan Death March and the courage of those men, some younger than he is now! It’s stopping to linger over pots of pansies with strangers and getting the feeling we’re happy to be with one another. It’s thanking the stocking crew for relentlessly stocking shelves only to see their efforts evaporate. Or, maybe we’re just discovering an Attitude of Gratitude and we feel good as we pass it on.

Stay healthy neighbors.
