Will Election Change Commissioner Dynamics? Jumps Ahead After

By Dick Myers Editor

The Calvert County Board of County Commissioners will have a new majority when they are sworn in in December after the November General Election.

Incumbent 3rd District Commissioner Kelly McConkey lost his reelection by 1,373 votes (as of the July 21 mail-in vote count) in the GOP primary to Catherine Grasso, leaving only two incumbents still standing, Buddy Hance and Mike Hart.

Multiple people familiar the situation have told The County Times that McConkey was considering switching party affiliation to "unaffiliated" and running as that in the general election, since there is no unaffiliated candidate in that race. However, a spokesperson with the Maryland Board of Elections said that was not possible as the deadline for candidates to switch party affiliation was July 5th and also there is a state law that says someone who loses in the primary cannot run in the general election.

McConkey did not return The County Times' call for comment.

The other incumbent who lost his primary was Chris Gadway, who was appointed to fill the vacancy with the resignation of Tim Hutchins for health reasons. Gadway lost the GOP primary to Mark Cox, a farmer, by 502 votes.

Commissioner Steve Weems did not seek re-election and Todd Ireland, a retired deputy and waterman, prevailed along with incumbent, President Hance in the at-large GOP

Hance garnered the most votes of any commissioner candidate – 5,786, with Ireland several hundred votes behind him. They campaigned as a

The other incumbent to prevail was Hart, who bested Steve Jones by 1 161 votes

With the Republicans leading Democrats by 27,783 to 24,007 registered voters, Republicans statistically have the advantage in any race. However, there are 15,535 unaffiliated registered voters who could sway an election.

Four Democrats have filed for county commissioner, one for each seat. They are Chelsea Ann Montague for at-large, Tricia Powell in the 1st District, David Gray in the 2nd District and Darrell Roberts in the 3rd District. Powell ran unsuccessfully four years ago for the same seat.

Assuming the Republicans will prevail, Hance doesn't see much change in the board's dynamics. He said both Ireland and Cox are county natives like himself and share his values of protecting the county's rural character.

Hart also recently has sided with Hance and Gadway on development issues, particularly in reducing the size of the town centers.

Although Hance isn't certain about how Grasso would vote, she did campaign on a platform of controlled growth.

School Board Candidate Mail-Ins Counted

Other Local Races Remain Unchanged

By Dick Myers Editor

After the mail-in ballots were counted on July 21, school board candidate Camile Khaleesi had overcome the 207-vote lead by Scott Fowler to claim the fourth position on the November ballot. The top two vote getters of the four win the non-partisan race for the two open seats.

As of July 22, there were still 380 provisional ballots to be counted, some of which may be rejected in whole or part, and 800 outstanding mail-in ballots which can be counted this week if they were postmarked by election day,

After the mail-in counting, Khaleesi had 3,482 votes and Fowler 2,840. Khaleesi received 953 mail-in votes to Fowler's 450. The other candidates who will be on the November ballot are Tracy McGuire, Lisa Grenis and Jana Post.

The outcome of none of the other local races was impacted by the mail-in count on July 21.

As of the July 21 count, the following results were reported for relatively close local races:

- •In the District 27-B Democratic race, incumbent Rachel Jones trailed Jeffrie Long, Jr. by 784 votes.
- •In the Republican sheriff's race, Ricky Cox led Dave McDowell by 1,134 votes.
- •In the GOP 1st District Commissioner race incumbent Mike Hart ked Steve Jones by 1,161 votes.
- •In the 2nd Commissioner GOP race Mark Cox led incumbent Chris Gadway by 502 votes.
- •In the 3rd District GOP race Catherine Grasso led incumbent Kelly McConkey by 1.473 votes.

According to Board of Elections Executive Administrative Aide Kristen Scott, the voter turnout was 25.51 percent after the mail-ins were counted on July 21, compared to an overall vote of 31.07 percent four years ago.

Chesapeake Beach Climbs Aboard Bay Ferry Idea

By Dick Myers Editor

The Town of Chesapeake Beach has joined North Beach in hopping aboard the proposal for a Chesapeake Bay ferry. The town council unanimously approved at its July 21 meeting throwing their hat in the ring for a feasibility study of the ferry.

The approval came after a presentation from the county's Tourism Development Specialist Hillary Dailey, similar to one given to North Beach by Economic Development Director Julie Oberg.

Mayor Pat Mahoney said before the presentation, "It's important that we realize that this is just a feasibility study, that there's no commitment on the town's part whatsoever."

He added, "The reason I thought it was exciting was because it gives us the opportunity to participate in the feasibility study. If you don't participate, you don't find out what's going on, or if it works out for you."

The town on their website solicited public opinion, and according to Town Administrator Holly Wahl, of the 89 valid responses, "83 percent said they strongly agree, and 12 percent said they strongly disagree." There were 79 responses from town residents with a similar percentage reaction.

Dailey said, "The ultimate goal of this initiative would be a 40- to 50-person passenger ferry system with no cars on board that would loop around the Bay with stops in several counties. This passenger ferry system would enhance public access for residents and tourists all around the Bay and would further develop and connect existing water trails and attractions, including the greater Chesapeake loop."

Dailey said the study would determine how many ferries would be needed and how many stops to include. Charles County also recently signed on bringing the total to 16 counties interested in being included.

She said, "This would not be a means to get to Ocean City faster. It would be a way to explore and connect the people and places that actually touch the Chesapeake Bay."

"For example, she said, "Someone could hop on this ferry on the Eastern Shore at Somerset County, at a stop or access point. Somerset County, for those who don't know, is right across the Bay from us, ride the ferry over to Calvert County, spend money on dinner, ice cream, stay overnight and then ride back the next day. And that would mean they would leave their money here."

It also would allow Calvert residents the opportunity to explore the other side of the Bay, she said.

Dailey said $1 million would be available for the feasibility study. Expressions of interest must be into the state by next month.

Councilwoman Peggy Hartman said, "The idea of getting to go around the Bay right from here is fantastic."

She also suggested a partnership with North Beach, an idea that appealed to several other council

Dailey said the state for now is looking for individual stop locations, but "Coordination would be great."

Councilman Greg Morris said, "The Rod 'N Reel's got a lot of parking there. It kind of seems like a natural fit there. I know that's a private area there and maybe there's some MOU that could be developed, but I'm certainly open to development of alternative town locations."

Councilman Larry Jaworski, who chairs the county economic development advisory committee, said, "I'm very excited about this. It just resonated so well. Thinking back to the history of our town, as you walk around, you can see pictures of what used to be a ferry coming from Baltimore, bringing people down here Admittedly, it was a mile-long peer, which we don't envision as part of this plan, but it would fit well from an economic development point of view in terms of bringing people to town.

"We're always looking for ways to get people to come into town and look around and say, wow, that's a really cool place. I want to come back there and do some more."

Legislature Overrides Chesapeake Beach Sports

Betting Tax

By Dick Myers Editor

The Maryland General Assembly has rebuffed Chesapeake Beach's efforts to impose a tax on sports betting in town. Mayor Pat Mahoney told the town council at its July 21 meeting, "I return home with some huge wins and an unfortunate loss."

The loss, he said, was it was "unfortunate (that) state legislators approved legislation that preempted the town's ability to collect an admission and amusement tax on sports gambling revenues. This is unfortunate as the increased traffic from sports gambling will further burden our infrastructure and public services in addition to adversely affecting our town revenues from electronic bingo slot machines."

Mahoney said, "I will continue my direct engagement in the legislative process advocating for the citizens and the town of Chesapeake Beach."

He noted that the town council had approved the legislation allowing the taxing of sports betting after an advisory town referendum showed citizens overwhelmingly opposed an expansion of gambling in town.

He said the legislature was worried about the precedent. He noted what Chesapeake Beach would have collected was only a ripple, but "the bigger picture for those folks was basically it was a loophole that has to be closed and they just couldn't allow say Baltimore city to have that."

"The good news," he said, "multiple bills were introduced in House and Senate with the intention of more than doubling the number of electric bingo slot machines in town from 450 to 975, approximate numbers," and "the Senate and House recognized the election referendum results and my concerns about the expansion of gambling in Chesapeake Beach. And fortunately, these bills died in committee. This is a huge win for me, the council, and the town citizens."

He also noted, "I worked with the Senate Budget and Taxation Committee to successfully secure a $400,000 grant to fund the recent Richfield Station water tower painting capital project. And I want to personally think Senator Michael Jackson, who serves on that committee."

He said, "Senator Jackson is our senator. This grant will allow the town to replenish our utility fund reserves and continue to contribute to provide one of the most important services that we provide to our town residents, clean water."

Mahoney also reported, "Governor Hogan recently signed legislation that will increase the percentage of highway user revenues for all municipalities in Maryland. This means that the town will receive more money to pay for roads and sidewalks. So, thank you, Mr. Governor, you were a great one."

Local Housing Market Strong Amid National Economic Uncertainty

As fears of a recession loom across the country, the Southern Maryland housing market has already begun showing some new trends

Although the market is still busy, as would be anticipated at this time of year, it appears that the impacts of economic uncertainty have started to impact our region.

Based on the most recently available data provided to the Southern Maryland Association of REALTORS® (SMAR), the Southern Maryland region saw a total sold dollar volume decrease of approximately 2.84 percent year-over-year, for a total of $272.4 million sold.

The region has also begun to see active inventory grow, but new listings have slightly slipped. Year-over-year, active listings are up approximately 8.45 percent, and new listings are down 9.96 percentr.

Approximately 624 units were sold over the last month in Southern Maryland.

Months of supply indicate that we are still in an unhealthy seller's market, with approximately 0.81 months of supply available. The amount of supply will likely continue rising and reach healthier levels as new regulations begin to drive the market.

Homes are still moving relatively quickly from the market, as the average days across the region saw a slight drop from last year, down from 12 to 10 days on average.

Over 87 percent of all homes that sold last month were on the market for 20 days or less

One sign that the market is slowing is seeing a decrease in the sold price to original list price ratio. This variable helps illustrate how much flexibility is in the market between buyers and sellers, and it decreased year-over-year from 102 percent to 101.4 [ercent

The average sold price and median sold price both saw increases, up 8.95 percent and 9.93 percent, respectively.

This could be the result of numerous factors, however, economic uncertainty paired with higher interest rates often leads fewer people to buy or sell homes. Seeing inventory begin to sit for lengths of time we saw pre-pandemic might become more common in the coming months.

As interest rates rise, consumers will not be able to afford nearly the same home price that they used to. Experts from the National Association of REALTORS® have emphasized the need to increase oil supplies to help tame inflation and prevent mortgage rates from rising more.

"While our economy struggles with recession and while interests are increased to curb that economic factor, buyers should not wait to enter into homeownership," SMAR's 2021-2022 President Gregg Kantak said. "The impact of higher interest rates may result in potentially less purchase power, but the power still exists, and the time to purchase remains now. This is not a wait-and-see moment, but it is ripe with opportunity, and your Realtor® can help you achieve your homeownership goal."

Press Release from Southern Maryland Association of Realtors®

Burch, Pillar of Community, Passes Away

By Guy Leonard Staff Writer

F. Elliot "Sonny" Burch, owner of Burch Oil and ardent supporter of numerous causes and service organizations in St. Mary's County died last week

He was 88.

Burch Oil operated a gas station, convenience store, and subway in Prince Frederick.

Burch was one of the most influential citizens in Southern Maryland for decades; his business activities ranged from selling and distributing fuel oil throughout Southern Maryland as well as operating numerous convenience stores and gas stations.

He was a partner in many real estate and development ventures, particularly in the northern portion of the county, which helped shape its character both commercially and residentially.

Those who knew him spoke of a man who genuinely cared deeply about his county and his fellow man.

"He always put the interests of others ahead of himself," said John Parlett, a long-time friend and business partner of Burch's. "I was always impressed with his deep connection to people.

"He was a genuinely good person."

In business, Burch was "cautious and fair," Parlett said, in that for deals to be sustainable and successful, they had to benefit all the parties involved.

Burch made it an imperative to become involved in community efforts and projects of all sorts, Parlett said, with an eye to making the county a better place.

"You didn't have to ask him to help," Parlett said. "He'd already volunteered.

"It was just in his nature; he was a salt-of-the-earth kind of guy."

Sherry Norris, Burch's daughter, said her father cherished the most basic things in life.

"He lived his life not just for his family but for his county," Norris told The County Times. "He loved St. Mary's County."

Burch lived on a farm in Mechanicsville.

"He loved working on his farm," Norris said. "And he loved to just mow the grass."

In his youth, Burch was an avid baseball player, Norris said, and loved to fish just as much.

He had purchased and used many boats in his life, she said, and often hosted representatives from major oil companies from Shell, Amoco and Gulf on fishing trips.

For the past few years, Burch was not active in the daily operations of the family business, but his children and relatives who ran it continued to consult him on major decisions, Norris said

Far from an ivory tower owner, Burch cared about his employees, too, Norris said, of which there were many over the decades of the family business operating.

Burch would go around to his various holdings each year at the holiday season and wish all of his employees a Merry Christmas, Norris said.

Of all the people Burch befriended over the years, his daughter said, he always worked to keep in touch with them.

He tried to never forget anyone, she said.

"He was really good at staying in touch with old friends," Norris said. "He'd call them up and have lunch with them.

"His friends were really important to him; he was a people person."

Johnny Wood, former state delegate and a life-long friend of Burch's, said his life and Burch's paralleled each other in many ways.

"We grew up together," Wood said.
"We went to Charlotte Hall Military Academy

"We got to be good friends, he and his whole family."

They both served in the Mechanicsville Volunteer Fire Department together as well, Wood said.

"Sonny was the best man at our [Wood and his wife Barbara's] wedding," Wood said. "That was 60 some years ago."

The kind of man Burch was meant that he, and his efforts and influence, would be deeply missed in the wider community.

"He was always volunteering... he wanted to be involved as far as the community was concerned," Wood said. "People like that you really miss.

"When I needed help with something he was there and vice versa."

Wood said his friend learned his business sense and methods from his family's traditions.

"It wasn't a one-way street," Wood said of Burch's insistence that business deals were mutually beneficial. "He was taught that way; his father was like that."

National Night Out: Connecting Law

August 2 in Calvert County and Nationwide

By Dick Myers Editor

National Night Out (NNO) has been held annually since 1984. It began simply as a night for citizens to turn on their homes' lights and sit out front in solidarity with police and against crime.

Nationally since its inception it has been sponsored by the National Association of Town Watch in the United States.

In Calvert it has been put on for almost 30 years by the Calvert Alliance Against Substance Abuse (CAASA) in partnership with the Calvert County Sheriff's Office and the Maryland State Police.

Candace D'Agostino has been CAASA's coordinator for most of that time, having started with them

She said CAASA at its inception around 1989 had a law enforcement committee with a goal to connect with the community regarding drug activity. "It was thought National Night Out was a way to get law enforcement to meet community members and create a positive interaction, so that they could work with communities to make them safer and have everyone work together," she said.

She added, "So National Night Out was just one of the strategies that the original founding members used to connect law enforcement in the communities to create those partnerships."

The focus of National Night Out, D'Agostino said, "is for neighbors to interact with each other, build connections and also to interact with the community resources that are in their neighborhoods, like fire and EMS, the state police, the sheriff's office, and other community groups that come out to make that connection.'

'Calvert County has grown," she said, "and we have a lot more neighborhoods and it may be that people are busy, they're working, they're taking their children to different activities, they're involved in other aspects of the community. So NNO allows them to step back from all of that and meet as a neighborhood and get to know new neighbors or neighbors they haven't interacted with because they've just been busy. So, it does provide an opportunity for some fellowship and some fun. And just to learn who lives in their neighborhood and reestablish some relationships.'

So, success of NNO is measured by those connections that have been made, she said.

"We hear back from community members or coordinators, and they say it was great to see the sheriff's office here, the officers were so personable, they connected with the youth, they created a friendship and the same with the state police when they are out there."

She added, "They're making a connection with the youth to show that they're there to help, but they're also there to be a support system should a community need them'

Community agencies such as the library and health department also participate and D'Agostino said that 'helps communities know where to go for resources."

In Calvert, NNO is a mix of communities that have been doing it for a while and newcomers, such as Oaktree Landing in Prince Frederick and Foxwood in Lusby. And White Sands will be returning after a hiatus of several years.

Also new this year, the Harriett Elizabeth Brown Community Center will be participating for the neighborhood surrounding it.

"They certainly don't need our permission to participate," she said, 'but we'd like to know who is so that we can share the information. And CAASA does provide communities with volunteer t-shirts and hats and banners to advertise. And we also provide the communities with giveaway items for those who come out."

"Each community does something different based on their community,' she observed. For instance, Oakland Hall, now in their third year, brings in a Kona Ice truck.

'It is a great opportunity to reestablish connections with neighbors, but it's also a great opportunity for those who are new to a community

Thursday, July 28, 2022 The Calvert County Times Feature

I Enforcement with the Community to interact with new neighbors and to also see those resources that are out there. It's a great positive interaction with everyone who's out there."

Fist Sgt. Jason Dean coordinates the sheriff's office's involvement. "It's a great opportunity for officers to connect with the community one on one for the areas they serve, and work and live in as well. It's a great program, a good opportunity for us to connect with the community hands-on, face-to-face."

Dean said, "Neighborhoods basically set up the coordination for these events and request officers," adding, "in the past we've had several of our K-9 units come out for demonstrations of what K-9 officers do. We've had our specialty vehicles and equipment such as our police motorcycles, Harley Davidsons, and BMWs and also some of our tactical vehicles, our SWAT team, just to give the community a hands-on engagement and contact with these various tools and equipment."

He said they also distribute educational brochures.

Officers are in the community constantly, but with NNO, Dean said, "It kind of humanizes the badge. It allows the citizens not only just to see a police officer in uniform in the function of his or her duties but allows him to put a name with the face and to speak to them individually."

In those face-to-face encounters,

Dean said the community can bring concerns or complaints.

Dean said Sheriff Mike Evans, who is retiring at the end of the year, will be out on National Night Out. "The sheriff has done a great job and we get a hundred percent buy in from all of the administration and command staff of the agency. It allows them to get out as well and put feet on the ground."

This year will be the first post-COVID NNO, a reminder that the pandemic left its mark on what CAASA does to combat substance abuse.

D'Agostino said, "Overdoses were occurring and involved different types of drugs. It might have been an anti-depressant with alcohol, something like that. So, the pressures were there. People were struggling, not working, dealing with all of those stressors that COVID brought upon us."

Another CAASA annual event will be returning August 31 – International Overdose Awareness Day, Light Calvert County Purple. Join CAASA, Twin Beach Opioid Overdose Awareness Committee, Calvert Behavioral Health and Celebrate Recovery for this year's Glow Vigil and "Lost Souls" Exhibit. The event is intended to remember those lost to overdose and support those struggling with a substance use disorder. The glow vigil will start at the North Beach Pavilion and then move to the

Sunrise Garden for the "Lost Souls" Exhibit

In addition to the vigil, they'll be lighting the county purple to remember those lost to overdose and support those left behind. Purple light bulb distribution starts August 6th at various locations around the county (see attached list).

CAASA and D'Agostino have been at the task of drug abuse prevention for a long time. She said, "I think for us, the drugs that were used in 1999, the drug trends change over time. So, back in the day, when CASAA first started in 1989, 1990, they were focusing on cocaine and crack cocaine. The drugs being misused have changed. And I think for CASAA our goal is to educate the population here in the county about the drug use trends, what we're seeing and try to get out as much information as we can.

"Why do we e continue to do this? It's because it's important to our community. It's important to let them know, not only what the drug trends are, but we work a lot with partner agencies. So, we're able to let the community know what resources are available out there."

She said, "Anyone in the community who is struggling with a substance misuse issue or mental health issue, we encourage them to contact Calvert Crisis Response at 877-467-5628."

Artworks@7th Features the Boat Show

The Chesapeake Bay is known to be the largest estuary in the country, and boating is an essential part of life. Local artists, Donna Carley-Tizol and Tracey Vernon, awash the senses with their featured artistry expressing their love of the water and boats. Hop aboard North Beach's Boat Show at the town's little gem, Artworks@7th.

Donna Tizol's mesmerizing-controlled pour, "Charted Course", entices you with gentle winds and vibrant colors as you make your way to your destination. Donna's, "Norse Drakkar" pays homage to her Viking ancestors through her use of rich texture worked into the prow. You don't want to miss her "Better Days" because when the Captain retires, so does his ride.

In Tracey Vernon's mystical painting, "All Work and No Play", she navigates the viewer through the foggy atmosphere as a local waterman heads out of Chesapeake Beach early in the morning. Her acrylic painting, "Shadow Sails", lures you into Western Shores Beach with dancing sunlight and shadows as sailors enjoy their view from a distance. In her original acrylic painting, "Risky Business", Tracey captures the angry tides and salty onslaught that challenges anglers during passage toward deeper water at the break of dawn.

Set sail with us at the opening reception on Saturday, August 6, 2022 from 1-4 p.m. where you can meet the artists, enjoy light fare, have a drink, and try to win exciting door prizes and giveaways.

CSM Associate Vice President Appointed to State Board

Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan reappointed College of Southern Maryland (CSM) Associate Vice President of Continuing Education and Workforce Development Ellen Flowers-Fields to the state's Technology Development Corporation (TEDCO) – which serves as Maryland's economic engine for technology companies. Flowers-Field was first appointed to TEDCO in May 2021. Her July 2022 reappointment is for a term of four years.

TEDCO is an independent agency, established by the Maryland General Assembly in 1998, to facilitate the creation of businesses and support their growth in all regions of the state. TEDCO's role is to be Maryland's leading source of funding for early-stage, technology-based businesses; to provide other business assistance to entrepreneurs throughout the state; and to foster technology transfer and commercialization from the state's universities and federal labs.

"Having great confidence in your dedication to public service, it is my pleasure to reappoint you," the governor wrote to Flowers-Fields. "Thank you for making this strong personal and professional commitment to serve the best interests of our citizens. I know we will succeed in our goal to make a positive difference for all Marylanders, especially with your assistance and support."

As associate vice president of CSM's Continuing Education and Workforce Development, Flowers-Fields is responsible for the oversight of all areas of the noncredit economic and community development programming including the Center for Trades and Energy Training, Maryland Center for Environmental Training, the Workforce Center, the SBDC, the Non-Profit Institute, the Transportation Center and adult basic education. She has more than 25 years of progressive professional experience in the field of workforce development and human capital management. Flowers-Fields recently published a blog as part of CSM's Cabinet Conversations series entitled: 'Retention and Upskilling of the Existing Labor Force,' and last month received the Maurice Erly Professional Development Award.

TEDCO is managed by a 19-member board of directors, 14 of whom are appointed by the governor, two appointed by the president of the Maryland Senate; and two appointed by the speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates - each to staggered four-year terms. Each member appointed by the governor is confirmed by the senate.

CSM Hosts Nurse Pinning Ceremony

The College of Southern Maryland's (CSM) 69 nursing candidates for Spring 2022 graduation celebrated their achievements at the La Plata campus by attending their recognition and pinning ceremony – a time-honored event that has CSM faculty welcoming their students as peers and colleagues in the field of nursing.

Annette Ragland, professor of nursing, served as the mistress of ceremonies for the event and welcomed attendees to the celebration of students' courage and hard work.

"This event provides an opportunity for us, your faculty, to recognize you and welcome you as our peers and colleagues in nursing," she said. "Thank you to those in attendance for helping us to recognize the efforts of these individuals in this celebration of their accomplishments."

Before the students were called to the stage, Chair of Nursing Dr. Sara Cano explained the significance of the pin each nurse would receive. She said that the modern pinning ceremony dates to the 1860s, when Florence Nightingale was awarded the Red Cross of St. George in recognition for her tireless service to the injured during the Crimean War. To share the honor, Nightingale in turn presented a medal of excellence to her brightest graduates and by 1916, the practice of pinning new graduates was standard throughout the United States.

Students received their pins from faculty pinners Morag Dahlstrom, Linda Hamel, Dawn Leukhardt, Catherine McKown, Rose Miller, and Deborah Rutledge. Professor Lynn Kennedy presented the candidates.

"Nursing is an Obligation"

The featured speaker for the event was Brenda Henson, a retired veteran who served with the Army and Air Force for 25 years and now works at the John Hopkins Bayview Medical Center in Baltimore. She led the students in a reflection on the Winston Churchill quote, "success is not final, failure is not fatal, it is the courage to continue that counts," recounting times when she has succeeded and failed throughout her career.

She also encouraged the students to care for one another as they progressed in their careers.

"Nursing is an obligation, not just to yourself but to your team, your coworkers, your family, your patients," she said. "Look to your left and look to your right. These are the people who are counting on you, and these are the people you will be working with. If you see a nurse struggling, check on your partners, and make sure they're ok."

"If you are a good person, you will be a good nurse"

Student Kiara West was elected by her classmates to speak on behalf of the graduates.

"Graduating from nursing school is not easy, especially not while juggling the pandemic, jobs, kids, families, and all the other responsibilities we had during this process," West said. "We have worked extremely hard to get here and I want each and every one of you to bask in this moment because we truly deserve it."

West kept the audience laughing throughout her speech, offering humorous observations on their nursing school journey and comparing their progression to characters on the television show SpongeBob SquarePants.

"As we become new nurses, we will become SpongeBob SquarePants," she explained. "We will not run away from new challenges because we are confident in ourselves, and we will adopt a positive mindset that will push us through any obstacle that comes our way."

West ended her speech on a somber note: speaking through tears, she dedicated her speech to her Nana, who passed away the previous week. She shared that her Nana instilled in her the importance of kindness, generosity, and being a good person, and taught her that how she treats people is the most important thing about her.

"I'm going to extend the same advice to you: you might not be the smartest nurse in the room, or the lead in skills, but ultimately, if you are a good person, you will be a good nurse," she said. "Nurses are the most trusted profession because we care about people, and we will do everything in our power to help them."

"This is your moment."

Closing remarks were provided by Jeanne Hill, associate professor of nursing, who said that it was fitting that the students chose "courage" as the theme for their event.

"One of the most important lessons I can give you is to always do what is best for your patient. Whatever it is that is going to have the best outcome for your patient, have the courage to do it. Have the courage to fight for it. There will be times where you will feel defeated or beaten, I promise you that, but I also promise you, that every time, it will be worth it," she said.

"This is your moment," she continued. "The one that you have fought hard for these past few years. Every patient you encounter will become a lesson. Embrace those moments, learn from each patient. Take the lessons you learn and give them to your next patient. Do it with pride, confidence, and skill. Most of all...do it with your heart."

Students who proudly received their pins were:

MacKenzie Kathleen Barefoot, Theresa Benton, Savannah Michelle Blackwel, Julia Marie Bowie, Erika Thomas Bruce, Alexis

Press Release from CSM.

First Electrical Helpers Class Graduates

Five Calvert County Public School seniors who recently graduated from high school also graduated as Pre-Apprenticeship Electrical Helpers from the College of Southern Maryland's (CSM) Regional Hughesville Campus Center for Trades and Energy Training June 14. The students' accomplishments were a result of their hard work and a partnership between CSM, Calvert County Public Schools (CCPS) and the Independent Electrical Contractors Chesapeake (IEC).

CSM and IEC collaborated last year to pilot a 200-hour electrical trade job readiness program that would connect skilled students for in-demand and high-paying electrical trade careers. In 2021, 12 Charles County high school seniors finished the program, entered the work force and began their full apprenticeship.

Finishing their CSM Pre-Apprentice Electrical Helper 1 and 2 certifications were CCPS Career and graduates Academy Technology Nicholas A. Carentz; Jordan B. Harless, Jason C. Harrington, Steven E. Jackson, and Kyle Wilcox. The five started the program in February 2021 and were given classroom instruction and hands-on training in a program that will serve as an on-ramp to their careers. The graduates completed the course with industry-certified credentials and will receive support from IEC Chesapeake to secure employment over the summer. Once employed, students are then eligible to begin year one of the registered electrical apprenticeship program in the fall at CSM or another IEC Chesapeake location. Upon completion, they will automatically receive their electrician's license.

"I have already had several job offers," confirmed Jordan Harless, of Lusby.

"I have to say of the many facilities we have at the College of Southern Maryland this is my favorite one," shared CSM Associate Vice President Ellen Flowers-Fields when congratulating the students and their families. "It's because I am the daughter of a shop steward. I grew up with a man who worked with his hands. He saw the value of understanding how things were built and with the quality in which they were built.

"I also grew up in inner-city New York and he would spend a lot of time when I was small driving us around and pointing to different architectures and pointing to buildings that he had actually put his hands on," she continued. "He is deceased now, but when I go to New York now I can still those buildings that he put his hands on. By continuing in this trade, you now will have the ability to see your work, all around the world. He used to lament when steel and glass structures came along and modernized buildings - and brick and masonry were no longer the fad. He would lament that it wasn't a real craft. Well, I can tell you that whether it's a brick building, a clay building, a glass building or whatever kind of building it is, electricity will be part of that building. Electricity is under our feet all the time. It's everywhere.'

An apprenticeship is the first step in a lucrative career in the trades, and the competition for apprenticeships can be fierce. ZipRecruiter currently lists 259 electrician apprentice jobs in Maryland with starting salaries ranging from $31,000-$50,000.

CSM provides top quality career and technical education that helps students begin new careers with workforce training certificates that provide entry-level skills for high-demand industries. Joyce O. Fogg

Joyce O. Fogg, 89, a resident of "The Willows" of Chesapeake Beach, Maryland, passed away on July 21, 2022 while under the care of The Charleston Senior Community.

Joyce was born in Hayes End in the county of Middlesex, England on November 22, 1932 to Mervyn Wright and Mary May (Matta) Wright. She met her husband of more than 70 years, Richard A. Fogg, when he served in the U.S. Air Force at South Ruislip, England.

Joyce continued her life long journey in the United States when they moved to Loring Air Force base in Limestone, Maine. Joyce often retold the story of how she dressed for the trip with her bouffant hair, and wearing high-heeled shoes and tailored, tweed suit before quickly realizing the local attire was a hunting jacket and snow boots! She became a naturalized citizen in 1959, and spent the rest of her life in the United States living in Maine, Massachusetts and Virginia before settling down at "The Willows". She devoted her time to helping others including as a special education assistant for adults with learning differences, volunteering at a center for disadvantaged women, and as a recurring contributor to the Women's Bible Study at Emmanuel Baptist Church. A voracious reader of both news and fiction, Joyce truly enjoyed living by the Bay watching the birds and butterflies in her backyard garden, volunteering in her community and attending Sunday services. While she was a proud U.S. citizen, she retained her love of the British Royal family and her afternoon cup of tea. Above all, she treasured time with her family, and all the friends and acquaintances who enjoyed her company and companionship.

She was predeceased by her parents and her brothers, Meryn and Percy. She is survived by her husband Richard; their children and spouses, Catherine (Wayne) Ramsey of Huntingtown, Maryland, Sharon (Richard) Gibson of Charlotte, North Carolina, and Verity Fogg of Roanoke, Virginia; their grand-children, Melissa (Lawrence "Buddy") Bowen of Huntingtown, Maryland, Colin (Katie) Ramsey of Grovetown, Georgia, Matthew (Jennifer) Nelson of Prince Frederick, Christian Gibson of Oakland, California, Ryan Gibson of Charlotte, North Carolina, and Robert Gibson of Raleigh, North Carolina, along with many great grand-children, nieces and nephews.

Hers was a rich life of deep faith and devoted love.

In lieu of flowers, charitable contributions in Joyce's memory may be made to the American Stroke Association, 7272 Greenville Avenue, Dallas, TX 75231; Link:
