School System Budget Process Criticized

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The Calvert County Board of Education (BOE) has come under fire from several citizen's groups over its budgeting process. Concerns are expected to be raised during the public comment portion of the board's July 13 meeting.

The biggest issue is the board's alleged failure to provide a line-item budget. Joshua Johnson, a member of Calvert County Concerned Citizens, filed a Freedom of Information request for a line-item budget and he says he was denied, citing "executive privilege." Johnson is also a member of the Calvert County Republican Central Committee.

Regarding the citing of executive privilege, Johnson said in an email to The County Times, "This would not be the case as monies were publically asked for and therefore it would not apply."

Johnson noted, "It is my understanding that once (the budget was) made public, which was done in the five Blueprint meetings as well as multiple meetings with the commissioners, that a line-item must exist and be provided.

Johnson said, "It is clear the BOE has not acted responsibly or been accountable. Factually. The BOE have a fiduciary duty to the taxpayers to spend their money responsibly and it is clear this is not being done."

Johnson detailed some recent school budget events:

- 2021 — failed audit where unusual

$500,000 bonuses were paid to five individuals. Several purchases were made unauthorized over the $25,000 (threshold).

- There was a key code on a $1.3 million slush fund. Even under FOIA request in October in 2022, it was never provided. Why would a public budget need a key code, let alone refuse to give what law states they have to?
- 2022 — BOE asked for $10 million of additional funds. It was found out they had $10 million on their rainy-day fund.
- 2023 —w BOE asked for $24 million. It has now been found out that they have $23 million in their accounts, none of which is protected and should be returned to citizens.

When the school board refused to supply Johnson with a line-item budget, he filed a complaint with the state ombudsman within the Maryland Attorney General's Office. That office offered to provide mediation. Johnson accepted.

But Spencer Dove replied for the Ombudsman, "The Ombudsman was informed this morning that the BOE is respectfully declining mediation. At this juncture, the Ombudsman can take no further action on your mediation request."

The failed audit referred to by Johnson was performed by the Judicial Audit and Education Committee of the Maryland General Assembly, made up of members of the House and Senate. In a missive dated

Jan. 25, 2022, the committee said, "CCPS (Calvert County Public Schools) procurement policies were not sufficiently comprehensive and were not always consistently used when obtaining goods and services under intergovernmental cooperative purchasing agreements."

That committee cited the $500,000 bonus given to five unspecified administrators.

Myra Gowans, president of Calvert Citizens United, is another critic of the school board budgeting process. She is expected to testify at the July 13 BOE meeting.

In a document prepared for and read in part at a previous meeting, she said the BOE, "had a public fiduciary obligation": under state and federal law.

Gowans said, "Federal law states that parents are your beneficiaries when they turn their assets and resources over to you. The beneficiary's assets are their children, and their resources are the taxes, which the BOE demand that the BOCC be paid and absent any recognizable fiduciary standards of accounting."

She added, "In fact you, the BOE, are sitting on a taxpayer largess of over $24 million which is unaccounted for. Yet you want the BOCC to approve a request for next year of $26 million.

"In essence you are requiring the BOCC to breach their fiduciary responsibility of trust, confidence and responsibility to the taxpaying beneficiaries."

The commissioners in approving their budget last month gave the school system $13 million more and promised to revisit the budget and the end of 2023 to see if more monies could be made available.

Gowans concluded by saying, "Courts contend that beneficiaries clearly dominate over the elected/selected public fiduciary. Clearly when public fiduciaries do not protect the beneficiary's assets and resources, they may be terminated."

A request for comment by the school system was not responded to as of press deadline.

Owings Man Arrested on Child Pornography Charges

Jared Michael Lemon

Maryland State Police computer crimes investigators have charged a Calvert County man with the possession of child pornography.

The suspect is identified as Jared Michael Lemon, 42, of Owings. He is charged with five counts of possession of child pornography. He was arrested by Maryland State Police shortly before 5 a.m. this morning without incident and transported to the Calvert County Detention Center, where he is being held without bond. During the course of the investigation, it was determined he is employed as an officer with the U.S. Capitol Police Department.

The investigation began in December

2022 when troopers from the Maryland State Police Prince Frederick Barrack initiated an investigation into the possession of child pornography. The Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force also received a cybertip from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children that an online user, later identified as Lemon, had uploaded suspected child pornography. Members of the Maryland State Police Computer Crimes Unit, with assistance from troopers from the Prince Frederick Barrack and Homeland Security Investigations served a search warrant of Lemon's residence in December 2022. Investigators subsequently seized electronic devices for forensic analysis. The analysis revealed evidence of possession of child pornography.

The Maryland State Police Computer Crimes Unit coordinates the Maryland Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force. This is a combined law enforcement effort involving police departments across Maryland that is made possible in part due to grant funds provided by the Governor's Office of Crime Prevention, Youth and Victim Services and by a federal grant from the U.S. Department of Justice Task Force investigators focus on identifying those involved in child pornography via the Internet and other related crimes that victimize children.

The investigation continues.

Lusby Woman Killed in Two-Car Crash

Members of the Calvert County Sheriff's Patrol Bureau responded on July 9 at 8:24 p.m., to report of a serious motor vehicle crash with injuries in the area of MD Rt. 4 and White Sands Drive in Lusby.

Upon arrival, deputies determined the one of the operators of the vehicles succumbed to their injuries and requested the Crash Reconstruction Unit to respond and assume the investigation.

Preliminary investigation revealed a 2003 Ford Focus, operated by Heather Nicole Hugel, 33 of Aquasco, was traveling south on Rt. 4 approaching the intersection of White Sands Drive. A second vehicle, a 2013 Honda Accord, operated by Denise Chaconas-Brown, 60 of Lusby, was attempting to make a left hand turn from White Sands Drive onto north Rt.4. Both vehicles entered the intersection at the same time causing the Ford to strike the Honda.

Hugel was transported to an area trauma center by MSP Trooper 7 for injuries received and is reported to be in stable condition.

Chaconas-Brown sustained fatal injuries from the crash and was pronounced deceased on the scene.

The cause of the crash remains under investigation.

Deputy First Class Andrew Ostazeski and Deputy First Class Michael Lewis of the Crash Reconstruction Team are conducting the investigation of the crash. Anyone who may have witnessed the crash or the events leading up to it, asked to contact the deputies at 410-535-2800 or via email: Andrew.Ostazeski@calvertcountymd.gov or Mike.Lewis.Jr@calvertcountymd.gov. Prince Frederick Plan Outreach Questioned League of Women Voters Issues Critical Report

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The League of Women Voters of Calvert County (LWVCC) has issued a 54-page report critical of the citizen participation process for the update of the Prince Frederick Town Center Master Plan (PFMP).

The Executive Summary of the report says: "The interests and concerns expressed by citizens who participated during the PFMP planning process were not adequately addressed."

The report notes citizen dissatisfaction with the process for the update of the overall county comprehensive plan, which serves as a guide for the town center plans and the county zoning ordinance. However, the LWV says they were not directly involved in that process, so decided to take a more active role when the PFMP update commenced.

"This presented an opportunity for the League to study the county's planning process," the executive summary states.

The study asks three questions:

1. "To what extent were the County's outreach efforts successful?"
2. "To what extent were citizen concerns addressed during the planning process?"
3. "Was the planning process transparent?"

The summary says. "To answer these questions, we conducted 17 interviews with community organizations, developed a LWVCC survey and reviewed seven public meetings and two surveys conducted by the county."

Regarding the failure to adequately address citizen concerns, the report noted, "The Recommended Land Use Plan proposed much more development within a larger area and at higher residential densities than most residents who participated in the process advocated or supported. The proposal to increase the 'scale, pace and density' of residential development met with opposition from citizens."

"Residents identified traffic congestion as a major problem that would likely worsen with the proposed amount of new development," the summary observed.

It further says, "They also pointed out that the rough topography and highly erodible soils in and around Prince Frederick were not conducive to intensive construction or development."

It goes on to say, "Citizens found that the amount and type of housing proposed in the plan appeared focused on promoting more development rather than meeting the specific housing needs of county residents."

According to the consultant, Sabra and Associates, LLC, "The amount of future residential development is to be left to market forces."

Another point raised in the summary is that "The long-standing county policy of 'controlled growth' had been dropped and fundamental questions about expansion of water and sewer facilities, aquifers and future infrastructure costs were not addressed."

The report says, "The mismatch between what many citizens said they wanted and what the county proposed may be explained, in part, by the outreach problems that occurred during the planning process, due largely to COVID-19. Not enough opportunity was provided to identify citizen concerns in face-to-face meetings or delve more deeply into the issues and arrive at community consensus."

But, it added, "Another, more fundamental factor in this considerable mismatch may be explained by the lack of transparency in the process of identifying and responding to citizens expressed needs."

During research for this study, the LWVCC learned that an informal coalition formed between the development community and the County in early 2015 that focused on ways to increase and accelerate growth in town centers.

"Ordinarily, this would not be a problem because it is fair to ask representatives of any interest group for their ideas and opinions. However, many of the recommendations made by developers during these meetings (which were not advertised publicly) appeared soon thereafter as amendments, rezonings and, ultimately, land use policy that became major features in the 2019 Calvert County Comprehensive Plan and the July 2021 draft Prince Frederick Town Center Master Plan. Since the public did not know about the meetings, these changes seemed to come out of nowhere."

"Even some developers who participated in the meetings expressed surprise at the extent of incorporation of the ideas and opinions from an informal coalition."

Parks and Recreation Seeks Revenue Enhancement

Some Fees Increased, Ad Policy Adopted

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The Calvert County Department of Parks and Recreation is trying to get funding for its operation more dependent on fees and other charges. Parks and Recreation Director Shannon Nazzal told the Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) at their July 11 meeting that not too long ago fees covered 50 percent of the department's costs. Now revenue outside the county's general fund only makes up 30 percent.

With revenue enhancement in mind, Nazzal has proposed some slight increases in her department's fee schedule and also the BOCC has adopted an advertising policy for the department to generate additional revenue.

In a memo to the commissioners, Nazzal wrote: "The Department of Parks & Recreation (P&R) collects revenues and fees for many programs and facilities throughout Calvert County. This includes everything from summer camps, swim lessons, camping reservations, daily admissions, food sales, and more."

The BOCC approved the fee changes presented by Nazzal. For parks, natural resources, recreation and aquatics they included adjusted daily camping fee and rates for adult softball increased by $3 per game. She said, "Changes are recommended to offset labor and supply costs for cleaning and customer support. The softball rate is due to increased costs for officials."

The changes for concessions and golf included:

- Updated sample pricing for accuracy (percentages have not changed);
- Added fees for golf clubhouse beverage packages;
- Increased golf league rates by $3; and
- Adjusted golf rates to separate greens fees and cart fees as well as one size range bucket.

Nazzal said, "Changes recommended due to the addition of clubhouse and benchmarking fee types with other courses."

During the discussion, Commissioner Vice President Mike Hart noted the escalating costs of everything, including a doubling of labor costs in recent years.

The increased fees will become effective January 1.

Two weeks earlier, the commissioners approved the policy for advertising and sponsoring recreation activities. Prior to the decision to approve Nazzal's recommendation, Hart once again expressed reservations about political advertising in the department.

Nazzal said certain types of advertising would be prohibited, such as "tobacco or vaping products, alcoholic beverages, demeaning, disparaging words, profanity, violence, and a number of other items as well. And we would be monitoring for those types items to prohibit those from being advertised within our park system."

But Hart wanted to know about political advertising. "Me personally, I don't want political advertising on there. I didn't know how the rest of the board felt. We see it get pretty obnoxious, so I'd hate to see the field have 5,000 signs."

County Attorney John Norris seemed to leave the commissioners some wiggle room for some kinds of regulation despite free speech concerns. But he said the proposed policy had been reviewed for legal sufficiency without any political restrictions.

Nazzal said that for now there were no plans for advertising in parks, only in the department's printed materials.

Commissioner Catherine Grasso said, "I agree with what you're saying, Commissioner Hart. But if it's free speech and if it's our right as Americans and that is the law, then we've got to go on with it."

Commissioner Vice President Mike Hart

In the end the BOCC, including Hart, went along with the request for the advertising policy that did allow political ads.

Parks & Recreation Receives Youth Mentoring Grant To Target At-Risk Middle-Schoolers

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The Calvert County Department of Parks and Recreation has received a $70,000 grant to establish a mentoring program, largely for middle schoolers. According to Recreation Division Chief Nate Smith, the monies will be used “to develop a youth mentoring program over a two-and-a-half-year period to support youth affected by substance misuse in Calvert County.”

Smith told the Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) at their July 11 meeting that he has been with the department for 19 years and this is the first time they have been able to develop such a program. “I am excited to get this grant,” he said.

Smith was asked how many youths can be accommodated in the new program. “We can handle as many as are interested,” he said.

The monies will be used to hire a coordinator for the program. The funding comes from the U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP) through the National Recreation and Parks Association (NRPA).

Smith reported, “The grant will be utilized to develop a youth mentoring program utilizing NRPA’s Youth Mentoring Framework to implement group and one-on-one youth mentorship and family engagement opportunities within P&R. The program would be operated through P&R community centers overseen by Recreation division staff.”

The program will start in spring of 2024.

Smith explained in a memo to the BOCC, “The county will receive funds through a cost-reimbursable model, submitting quarterly financial reports to the NRPA program officer that will contain an invoice, itemized transactions and receipts for all expenses to NRPA. A budget adjustment in the amount of $70,000 is requested to support this program which is fully reimbursable by NRPA.”

The commissioners unanimously approved the signing of the memorandum of understanding and the budget adjustment for $70,000.

Calvert County to Receive Waterway Improvement Funds Governor Announces Two Local Projects

Governor Wes Moore announced on July 10 that the Maryland Department of Natural Resources is providing $13.5 million in Waterway Improvement Funds. The funds will support new and improved public boating access facilities, dredging of navigable public waterways, emergency vessels and equipment for local first responders, and other important infrastructure and initiatives.

Two projects in Calvert County were on the list. For a total of $229,063 in funding, they are:

- St. Leonard Volunteer Fire Department — Dive and rescue rigid hull vessel
- Hallowing Point State Park — Boat ramp dredging and beneficial use

“Investing in infrastructure is integral to achieving the full potential of Maryland’s resources,” said. “This partnership between the Maryland Department of Natural Resources and our local jurisdictions is critical to improving, maintaining, and promoting use of our public waterways.”

The Waterway Improvement Fund is primarily derived from the one-time 5% excise tax when a boat is purchased and titled in the state, as well as a small portion of the state gas tax. It has been used to construct and maintain more than 400 public boating facilities and more than 250 public navigational channels across the state as well as the acquisition of vessels.

“Maryland’s Waterway Improvement Fund is an outstanding example of a user-pay, user-benefit program,” said Maryland Secretary of Natural Resources Secretary Josh Kurtz. “Paid largely by Maryland’s boating public, supporting local efforts are critical to this partnership.”

Applications are reviewed and projects are selected based on local government and state needs and priorities, which are evaluated to determine the benefit to the general motor boating public.

Starting after July 15, the Department of Natural Resources will accept Waterway Improvement Fund applications for the next fiscal year through the department’s online Grants Gateway.

Into the Woods

8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

James Lapine and Stephen Sondheim take everyone's favorite storybook characters and bring them together for a timeless yet relevant piece... and a rare modern classic. The Tony Award-winning book and score are both enchanting and touching.

The story follows a Baker and his wife, who wish to have a child; Cinderella, who wishes to attend the King's Festival; and Jack, who wishes his cow would give milk. When the Baker and his wife learn they cannot have a child because of a Witch's curse, they embark on a journey to break the curse. Everyone's wish is granted, but the consequences of their actions return to haunt them later with disastrous results.

One of Sondheim's most famous works, Into the Woods, is a musically sophisticated show with the opportunity to feature actors adept at dark comedy. Designers will especially enjoy highlighting the fantastical elements of this magical world.

He enjoyed waterfowl and big game hunting, taking multiple trophies throughout the United States and Canada, including Kodiak brown bear, grizzly bear, black bear, musk ox, mountain goat and mountain/barren ground/woodland/perry caribou, and more. Garn was also an accomplished technical/mixed gas scuba diver.

Garn divorced in 1996. He later married Gail Lee Williams (m. 2000-2015), and moved to beautiful St. Inigoes Creek, Lexington Park, Maryland. Living on the water, he would take his children, grandchildren, and friends fishing and crabbing. After Gail's passing in 2015, Garn continued to live on St. Inigoes Creek with his beloved dogs Teal, Izzy, Jack, and Trail.

Garn is survived by his former wife, Karleen Marie Cogswell and their children Garn T Godwin IV (Lynn) of Aquasco, MD, Kimberly Ann Godwin Clark (Bill) of Upper Marlboro, MD, and Kevin Karl Godwin (Angel) of Pylesville, MD; stepchildren Mark Williams (Mary) of Leonardtown, MD, Deborah Montalvo (Jesus) of Pasadena, MD, and Scott Williams of Pasadena, MD; 8 grandchildren, 1 great grandchild, Garn Thomas Godwin VI, who will carry on his name; 5 siblings: Roger G. Wanderings of an Aimless Mind

by Shelby Oppermann

Lost in the Pages

Do you ever read a book where you become lost so completely in the depths of its words and imagery that you actually live with the book in your head, and it becomes your world for that period of time, and even for weeks or months afterwards? These are the types of books that will live in your heart and mind always. I have had quite a few books like that in my life, like Watership Down by Richard Adams, many of which are bestsellers for a reason. Its funny though that I normally try to avoid bestsellers for some reason, though I think it is similar to myself, and others not getting in on the latest clothing or other trends. We so want to be individual, yet we also crave to be accepted into groups of friends and colleagues at the same time. Of course, these feelings change through the years... for me anyway.

I am very thankful that both my sons share the same love for books as I. Each of them find or buy books for me which I always end up tucking away into that “live forever in my heart” category. My sons definitely know their mom. And I find or buy books for them too. You can just imagine how I was during Scholastic book fair days or when we used to go to the old beloved Bay Books in Wildewood Center (everyone remember collecting crab stamps on the back) or to Joe Orlando’s Fenwick Street Books in Leonardtown, which thank goodness new owners have kept going.

Even though both sons pick up books for themselves or for me at other times, I always know that for Christmas, my birthday or Mother’s Day, I may receive a book, or two, from one or both of them. One of my favorite books, First Light by Sue Monk Kidd, who is also the author of The Secret Life of Bees and The Mermaids Chair amongst others, my youngest son Ryan and I found many years ago at The Farmer’s Market in Charlotte Hall at one of the vendor spots who has yards and yards of tables out in front of his shop. I had already read Sue Monk Kidd’s bestsellers when I came across First Light which was a bit musty and covered in the Farmer’s Market’s gritty yellow parking lot dust. But I can spot a treasure. I loved the cover at first sight and when I looked through the book’s pages there was also another treasure to be found: a folded up lined paper with a written Christmas poem and prayer in the most beautiful cursive handwriting that I had seen in a long time. Naturally, I still keep the letter inside First Light. Ryan bought the book for me, and I will keep it forever. First Light is an inspirational novel which “traces Sue Monk Kidd’s development as a spiritual seeker” in the midst of all her other life roles. First Light came into my hands at the perfect time.

My oldest son Robert buys me books which have some sort of mystery in them, which he knows I love. Some of the last few books, from The Maidens by Alex Michaelides to Verity by Collen Hoover and The Guest List by Lucy Foley were intriguing to the end. But the latest book I have read from my son was Where the Crawdads Sing by Delia Owens which I know everyone has heard about either in book or movie format. This was one of those books that I kept thinking I wanted to read; however, it was one of those bestsellers that I don’t normally buy or check out for myself.

Where the Crawdads Sing takes you in quickly from the first beautifully crafted paragraph all the way through to the last sentence of the book. Her prose flows in and out with imagery and emotion like the main character, Kya Clark the “Marsh Girl’s” beloved currents in the swampy inlets of coastal North Carolina where family and lovers have abandoned her most of her life. There is not a moment throughout this book where Delia Owens does not convey emotion, knowledge, and suspense, since of course there is a murder mystery which is woven throughout the chapters. I was in that state of mind where I wanted to get to the end of the book to find out who murdered the antagonist, but really wanted to live in the story much longer. Even when I wasn’t reading it, I was in a daze, still in Kya’s head and with her in the swamp and wondering when I could slip another chapter in to read. After looking through the actors who were cast for the parts in the movie and noting that the author was a big part of the movie, I think I’m ready to see it now. I only wish I had saved the book to read until we are in the Outer Banks at the end of the month. I’d love to know if you have read Where the Crawdads Sing, what you thought of it, and what books have stayed in your heart.

To each new day’s adventure, Shelby

FINANCIAL FOCUS

Retirees: Talk finances with your grown children

When you’re retired, you’ll likely have some financial concerns — just like all retirees. However, if you’ve invested regularly and followed a long-term financial strategy, you should be able to address most issues that come your way. But there’s one important action that’s sometimes overlooked by retirees: sharing their financial situation with their grown children. And this knowledge can benefit everyone in your family.

You might be surprised by the concern your children have for your financial well-being. Consider these findings from a 2023 study by Age Wave and Edward Jones:

- 66% of millennials (generally defined as ranging from 27 to 42) worry that their parents or in-laws may not have enough money to live comfortably in retirement.
- 83% of millennials would rather know their parents are financially secure in their retirement, even if it means their parents pass on less money to them.

If you have children in this age range or older, or who soon will be, how can you address their concerns and potentially improve your financial outlook? Communication is the key. By openly communicating with your family about your financial status, you can reduce anxieties and misperceptions. If you’re in good financial shape, your adult children may be reassured that you won’t be needing their assistance. And if you are feeling some financial pressures, you can inform your children of the steps you are taking to improve your situation.

One such step may be to reduce your cost of living — the less you spend day to day, the better your ability to preserve your investment and retirement accounts. You may be able to reduce costs in many small ways, such as ending streaming services you no longer use, but you could make an even bigger impact by downsizing your living arrangements. In fact, 72% of today’s retirees have downsized or are willing to downsize to reduce their housing costs, according to the Age Wave/Edward Jones survey. Downsizing isn’t for everyone, but if it’s a possibility for you, it may be worth considering because the savings could be significant.

You may also be able to reduce or consolidate your debts. Start by understanding how much and what kinds of debt you have. Then, consider ways to lower your payments, such as refinancing. For example, if you’re carrying a balance on multiple credit cards, you might be able to transfer the amounts you owe onto a single card with a more favorable interest rate.

Here’s another move to consider: Adjust your investment mix to possibly provide you with more income in retirement. During your working years, you may have invested primarily for growth — after all, you could be retired for two or more decades, so you’ll need to draw on as many financial assets as possible. But once you’re retired, your investment focus may need to shift somewhat toward income-producing opportunities. Keep in mind, though, that you’ll still need some growth potential to help keep ahead of inflation.

One final suggestion: Let your children know if you already have a strategy in place to meet the potentially high costs of long-term care, such as a nursing home stay. This burden is certainly something you won’t want your children to take on.

By informing your children about your financial picture, and how you’re trying to improve it, you can ease everyone’s minds — so keep the lines of communication open.

NAVAL AIR STATION PATUXENT RIVER News

Tomahawk Program Welcomes New Leadership

The Navy's Tomahawk Weapons System program office (PMA-280) welcomed a new program manager during a ceremony July 6 in Naval Air Station Patuxent River.

Rear Adm. Stephen Tedford, Program Executive Officer for Unmanned Aviation and Strike Weapons (PEO (U&W)), presided over the change of command ceremony where Capt. Jon Hersey relieved Capt. John Red, who will transition to the Defense Security Cooperation Agency in Arlington, Virginia later this month.

"For the past year, I have watched your [Red's] mastery of all things Tomahawk," Tedford said. "Your perseverance and steadfast dedication to the mission has never wavered."

Red completed two tours with PMA-280 prior to assuming role of program manager in 2019. During his tenure, he led the transition from Block IV to Block V variant and oversaw a number of upgrades to the Tomahawk weapons system including the Joint Multi-Effects Warhead System and Maritime Strike Tomahawk. His team also coordinated the first multi-service procurement of Tomahawk for the Army and Marine Corps.

From recertification and production efforts to innovative contracting strategies, Red recognized the entire team for their accomplishments of the last four years - 960 people strong, he said.

"Mike, your team is ready for your style of leadership and the challenges that have been laid forward," Red said. "The critical need of the weapon system is clear and the program is in your hands."

A native of Westerville, Ohio, Hersey graduated from The Ohio State University in 1998 with a bachelor's degree in computer science and engineering and a master's degree in material logistics support management from the Naval Postgraduate School.

In 2020, Hersey was designated an Aerospace Maintenance Duty Officer and deployed nine times in addition to his shore assignments. His program management tours include deputy program manager for missile systems in PMA-280, deputy program manager for Supersonic Sea Skimming Target in Aerial Targets Program (PMA-208), and branch head, Office of the Chief of Naval Operations Aviation Readiness Branch (OPNAV N832) and Logistics and Readiness Branch (OPNAV N980L).

"I've inherited a remarkable team, one you have been integral in building," Hersey said to Red. "Your leadership has been deeply important in shaping the future of Tomahawk over the last few years."

Hersey will lead a geographically diverse program office of nearly 1,000 government, military and civilian personnel and a total obligation authority over $18 billion dollars.

"Working together as partners, military, civilian and contractor personnel, we make up the Tomahawk family," he said. "We will drive to learn, maintain a positive mindset, build camaraderie ultimately achieving a modernized force that will be lethal, resilient, sustainable, survivable, agile and responsive if called upon."

CSM Expands Homeschool Programming into St. Mary's County

Families Celebrate a Sense of Community

Enrollment for College of Southern Maryland's (CSM) homeschool programming opened July 12, with classes expanding to the college's Leonardtown Campus as the educational alternative continues to grow in popularity throughout the region.

The CSM Kids' & Teen College has offered families a supportive community along with a customizable experience that includes a wide variety of homeschool classes at the La Plata Campus since 2019. Beginning this fall, parents can now also connect with other families, share resources, and get the support they need to create an educational plan that works for their family in St. Mary's County.

"I take it as a personal challenge to let every family who walks through our doors know that they are not alone," shared CSM Youth Program Manager Dr. Tony Warrick. "I'm always looking for ways to create communities among our students and parents. If we can help new families face their fears, walk with them, and deal with their concerns – then we are succeeding."

CSM's homeschool program has grown exponentially, from 40 students in just a few classes to nearly 300 enrolled in dozens, since opening its doors in fall 2019. This mirrors larger trends statewide: according to the Maryland Home School Association's (MDHSA) November 2020 report, homeschool children now account for 4.6 percent of the public-school K-12 population. In the 2020-2021 school year, the most recent year that the MDHSA has data available, 4,586 students in Southern Maryland were being homeschooled, and the total number of Maryland homeschool children now exceeds 40,000.

Recently, CSM interviewed two homeschool families about their experiences with the program and their reasons for choosing homeschooling and partnering with CSM. Those interviews are below:

Something unique that did not exist before: Turner and Ian Mudd-Stewart

When CSM first began planning homeschool classes in spring 2019, Warrick said he pulled together a small group of families to help him determine what offerings would align with families' homeschool curricula, appeal to the children, and most benefit the families overall. The Mudd-Stewart family, of La Plata, was part of that group.

Maggie Mudd-Stewart and her husband, David, said that they did not take their decision to homeschool lightly. David Stewart has been a public school teacher for more than 17 years and understands the value of a public-school education. Mudd-Stewart owns and operates her own photography studio and said she was unsure of the logistics of fitting homeschooling into her busy schedule.

But when the family discovered during their son Turner's kindergarten year that the public school could not accommodate his gifts in a satisfactory way, they began to consider homeschooling. Eventually, they created a pro/con list, which made it clear that homeschooling was right for them at that time. With the help of CSM and other resources, it continues to be right for the whole family.

"This program is the perfect combination of the co-op mindset and a little more classroom structure to give my kids an opportunity to walk down the halls, raise their hands, wait their turn, and work with other children," said Mudd-Stewart. "It's a buffet of classes taught by professors and professionals with degrees with access to lab equipment and materials, and I can pick and choose the education elements that I want to add to their yearly plan."

Her children have been enrolled at CSM since the first semester that courses were offered, and they are thriving. Turner's gifts have continued to develop; he gravitates towards STEM fields and participates in extra-curricular activities including soccer, swimming, and playing the French horn in the homeschool co-op band. Their younger son, Ian, has also met and exceeded milestones in mathematics and is an advanced reader who loves art, soccer and swimming.

"The CSM homeschool program is good because it's a lot of hands-on stuff," said Turner. "You're always doing something. In the robotics class we are always building stuff, in the arts class we are always painting stuff."

Mudd-Stewart continues to serve on the advisory board for the program.

"The families on that board give me a valuable perspective that allows the program to continue to grow," said Warrick. "I know that we wouldn't be where we are today without them."

"Being a homeschooling parent is a huge part of my identity and I tell anyone who will listen how wonderful homeschooling is, and in every single one of these conversations I talk about the benefits of including CSM's program," Mudd-Stewart added. "CSM is offering something unique that did not exist before. You will find more than curriculum; you will become part of the community that is very special and unique and always growing."

Josh and Zoey Shaw: Being at CSM means being part of a community

Desair Shaw shared that she wasn't always on board with supplementing her children's homeschool curriculum. She and her husband, Erik Shaw, shared that they are on a mission to provide their children with the best possible educational experiences, and the children are on their own missions, as well: Joshua, 6, would like to be a lawyer and eventually the president of the United States – or perhaps a firefighter, and maybe produce music. He is active in their church's children's choir and plays drums and several sports. Zoey, 8, is a gymnast and an artist who wants to be a doctor when she grows up and already "practices" on family members.

When the self-proclaimed protective mom spoke with Warrick about CSM's vision for growing, extending, and expanding the college's homeschool program, she said that Warrick's excitement was contagious. She saw the care and effort that CSM put into the design of each class and knew she had found a place where she would be happy to send her children.

"It is such an awesome program, everyone involved understands the needs and goals of a family dedicated to homeschooling," she said.

Shaw added that the family feels continually supported in their homeschool journey by the community at CSM. In 2021, Warrick was even able to provide the Shaws with a scholarship through the CSM Foundation and the Shaws, in-turn, assisted another family with their tuition. Shaw shared that it's this kind of mutual support between CSM and families that keeps her returning to the program.

"It's one thing to believe in something, but for [CSM] to believe in us enough to invest in our children, was a game changer," she said. "Being here means being part of a community, being connected to something bigger."

"It's a wonderful feeling to be able to provide assistance to our families," said Warrick. "CSM has really gotten behind the idea of supporting our homeschool families in their journey."

During the two years that Josh and Zoey have attended CSM, they have taken classes in subjects ranging from Spanish to Chemistry during both the school year and over the summer. Josh said he loves the "Engineering with Legos" classes. The young students also said they enjoy being on campus, interacting with the teachers, and learning alongside other children. Shaw said she is put at ease by the safety measures in place and that the best part is that her children are excited and engaged at pick-up time.

Next steps for CSM Homeschool Program Warrick said that his goal is to produce "lifelong learners who are going to be affiliated with CSM for the next 10-15 years of their lives."

"Right now, we are creating pathways for families to transition from public schools to the homeschool community," he said. "Eventually, we will be building a pipeline from homeschool to CSM, and beyond."

Registration for fall homeschool classes began on July 12. For more information on CSM's Kids' and Teen College and to explore the class schedule, visit <https://csmid.augusoft.net/info/landing/Homeschool-Courses>.

Gatton Looks Back on More Than 60 Years in the Barber Shop

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

As he walked into his old barbershop on Hollywood Road, John Gatton Sr., moved slowly using his cane.

But he did it with a smile on his face.

"I'm free," he told The County Times, continuing to savor the beginning of his retirement after 64 years on his feet cutting hair and providing shaves to thousands of clients over the years.

The family business, though, known as Gatton's Barber Shop since the 1930s, has been operating for 90 years.

Started by his father in just a tiny out-building in the Sandy Bottom community off of Mervell Dean Road in Hollywood, the business has become a thriving social institution where customers from all over the region, from everyday citizens to political, military and business leaders come for one of the most basic of human services.

"It was just two barber chairs and four waiting chairs," Gatton, 80, said of the family business's beginnings.

Looking out at the four barber chairs in the newer, more modern but still small shop in Hollywood, the place of his birth, his son and daughter John Gatton Jr. and Kimberly Sullivan are continuing the tradition.

"No two days are the same," John Jr. said. "You meet people from all backgrounds... it makes for good conversations."

Being a customer's barber means being there with them through their life; marriages, divorces, graduations and funerals.

While people talk freely to their barber, John Jr. said, some conversations are never repeated.

"They trust you," John Jr. said. "They confide in you."

Sullivan said she had pursued a career in the nursing field but having a family and the loss of one of her father's brothers made her think more about carrying on the family legacy.

"It's an honor to be able to continue the family tradition," Sullivan said. "It's a privilege to have worked with my father."

Gatton said he enjoyed his time cutting hair and forging relationships all those years but the toll on his body is telling.

"I'm going to miss the people, but I'm not going to miss the work," the elder Gatton said, noting his difficulty standing and walking now.

His father and two brothers started and worked in the business, Gatton said and he was just 16 years old and in high school when his life was about to change abruptly.

His father trained himself to be a barber, Gatton said, but he was sent to barber school in Baltimore.

"I was sitting in class and the secretary of the school came to me and said the principal wanted to see me," Gatton said. "I said 'Why does he want to see me? I didn't do anything.'"

He walked down to the office of the old Leonardtown High School, he said, and saw his mother and father standing there with his principal.

His bewilderment increased; his parents told him they had enrolled him in barber school about two years before he was ready to graduate.

It was May of 1959.

"Yeah, I was surprised," Gatton said. "I was only 16 years old."

For a young man who had spent his life in St. Mary's, which had only begun to change from the installation of Patuxent River Naval Air Station, moving to Baltimore and living there with relatives was a huge step.

"It was a big transition for me," Gatton said. "I didn't fit in really well to begin with."

His parents gave him $10 spending money each week; he would spend $2.65 to take a Greyhound bus back home each weekend.

He took 1,200 hours-worth of training to return to work for his father back in St. Mary's; he was happy to be home. "It got used to it [living in Baltimore] but I would not stay there at all," said Gatton.

He would find that he and his father differed on how to do the job.

"He said 'That's not how you do it,'" Gatton said of this father all those years ago. "I said 'It is now.'"

Gatton would go on to cut hair on the navy base for 18 years.

"I brought home $.40 a haircut; it was all on commission," Gatton said. "You had to hustle."

It was enough to live on until he could get the Hollywood Road operation going, he said.

In those years he made a vast number of friends and acquaintances from his work in the barber's chair.

His shop became a clearing house of local information, personal anecdotes, political gossip and machinations and jokes and pranks.

He and his customers enjoy hacking on each other with the kind of good-natured abuse usually reserved for family.

"Everything he told you was a lie," said one customer.

"I told him you were a good man," Gatton responded in kind.

This would go on as more long-time customers approached him to wish him well in his retirement.

During COVID-19 Gatton's business suffered and was mandated to have customers by appointment only.

But, as Sullivan explained, it came to change the way they do business. "Now we can manage our schedules better," she said.

Gatton, who, along with his family members, has been a long-serving member of the Hollywood Volunteer Fire Department would sometimes see his family members go to run calls while he stayed behind to cut hair for customers.

It kept them all busy keeping the family business going.

"You hate to say 'no' to people but you've got to gauge yourself, too," Gatton said. "Lunch time and quitting time was when we were always busiest."

More than a retired barber and a firefighter, Gatton is also a Freemason and Shriner and served on the Maryland Board of Barbers for 31 years, 25 of which were as its head.

"I served under five governors," Gatton said.

Gatton said through all of the people he has served over the years — from everyday customers to high-ranking military and political figures, including members of Congress, everybody had to wait their turn.

"We treat them all the same," Gatton said, adding he has only fond memories of his work.

What did he like the most about the job? "The camaraderie with everybody," Gatton said.

County Approves Charlotte Hall Self Storage

By Guy Leonard
Staff Write

A new, large self-storage operation on Mount Wolf Road is one step closer to becoming a reality after the county planning commission unanimously voted to approve the developer's concept site plan this week.

That plan includes a 24,000 square-foot building in the first phase, according to county planning documents and a smaller 10,724 square-foot building in the second phase.

The project, known as Charlotte Hall Self Storage Mount Wolf Annex, is proposed by Charlotte Hall-based BKJ Investment, LLC, owned by long-time developer John Parlett.

The entire site on Mount Wolf Road is about 2.8 acres, according to county planning documents.

Parlett, during his presentation to the planning commission July 10 in Leonardtown, said he operated another self-storage facility off of Golden Beach Road less than a mile from the proposed site.

The extant facility is 104 units in size.

"We plan to manage this project from our own office and not have personnel in both places," Parlett said.

The current operational facility is in high demand, he said.

"We are continually operating at 99 percent capacity," Parlett said. "We're constantly turning people away."

Despite the size of the proposed project, Parlett said, he called it a "low intensity use."

Parlett said he anticipated a high of 46 vehicle trips per day at the new facility and would be electronically controlled for entrance and egress.

The average, he said, would be 14 vehicle trips per day; the business would be open for 16 hours each day.

The county has started the process of constructing a new traffic circle at Mount Wolf Road and Triangle Drive, Parlett said, to improve traffic flow and the developer for the new Royal Farms and Starbucks at Oaks Road and Route 5 has agreed to install a double left turn to improve northbound traffic on Route 5.

The project would be placed behind the Tractor Supply Store in Charlotte Hall and in proximity to Cedar Point Federal Credit Union.

A driveway coming around Tractor Supply leading to a large to-be-constructed parking lot would separate the two phases of the project.

Cannabis Farm Hearing Continued to the Fall

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

A case before the county Board of Appeals that could decide whether an industrial sized medical cannabis facility in Abell can continue to operate will continue on Oct. 23 after a four-hour hearing the night of July 11 in Leonardtown.

In question is the county's approval of an amended site plan for Seven Point Agro Cultivation Center on Abell Road that allowed for an expanded mound septic system.

The owner of the property, Blue Griz LLC, tried to have the citizens' appeal against their operations there dismissed from before the zoning appeals board in May but failed.

In their argument against dismissing their case, the citizens appellants argue that then-land use director Bill Hunt approved a building permit in 2021 for the facility that would bring in 20 employees to work on 800 medical cannabis plants; but the county subsequently passed zoning laws that restricted such operations in the rural preservation district.

The Commissioners of St. Mary's County did this in response to community uproar about such a large project in an environmentally sensitive area with no public community input.

These new zoning regulations made the cannabis farm a legal, non-conforming use.

But the owner of the facility, Seven Points Agro, owned by Blue Griz, LLC, would soon offer an amended site plan that brought the facility to more than 70 employees tending to 23,000 cannabis plants.

A 50,000 square foot cannabis growing warehouse already exists on the property with potential plans to build another of the same size.

The appellants argue that the amended site plan improperly authorized the expansion of that non-conforming use that exceeds the limits of the zoning ordinance.

The county approved this amended site plan that would increase the intensity of the operations at the cannabis farm in October of 2022, the appellants filed their case against Blue Griz LLC the following month.

"It had the immediate consequence of making the at-that-time under construction grow house a non-conforming use," said Assistant County Attorney John Houser at Tuesday night's meeting. "Under the new ordinance that was adopted — this parcel is located in the rural preservation district (RPD) — and such facilities as this grow house going forward... are not allowed in, among other zones, the rural preservation district." The amendment to the site plan for the facility came after the zoning ordinance approval, Houser said, and appellants argue that the county's approved amendment was "an illegal act" by the land use director.

Opposing counsel began what promises to be an extensive argument regarding the evidence in the case stretching into this autumn.

The attorney for the appellants, Alex Votaw, said the property had been used historically to raise agricultural crops for harvest but had drastically changed in the last few years.

"They all have a common goal," Votaw said of her clients. "To protect and care about their community. "This is not a vendetta against the cannabis warehouse, it's not a petty property dispute; it's a genuine concern... about the health of their families their neighbors and their environment."

The developer's counsel protested Votaw's efforts to lay out a broad environmental and community-based argument against his client and should not be admitted as evidence.

"Here we have a very narrow issue which just deals with a non-conforming use," said attorney Peter Hershey. "It doesn't deal with other aspects of the property."

Votaw said it was key to understand what impacts the continued operation at the site would have on the community. "We think it's really important to understand, on the ground, what is going on," Votaw said.

Appeals board Chair Daniel Ichniowski overruled the objection with more than three hours left to go in the hearing.

Another Hotel Planned for Three Notch Road

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Construction crews have been clear cutting and grading a section of wooded land on Three Notch Road in California for the past several weeks in preparation for a new hotel — of which only the first phase is to be built, according to a ruling from the county planning commission two years ago.

The county’s planning commission initially heard the concept site plan for the Avid Hotel during the COVID-19 pandemic — in December of 2020 but approved the plan in March of 2021.

The commission approved only the first phase of the project, which the developer had proposed for three phases.

The two hotel buildings would encompass 76,076 square feet, while the retail element would take up 11,175 square feet.

The property is located on northbound Three Notch Road between Oakcrest Boulevard and Wildwood Boulevard.

The principal developer of the project Ronak Soni, told the county planning commission more than two years ago in December of 2020 that the project would come in three phases.

The hotel, Soni said, would carry the IHD brand name.

“We already have the license with them,” Soni told board members.

The first to be built would be a four-story hotel which would have approximately 90 rooms, while the second phase would be the retail plaza building.

Included in the retail development, according to the applicant’s presentation, would be a structure containing 10 residential apartments.

“The third phase would be the remaining hotel,” Soni said.

Those two remaining phases have yet to be approved by the planning commission.

The developer estimated that the entire project, if approved, would be built and occupied in about five years.

The project approval was also contingent upon the developer funding improvements to the nearby roadways such as an expanded shoulder on northbound Route 235 in front of the project as well as a 5-foot sidewalk.

Road Work To Close Manor Road

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The county plans to replace a boxed culvert on Manor Road in Chaptico over the Bull Run stream next week, which means a section of the road between Lori Lane and 37252 Manor Road will be closed for 30 days.

“A traffic control/detour plan with signage will be implemented for the duration of the road closure,” a notice from the county government stated.

The installation of the new box culvert is set to begin on or about July 17, according to the county’s Department of Public Works and Transportation.

The problem started years ago when a massive weather event flooded many of the streams in St. Mary’s and knocked out critical roads.

“When [Hurricane] Isaias went through it took out the culvert under the road,” said Jim Gotsch, county public works chief. “We put some pipes under the road... to get the road open again.”

But the pipes don’t pass as much stream water as a proper box culvert does, Gotsch told The County Times, just enough to ensure that the stream continues to flow.

“It’s not hydraulically sufficient,” Gotsch said of the quick fix solution to the August 2020’s destructive wrath.

The new box culvert, though, took time for approvals from the Maryland Department of the Environment, Gotsch said; the county couldn’t begin work on installing it until the spawning season restrictions on streams were lifted.

Gotsch said he was unsure of any fish in the stream which would spawn there that would be affected by the work but the state’s regulations had to be obeyed.

The new box culvert will have one foot of soil placed on top of the grounded section to allow for a natural stream bed through it, he said.

Questions Remain in Firefighter's Death

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Investigators say they are still trying to piece together the events surrounding the early morning fire in Leonardtown last month that led to the death of Patuxent River Naval Air Station Firefighter Brice Trossbach, 25.

Two other firefighters were also injured in the blaze, which caused the entire single family home to collapse.

Trossbach entered the structure at about 4 a.m. June 27 on Deerwood Park Drive, which was almost fully engulfed in flames, to fight the fire but fell through to the basement when the floor under him collapsed.

Deputy Fire Marshal Oliver Alkire, spokesman for the state fire marshal's office, said that initial reports showed that the first firefighters on scene, of whom Trossbach was a part, observed that the structure was being consumed by a heavy blaze. "The reason why they went in...we don't know if they had the information that everyone had evacuated the house," Alkire told The County Times.

The investigation into the actions of Trossbach and other firefighters on the scene that day will be investigated by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) Alkire said, as Trossbach was a federal employee.

He was also a member of the Leonardtown and Bay District volunteer fire departments as well as one of the county's oldest and well-known families.

One county firefighter, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the local volunteers are still dealing with the pain of Trossbach's loss.

"We really want to know what happened," the firefighter said. "And we want to learn from it."

The firefighter said that even if responders know that the occupants of a home had evacuated, they might still execute some kind of entry to attack the fire and knock it down more quickly.

The firefighter said they were anxious to know what caused such a catastrophic structural collapse; they said they had never seen such a collapse in their entire career.

"This in one of those one in 10,000 calls that need to be investigated to find out what happened," the firefighter said. "There's a process.

"It's very complex; there are so many things that go into an investigation like this."

Alkire said state fire marshals are still trying to determine the cause of the fire that claimed Trossbach's life and destroyed the entire single-family home.

"We are considering a lightning strike but they're still considering other causes," said Alkire.

There were thunderstorms reported in the area that night and several witnesses reported hearing a loud bang immediately before noticing the fire start at the house, investigators have reported.
